U.S. Assurances To Israel Detailed

©The New York Times

By BERNARD GWERTZMAN

Washington — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger has assured Israel privately as part of the latest Sinai agreement with Egypt that the United States — within certain limits — would make every effort to be "fully responsive" to Israel's defense, energy and economic needs.

As revealed by a reliable informant Tuesday, the language of this and other "secret" commitments was much less binding on the United States than the Israelis had initially sought.

Many of the key provisions of the unpublished assurances and undertakings were qualified by reference to the need for congressional approval and limits on American resources.

Authorized Leaks Made

The general contents of the unpublished documents, compiled under the heading of a memorandum of understanding between Israel and the United States, as well as in a letter from President Ford to Premier Yitzhak Rabin of Israel have been made known in the Israeli press through authorized leaks.

The Israelis, however, have suggested in their accounts somewhat firmer American commitments than actually seem to be the case. The U.S. promise to be "fully responsive" is qualified on congressional action and American resources.

Also, the Israelis claimed that there was an American commitment to coordinate future diplomatic approaches, particularly at a reconvened Genva conference on the Middle East.

But the language, as divulged by the informant, while saying that the United States would coordinate with Israel on the timing for a Geneva conference, said only that the United States would "seek to concert its position and strategy at the Geneva peace conference with the government of Israel."

Kissinger, at a news conference at the State Department Tuesday, said the unpublished material has been provided to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and an effort would be made to negotiate with Congress so that as much of the unpublished "undertakings" could be made public.

He said "any undertaking by the United States will be made public." He said this would be the "fullest disclosure" ever made of a negotiation, although he suggested that Egyptian assurances to Israel through the United States might remain secret.

Among the Egyptian assurances to Israel are the following:

—Egypt informed the United States that it would make every effort to renew the United Nations emergency force annually as provided for in the agreement, but if a "third state," presumably the Soviet Union, vetoes the renewal in the Security Council, "Egypt undertakes to concert actively" with the United States to get the General Assembly to extend the mandate of the peacekeeping force. If this fails, Egypt agrees to ask the United Nations Truce Supervisory Organization to expand its function.

—The United States has received from Egypt "an expression of its intention to reduce hostile propaganda in its government-controlled media," the Israelis were told.

—Israel was told that the United States was informed that Egypt "intends to avoid active diplomatic efforts to discourage selected other states from resuming diplomatic relations with Israel." This is an allusion to Egypt's aggrement not to block African states from resuming ties broken after the October 1973 war.

The Egyptians also gave assurances to the United States, according to the informant, that they would ease their embargo on dealing with American firms doing business with Israel on a "selective basis." The Israelis had earlier said Egypt was ready to lift the embargo on all American companies, but this does not seem to be the case.

U.S. Pledges To Israel

The significant American commitments or assurances to Israel as made now include the following:

"The United States government will make every effort to be fully responsive within the limits of its resources, congressional authorization and appropriation, on an on-going and long-term basis to Israel's military equipment and other defense requirements, its energy requirements and its economic needs," the informant said the memorandum said. As part of this, the administration will ask Congress for up to $2.5 billion in military and economic aid for this fiscal year.

—In the published agreement, Israel agreed to return the Abu Rudeis oilfields to Egypt, and in return the United States has undertaken to compensate Israel by about $300 million to $350 million yearly for the additional cost of buying oil on the world market.

—The unpublished document also says that if Israel cannot buy on the open market what it needs — a possibility if Iran refuses to sell oil to Israel since Iran is Israel's major supplier — the United States "will promptly make oil available for purchase by Israel" if the United States is not suffering from an oil boycott of its own.

—' If the United States has supply problems," Kissinger told the House International Relations Committee in closed session Tuesday, oil would be sold to Israel on a pro-rated basis depending on American supplies. Israel, however, has a six-month storage capacity now and hopes to expand it to a year with American help.

—The United States agrees with Israel that "the next agreement with Egypt should be a final peace settlement," in effect ruling out another interim accord in the Sinai to match the agreements of January 1974 and the current one.

No Reference To Syria

The informant said he found no reference to negotiations with Syria, although Kissinger said Tuesday the United States would be ready to aid a step-by-step agreement between Israel and Syria.

There are a number of other items, some of which were known already, such as an American agreement to hold "consultations" with Israel in case a third party — meaning the Soviet Union — intervened militarily.

The United States also undertook to find out whether Egypt was willing to agree that ships, aircraft, passengers and crews of either party in distress would be given assistance by the other and would be allowed to continue to their destination.

Kissinger at his news conference was asked about the Soviet criticism of the Sinai agreement, particularly the provisions calling for the stationing of up to 200 civilian technicians in the Sinai passes to man early warning systems.

He said that in the Middle East, he did not believe Soviet and American interests were "incompatible," and that the Sinai agreement was not detrimental to the Soviet Union or "a unilateral advantage" to the United States.

"The significance of the agreement is that it defuses the tensions in the area and if it is implemented properly will open, or can open, a door to general peace in the area," he said.

Little Learned So Far In 12-Year-Old's Death

By GORDON WINTERS
Star Staff Writer

Intensive investigation so far has revealed little about the death of 12-year-old Jacob Surber, Lancaster County Atty. Ron Lahners said Tuesday.

Step-by-step searching of the area near the drainage ditch where the boy's body was found has turned up nothing new, Lahners said.

The results of the autopsy conducted Tuesday also shed little light on how Jacob Surber died, Lahners reported.

Skeleton Undamaged

"We have eliminated a few things He did not die from a blow or a bullet wound or something of that nature that would damage the skeletal structure," Lahners said.

Lahners said that the "soft tissue" of the body was so badly decomposed that the autopsy did not reveal other possible causes of death, such as a stab wound, drowning or suffocation.

Lahners said he hopes that laboratory results from the autopsy, which should be available Wednesday, will enable him to narrow possible causes of death still further.

Don't Know Where

"We don't know whether the boy died there or whether he died somewhere else and was placed there," Lahners said.

Still missing is 13-year-old Jon Simpson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harding Simpson of 2743 Everett. He and the Surber youth were described by friends as inseparable.

About 20 persons, including helicopter observers and a police recruit team, spent the day Tuesday going through the trees, shrubs and weeds around the drainage ditch where the boy was found.

The drainage ditch, which runs roughly east and west along the Union Pacific railroad tracks, feeds into concrete-lined Antelope Creek about one block south of the State Fairgrounds.

Search Broadens

Lahners said the searchers covered the area from 14th to 19th Tuesday. The crew also covered the banks of Salt Creek near 14th and an open field where carnival workers with the State Fair camped near 14th St. and Salt Creek.

Police officers also entered a storm sewer that fed into the drainage ditch where the boy was found, Lahners said

He said the officers went as far as the street drains that fed into the sewer.

Lahners said investigators are also checking reports that the boys were seen together at the Continental Bus Depot in Lincoln and at an ice cream store in Omaha's Old Market shortly after the two disappeared from the State Fair on Aug. 30

Father Showed Pictures

The report that the boys were seen in Omaha was obtained by Larry Surber, of 2205 S. 24th, father of the dead boy, who showed pictures of his son to people in downtown Lincoln.

Lahners reissued a plea that anyone knowing anything of missing Jon Simpson contact police.

Investigators are being sent to Missouri and Arkansas for talks with carnival workers who were in Lincoln for the State Fair, Lahners said.

He said that the midway show split into two main groups after the fair. Other independent shows went to other locations, Lahners said.

Although "We're treating it as a homicide investigation," Lahners Tuesday noted that investigators have not established even that as fact.

"It's difficult to say" if he was murdered, Lahners said. "It could be something else entirely."

Woman Saw Man In Light Green Car

By LIANE GUENTHER

A young Lincoln woman who lives near the area where the body of 12-year-old Jacob Surber was discovered Monday says she is frightened and upset.

Not only is she concerned for the safety of her three, young children, but the young woman is afraid the middle-aged, white man in the late-model, light green sedan may return. That's why she asked to remain unidentified.

She says she saw him three times over the Labor Day weekend and suspects he may have been involved in the Surber youth's death.

The area at about 15th or 16th, between Court and Claremont is a relatively quiet neighborhood for fifty and one-half weeks out of the year.

But during the 10 days of the Nebraska State Fair, hundreds of people drive through, looking for places to park. Residents of the neighborhood are anxious to oblige — for a small fee.

The young woman isn's sure why — maybe, like most of us, she has seen too many detective shows on television — but the man in the light green sedan sticks out in her mind.

She remembers him driving by slowly one day, then speeding down an alley. When she saw him again, he made a big circle out in the vacant lot about a half block from where the body was found and drove away.

Then the following night — probably Labor Day — she saw a car "that looked like the same car" parked alone on the edge of the vacant lot.

Just Sat There

The man just sat in his car for several minutes, she said.

"I never saw him get out but the next time I looked, nobody was in the car. I didn't see him sneak past and go into the fair."

The next time she noticed, the car was gone. She hasn't seen it or him since.

The discovery of the youth's body has changed the quiet, sleepy neighborhood quite a lot.

Volunteers are searching the area for evidence and/or another body. Police have been around, asking questions.

The woman said she won't let her three children play outside now unless she or her father is with them.

Won't Stay Alone

"I'm just all upset about it," she said. "I won't even stay home by myself anymore."

Pam Urbanec, a housewife at 1438 N. 15th, has also become more cautious.

"It scared me when I found out about it.

"I have one little boy I watch very closely now," she said. "When he goes out, I go out . . . This kind of thing doesn't happen every day."

Next door, Emma Reich, an 80-year-old widow, said she plans to keep her doors and windows locked.

"I don't want to lose my life like that," she said.

Mr. and Mrs. George Thiel, at 1406 N. 15th, said they hadn't seen or heard anything unusual, until Monday.

"We saw them searching the weeds over there," Thiel said, nodding toward the railroad tracks. "I wondered what they were looking for. When the paper came out this morning, I found out."

Three Encephalitis Cases Confirmed In Lincoln Area

By GRAICA McANDREW
Star Staff Writer

A spokesman for the Lincoln-Lancaster County Health Department said Tuesday that his office has received reports of three confirmed cases of encephalitis in the Lincoln area.

These incidents of reported encephalitis involved two children and one adult, the spokesman said.

There is evidence, however, that there have been more confirmed cases of encephalitis in the area than the number reported to the health department.

Dr. George J. Wolcott, a Lincoln neurologist, said he and his colleague, Dr. Douglass A Decker Jr., alone have seen nine to 10 cases, although not all of the patients have been from Lincoln.

The first case the two came in contact with was about two weeks ago at the Veterans Administration Hospital, he said, adding that so far the youngest patient has been a 3-year-old child, while the oldest was 75 years old

Noting that there have been no deaths attributed to the illness, Wolcott said, "a number of the patients are not recovering very rapidly and may be left with significant neurological deficits."

Because they usually see patients who have been referred by other physicians, Wolcott added, "by the time they get to us, they're usually in some kind of trouble, such as a coma or else they are severely ill."

Wolcott explained that since there is no medication or antibiotic with which to combat the illness, the only thing that can be done is to let the encephalitis run its course

Health officials also indicated Tuesday that they have not isolated the virus causing the illness, but that they are "in the midst of investigating the cases which have been reported."

Dr Paul Stoesz, director of the Disease Control Division of the State Department of Health said that possible symptoms of encephalitis may include incessant headaches — moderate to severe in nature, a fever and general malaise

Encephalitis Reported

Gering (AP) — The Scotts Bluff County Health Department said Tuesday three cases of encephalitis have been reported in the county in the past three weeks.

Two of the persons infected with the disease, usually carried by mosquitoes and which can be fatal, have been released from a Scottsbluff hospital. The third patient is hopsitalized.

The department said mosquito fogging and spraying has been increased in response to the infections. A spokesman said the danger period should be over in about two weeks after the first frost which should kill many mosquitoes.

Malpractice Insurance Problems Eyed

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Nebraskans are paying the bill for rising medical malpractice insurance premiums both in terms of higher fees and perhaps unneeded services, a legislative committee was told Tuesday.

Physicians said the increase in premium costs are passed on to their patients.

But, more than that, more doctors are practicing what they call "defensive medicine" to protect themselves against possible future lawsuits.

That, the committee was told, means "more drugs, tests, X-rays, referrals and consultations" designed to protect the doctor in his diagnosis.

"Every patient (when one in 13 Nebraska physicians have claims pending) must be viewed as a potential malpractice suit," the doctors told senators in a written review of malpractice problems.

Hospital stays are also sometimes lengthened as a result of the trend toward defensive medicine, they said.

Malpractice insurance costs are "a big stumbling block for new physicians," Dr. James Dunlap of Norfolk, immediate past president of the Nebraska Medical Assn., noted.

Dunlap said he knows of one physician who has left private practice in northeast Nebraska "primarily because of this problem," another who is planning to do likewise, and a third who is thinking about it.

"There is a tremendous explosion of physician concern," he said.

"We want to preserve a climate allowing us to practice medicine," NMA President Dr. Warren Bosley of Grand Island told the committee.

The NMA will present a proposed legislative bill dealing with the problem to the Unicameral next year, he said.

Premium costs vary, but Dr. Dunlap said he paid $2,000 for his insurance in 1974, and would guess that figure matches the cost for most family practitioners in the state.

The average premium for basic coverage has jumped from $215 a year in 1965 to $1,939 in 1974-75, or an increase of 795%.

Claims are rising, along with the amount demanded.

"We are concerned about the continued availability of the insurance as well as the premium cost," Dr. Bosley said.

Sen. John Cavanaugh III of Omaha suggested that the doctors should also deal with possible problems of competency within their profession.

NMA attorney Flavel Wright of Lincoln said proposed legislation would include establishment of a medical commission designed to help "get doctors who are incompetent out of practice."

Sen. Richard Lewis of Holbrook wondered if some restraints might be attached to prospective plaintiffs in malpractice lawsuits to discourage invalid claims.

State Insurance Director Ben Nelson told members of the Legislature's Public Health and Welfare Committee that a study committee appointed by his predecessor is also preparing proposals for senatorial consideration.

Sen. Larry Stoney of Omaha suggested that the Legislature would "like to be sure that Nebraska physicians are not paying California and New York costs" in their premium charges.

While "national trends must be considered," Nelson said, his department will place the most emphasis on Nebraska experience in determining what rates are reasonable for Nebraska physicians.

In addition to the Insurance Department and NMA studies, the Nebraska Bar Assn., also has a committee at work on malpractice problems.

U.S. Assurances To Israel Detailed

By BERNARD GWERTZMAN

Washington — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger has assured Israel privately as part of the latest Sinai agreement with Egypt that the United States — within certain limits — would make every effort to be "fully responsive" to Israel's defense, energy and economic needs.

As revealed by a reliable informant Tuesday, the language of this and other "secret" commitments was much less binding on the United States than the Israelis had initially sought.

Many of the key provisions of the unpublished assurances and undertakings were qualified by reference to the need for congressional approval and limits on American resources.

Authorized Leaks Made

The general contents of the unpublished documents, compiled under the heading of a memorandum of understanding between Israel and the United States, as well as in a letter from President Ford to Premier Yitzhak Rabin of Israel have been made known in the Israeli press through authorized leaks.

The Israelis, however, have suggested in their accounts somewhat firmer American commitments than actually seem to be the case. The U.S. promise to be "fully responsive" is qualified on congressional action and American resources.

Also, the Israelis claimed that there was an American commitment to coordinate future diplomatic approaches, particularly at a reconvened Genva conference on the Middle East.

But the language, as divulged by the informant, while saying that the United States would coordinate with Israel on the timing for a Geneva conference, said only that the United States would "seek to concert its position and strategy at the Geneva peace conference with the government of Israel."

Kissinger, at a news conference at the State Department Tuesday, said the unpublished material has been provided to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and an effort would be made to negotiate with Congress so that as much of the unpublished "undertakings" could be made public.

He said "any undertaking by the United States will be made public." He said this would be the "fullest disclosure" ever made of a negotiation, although he suggested that Egyptian assurances to Israel through the United States might remain secret.

Among the Egyptian assurances to Israel are the following:

—Egypt informed the United States that it would make every effort to renew the United Nations emergency force annually as provided for in the agreement, but if a "third state," presumably the Soviet Union, vetoes the renewal in the Security Council, "Egypt undertakes to concert actively" with the United States to get the General Assembly to extend the mandate of the peacekeeping force. If this fails, Egypt agrees to ask the United Nations Truce Supervisory Organization to expand its function.

—The United States has received from Egypt "an expression of its intention to reduce hostile propaganda in its government-controlled media," the Israelis were told.

—Israel was told that the United States was informed that Egypt "intends to avoid active diplomatic efforts to discourage selected other states from resuming diplomatic relations with Israel." This is an allusion to Egypt's aggrement not to block African states from resuming ties broken after the October 1973 war.

The Egyptians also gave assurances to the United States, according to the informant, that they would ease their embargo on dealing with American firms doing business with Israel on a "selective basis." The Israelis had earlier said Egypt was ready to lift the embargo on all American companies, but this does not seem to be the case.

U.S. Pledges To Israel

The significant American commitments or assurances to Israel as made now include the following:

"The United States government will make every effort to be fully responsive within the limits of its resources, congressional authorization and appropriation, on an on-going and long-term basis to Israel's military equipment and other defense requirements, its energy requirements and its economic needs," the informant said the memorandum said. As part of this, the administration will ask Congress for up to $2.5 billion in military and economic aid for this fiscal year.

—In the published agreement, Israel agreed to return the Abu Rudeis oilfields to Egypt, and in return the United States has undertaken to compensate Israel by about $300 million to $350 million yearly for the additional cost of buying oil on the world market.

—The unpublished document also says that if Israel cannot buy on the open market what it needs — a possibility if Iran refuses to sell oil to Israel since Iran is Israel's major supplier — the United States "will promptly make oil available for purchase by Israel" if the United States is not suffering from an oil boycott of its own.

—"If the United States has supply problems," Kissinger told the House International Relations Committee in closed session Tuesday, oil would be sold to Israel on a pro-rated basis depending on American supplies. Israel, however, has a six-month storage capacity now and hopes to expand it to a year with American help.

—The United States agrees with Israel that "the next agreement with Egypt should be a final peace settlement," in effect ruling out another interim accord in the Sinai to match the agreements of January 1974 and the current one.

No Reference To Syria

The informant said he found no reference to negotiations with Syria, although Kissinger said Tuesday the United States would be ready to aid a step-by-step agreement between Israel and Syria.

There are a number of other items, some of which were known already, such as an American agreement to hold "consultations" with Israel in case a third party — meaning the Soviet Union — intervened militarily.

The United States also undertook to find out whether Egypt was willing to agree that ships, aircraft, passengers and crews of either party in distress would be given assistance by the other and would be allowed to continue to their destination.

Kissinger at his news conference was asked about the Soviet criticism of the Sinai agreement, particularly the provisions calling for the stationing of up to 200 civilian technicians in the Sinai passes to man early warning systems.

He said that in the Middle East, he did not believe Soviet and American interests were "incompatible," and that the Sinai agreement was not detrimental to the Soviet Union or "a unilateral advantage" to the United States.

"The significance of the agreement is that it defuses the tensions in the area and if it is implemented properly will open, or can open, a door to general peace in the area," he said.

Nebraskans are paying the bill for rising medical malpractice insurance premiums both in terms of higher fees and perhaps unneeded services, a legislative committee was told Tuesday.

Physicians said the increase in premium costs are passed on to their patients.

But, more than that, more doctors are practicing what they call "defensive medicine" to protect themselves against possible future lawsuits.

That, the committee was told, means "more drugs, tests, X-rays, referrals and consultations" designed to protect the doctor in his diagnosis.

"Every patient (when one in 13 Nebraska physicians have claims pending) must be viewed as a potential malpractice suit," the doctors told senators in a written review of malpractice problems.

Hospital stays are also sometimes lengthened as a result of the trend toward defensive medicine, they said.

Malpractice insurance costs are "a big stumbling block for new physicians," Dr. James Dunlap of Norfolk, immediate past president of the Nebraska Medical Assn., noted.

Dunlap said he knows of one physician who has left private practice in northeast Nebraska "primarily because of this problem," another who is planning to do likewise, and a third who is thinking about it.

"There is a tremendous explosion of physician concern," he said.

"We want to preserve a climate allowing us to practice medicine," NMA President Dr. Warren Bosley of Grand Island told the committee.

The NMA will present a proposed legislative bill dealing with the problem to the Unicameral next year, he said.

Premium costs vary, but Dr. Dunlap said he paid $2,000 for his insurance in 1974, and would guess that figure matches the cost for most family practitioners in the state.

The average premium for basic coverage has jumped from $215 a year in 1965 to $1,939 in 1974-75, or an increase of 795%.

Claims are rising, along with the amount demanded.

"We are concerned about the continued availability of the insurance as well as the premium cost," Dr. Bosley said.

Sen. John Cavanaugh III of Omaha suggested that the doctors should also deal with possible problems of competency within their profession.

NMA attorney Flavel Wright of Lincoln said proposed legislation would include establishment of a medical commission designed to help "get doctors who are incompetent out of practice."

Sen. Richard Lewis of Holbrook wondered if some restraints might be attached to prospective plaintiffs in malpractice lawsuits to discourage invalid claims.

State Insurance Director Ben Nelson told members of the Legislature's Public Health and Welfare Committee that a study committee appointed by his predecessor is also preparing proposals for senatorial consideration.

Sen. Larry Stoney of Omaha suggested that the Legislature would "like to be sure that Nebraska physicians are not paying California and New York costs" in their premium charges.

While "national trends must be considered," Nelson said, his department will place the most emphasis on Nebraska experience in determining what rates are reasonable for Nebraska physicians.

In addition to the Insurance Department and NMA studies, the Nebraska Bar Assn., also has a committee at work on malpractice problems.

Grain Deal Struck

©The New York Times

Washington — The White House announced Tuesday a temporary end to the labor dispute that had threatened to disrupt massive shipments of American grain to the Soviet Union.

Union leaders agreed to resume for one month loading grain voluntarily on ships bound for the Soviet Union.

In return, President Ford promised to try to arrange new, long-term purchasing and shipping agreements with the Soviet Union and to extend the present moratorium of new sales of grain to Moscow until the middle of October.

The agreement between the administration and labor leaders was announced after Ford and Secretary of Labor John T. Dunlop met at the White House with George Meany, president of the AFL-CIO, Thomas W. Gleason, president of the International Longshoremen's Association, and other union officials.

Ford said in a statement issued by the White House that he was immediately sending representatives to Moscow in an effort to negotiate "a longer-term and more certain purchase understanding with the Soviet Union, providing among other features, for certain minimum purchase" of grain.

The President also said he was establishing a food committee in his office to coordinate the developments.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said at a news conference that "one of the factors that might be considered" in the negotiations was a long-term exchange of American grain for Russian oil.

Ford said he hopes the negotiations could be completed within a month.

Albert Zack, a spokesman for Meany, emphasized that an end to the boycott by the longshoremen was temporary and said, "after one month, we are going to reassess our position and so is the President."

Zack said the prospects of a long-term purchasing agreement and the decision to set up a central food board to coordinate the interests of many departments and agencies had led Meany to believe that arrangements might be worked out that would protect consumers from higher prices caused by the grain sales to Moscow.

The Russians have bought 9.8 million tons of grain and have indicated that they will be in the market for much more.

On Aug. 18, however, the maritime unions of the AFL-CIO called a boycott against the shipments, demanding government actions to guard against rising food prices and to protect U.S. shipping interests.

Senate Opposes Feeding Cattle DES

Washington (UPI) — The Senate Tuesday approved legislation to terminate use of the drug DES in cattle feeding until scientific studies on its cancer-causing potential prove it safe for human consumption.

The bill, which also would limit the use of DES as a "morning after" contraceptive to rape, incest and other medical emergencies, was approved 61 to 29 and sent to the House.

DES is the commonly known abbreviation for diethylstilbestrol, used as a growth stimulant in cattle.

On a 54-35 vote, the Senate approved a compromise amendment by Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., to suspend use of DES in cattle feed until the secretary of health, education and welfare determines the drug is "safe and presents no scientific health hazard and does not contribute unreasonably to man's carcinogenic burden."

Sen. Carl Curtis, R-Neb., and other cattle-state lawmakers argued that prohibiting DES would cost each American $4 to $5 more each year in higher beef prices. DES saves an estimated 81 pounds of feed for every 100 pounds of weight gain in cattle, and the American National Cattleman's Association says the total feed saving is about 7.7 billion pounds.

Curtis and Sen. Roman Hruska, R-Neb., both voted against Hart's amendment.

Grain Officials Bend To Industry

©The New York Times

Washington — Federal officials responsible for the integrity of American grain shipments have frequently yielded to industry pressures and ordered unjustified upgrading of quality ratings for export shipments, according to government officials.

A pattern, surviving at least until late last year, of actions by federal aides favoring the industry, has emerged from interviews with a number of officials and former officials of the Grain Division of the Agriculture Department.

Such a pattern had previously been ascribed publicly only to private inspectors licensed by the department, who have been among the targets of a spreading investigation into alleged corruption in the grain export trade. That investigation has resulted thus far in 57 indictments in New Orleans and Houston.

"It was falsification in plain black and white," a reporter was told by a federal inspector who wrote in a protest on a shiploading document that orders originating in Washington had required him to change his grade findings.

"It distresses me to hear such allegations," said David R. Galliart, recently promoted from deputy director of the Grain Division to director, "but I can't deny that the division has gotten a reputation of bending to the pressure of the industry — but that's being stopped."

The reported actions by federal officials, each involving large quantities of grain, resulted in substantial monetary benefits for the shippers involved and victimized the buyers.

The former chief of the Grain Division's inspection branch, W. T. Wisbeck, who retired late last year, acknowledged he had made decisions to change the findings of field inspections three or four times a year. Officials and former officials in local and regional field offices said decisions made in Washington overrruling the findings of their own inspectors and supervisors in various ports had occurred far more often than Wisbeck indicated.

Bank Losses Jump

Los Angeles — Annual losses by American banks from frauds and embezzlements have jumped more than fivefold in the last six years. Emergency Plan Okayed

Albany—Gov. Hugh L. Carey signed into law the emergency plan to hold off default in New York City through a $2.3 billion cash infusion and a state-mandated restructuring of the city's fiscal management. All major state officials called the complex measure highly risky but the only immediate hope for containing the city's crisis. It was designed by the Municipal Assistance Corp., the state agency created to sell bonds for the city, which had found investors cold and demanding dramatic evidence that city officials would be forced to cut back severely.

New Contract Given

School Attendance Rises

By The Associated Press

Classroom attendance was up and there were no major incidents of violence Tuesday as court-ordered public school integration continued in Boston and Louisville, Ky., under the watchful eyes of police and National Guardsmen.

In Louisville, Jefferson County school attendance climbed as National Guardsmen and police escorted pupils to and from school for the second day.

There was no recurrence of the violence and demonstrations that erupted in Louisville over the weekend and caused Guardsmen to be called in by local officials. One firebomb was thrown through a school window Monday night, but it did not ignite.

Scattered reports showed attendance climbed from 9,049 to 12,428 at nine Louisville area schools Tuesday, including six in the south and southwestern parts of the county, where violence had occurred.

Officials said 93 teachers, nine more than the previous day, were absent Tuesday, but said they attributed it to illness. On Monday, officials had said teachers' absences were "higher than normal."

There were some transportation snarls and 64 drivers failed to report, compared with 95 the previous day out of a total of 577.

Police said two pupils were taken into custody after a driver reported seeing a gun passed between them. No real gun was found, but two toy guns were confiscated.

The Louisville desegregation program provides for busing 22,600 pupils. The Jefferson County system, 12th largest in the nation, had approximately 118,000 pupils in the combined city-county area, about 20 per cent of them black.

School attendance was up in Boston and there was no serious incident by the time schools closed. There were about a half-dozen arrests for disorderly conduct and police reported some rock and bottle throwing near the Charlestown high school.

In Charlestown, a tough Irish section of Boston where schools have been virtually all white, about 300 mothers and teen-age girls marched through the streets to protest busing.

When they neared Charlestown High School, a wall of police officers blocked their path. The women sat in the street and recited the Lord's Prayer until police finally allowed them to march on sidewalks about a block from the school.

Meanwhile, officials said the birthplace of President John F. Kennedy was apparently firebombed Monday night. Antibusing slogans had been scrawled on the sidewalk in front of the building, a historical landmark which sustained damage estimated at $25,000 to $75,000.

Also on Monday night, a policeman was grazed by a dart in South Boston, another neighborhood which was the center of antibusing sentiment last year. Officials said they also had been fired on in Charlestown and patrolmen would get flak jackets for protection.

Under last year's desegregation plan, 17,000 children were bused, compared to 26,000 this year. Of the school system's 75,000 pupils, 50% are white, 35% black and 15% Hispanic and other minorities.

School officials reported overall school attendance Tuesday at 64.9% of projected enrollments. On Monday, officials reported attendance at 59.2%. Officials said about 80% attendance is normal for opening days of the school year.

In another development, Archbishop Humberto Meideros said Roman Catholic schools which enroll white students seeking a haven from public school desegregation will face "church discipline."

House Votes To Undo Veto Of Education Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Tuesday voted overwhelmingly to override President Ford's veto of a $7.9 billion education bill, a move expected to be duplicated by the Senate Wednesday.

The House vote was 379 to 41. Only 36 Republicans and five Democrats voted against the measure Ford described as inflationary, budget-busting and "part of the trend over the past several years — a little more for every program."

However, Rep. Brock Adams, D-Wash., chairman of the House Budget Committee, said the measure was well within the spending limits that Congress established earlier this year.

For this fiscal year, which ends June 30, 1976, the bill appropriates $4.9 billion. This is $1.1 billion more than Ford recommended but $400 million below the target set by congressional budget committees.

The bill would appropriate $2.05 billion for elementary and secondary programs for the disadvantaged, compared to the President's budget request of $1.9 billion.

The Congress also voted $680 million for the popular "impact aid" program, which subsidizes schools that enroll large numbers of children whose parents reside on tax-exempt military bases or federal lands.

Nebraskans Vote To Override Veto

Washington (AP) — Nebraska's Republican Reps. Charles Thone, Virginia Smith and John McCollister voted with the House majority Tuesday as it overrode the veto of the education appropriation.

For this fiscal year, which ends June 30, 1976, the bill appropriates $4.9 billion. This is $1.1 billion more than Ford recommended but $400 million below the target set by congressional budget committees.

The bill would appropriate $2.05 billion for elementary and secondary programs for the disadvantaged, compared to the President's budget request of $1.9 billion.

The Congress also voted $680 million for the popular "impact aid" program, which subsidizes schools that enroll large numbers of children whose parents reside on tax-exempt military bases or federal lands.

Ford Expected To Win Showdown On Oil Veto

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford finally issued his long-expected veto of extending oil price controls Tuesday, sending the dispute back to Congress for a showdown vote that Ford is expected to win.

The collision between Ford and Congress over oil prices is scheduled for Wednesday afternoon as the Senate attempts to override his veto.

Federal Energy Administrator Frank G. Zarb said he thinks Congress will sustain the President's action by a close vote. Key Democrats have also said they expect to fail in the override attempt.

If the veto is not overridden, then Congress faces the choice of approving a gradual removal of controls, as proposed by the President, or accepting the sudden, complete decontrol which took effect Sept. 1, and which would allow swift price hikes.

The veto had been expected for more than a month, and Ford said he was acting in order to nudge Congress into action rather than allow matters to slide into the 1976 election year.

"I am well aware of the reluctance of members of Congress to face up to such a difficult problem just as an election campaign is getting underway," Ford said.

Zarb has estimated that removal of the controls would increase the cost of gasoline six or seven cents per gallon. But he said this could be cut back to an increase of about three cents a gallon by removal of import fees previously imposed by the President. In fact, the fees may be removed anyway, as they have been ruled illegal by a federal court. The White House is appealing.

The controls in dispute hold the price of about 60% of the oil produced in the United States to $5.25 per barrel. The rest of American-produced oil, and that imported from other nations, costs about $13.50 a barrel, the level to which all prices could rise if prices were freed.

Ford has sought removal of price controls as part of his program to conserve energy by raising the price and thus reducing usage.

However, prior to issuing the veto he offered to accept a delay of 45 days in removing controls if, during that time, Congress would approve a program to gradually phase out controls.

Ford noted that the cost of imported oil to the United States has increased from just over $3 billion a year to more than $25 billion.

He said that decontrol would curtail use, thus lowering the amount to be imported, and would also increase the emphasis on domestic production, saving American jobs and protecting the nation's future economic stability.

Ford has also proposed a windfall profits tax to keep the oil companies from making huge profits from increased oil prices.

The Congressional Budget Office has estimated that sudden decontrol of oil prices might increase consumer prices by almost 2% by the end of 1977 and increase unemployment by about 0.6% — some 600,000 jobs.

Similar conclusions were reached by Data Resources, Inc., a private consulting firm.

And the Library of Congress issued a study estimating that oil decontrol would cost the economy an extra $72 billion over the next five years.

But Zarb disputed all of these estimates and said that both his Federal Energy Administration and the Council of Economic Advisers disagreed with the methods and assumptions used in reaching them.

The administration has estimated that decontrol might increase the consumer price index only about 0.8% and increase unemployment by about 100,000 workers by 1977.

At the same time, the FEA estimated the increased domestic oil prices would cut demand for oil by about 480,000 barrels per day and would increase domestic production by about 200,000 barrels a day so that a total of some 680,000 barrels daily could be eliminated from oil imports which now run to about 6 million barrels a day.

Woman Says Sloppy Look On Way Out

(c) Chicago Sun-Times

College women are taking an interest in makeup again, says a West Coast cosmetics expert. According to her, pallid college women are a dying breed.

"College girls are more aware of makeup today because the sloppy look on campus is easing out," said Georglyn Hunter.

"Today's coeds are more on the go and more individualistic. They just got tired of looking like each other, and they are taking better care of themselves."

Mrs. Hunter is on the staff of the College of Makeup Artistry, part of the Merle Norman organization. She travels around the country sharing advanced makeup techniques with directors of the cosmetic firm's 2,700 beauty studios.

Now The Captain Sails A Desk

Port Canaveral, Fla. (UPI) — Anchors were aweigh and jaws agape as the nuclear submarine USS Finback put to sea July 10 with go-go dancer Cat Futch gyrating topless on the big fin under the conning tower.

The crew was all smiles, but the skipper who permitted it, 41-year-old Cmdr. Connelly D. Stevenson, is now navigating a desk at Atlantic Fleet headquarters in Norfolk, the Pentagon confirmed Tuesday.

"I've never seen such a bunch of smiling men go out to sea," recalls Miss Futch, who now stands ready to do what she can to help Stevenson get back his command.

Stevenson, who had skippered the Finback for the past three years, also has the backing of another female — his wife. Mrs. Stevenson said her husband has retained a naval attorney and is appealing through the Navy's judicial system to be reinstated as skipper of the nuclear sub.

"He allowed the go-go dancer at the request of his crew for the extra work they did," Mrs. Patricia Stevenson said. "It seemed to be a perfectly innocent form of entertainment. When my husband told me, I wasn't upset, I thought it was funny."

When reports of Miss Futch's "patriotic" performance filtered back to the Navy's brass about three weeks after the Finback left port, they ordered the submarine to surface and head directly for Norfolk, where they relieved Stevenson of his command.

Stevenson has refused to discuss the incident, but Miss Futch, who measures 34-23-35, is happy to talk about it.

'I really feel bad about it because he was really great guy and all he wanted was to make his men happy because he was with them year round," said Miss Futch, who is now appearing at the "Evil People Lounge" in Fort Pierce.

"If there was anything I could do to get his command back I would do it," she said, adding that she only agreed to perform "for patriotic reasons."

She said the idea of her dancing aboard the submarine cropped up while she was joking with some sailors from the Finback at a nearby night club where she was appearing at the time.

The more the idea was discussed, the more merit it seemed to have, so at dawn July 10, just before the ship was to leave port, she boarded the submarine and by 7 a.m. she was into her act on the big fin, with music being piped over the loudspeaker system.

Miss Futch said she "only danced for about 10 minutes" before catching the pilot boat back to shore.

"It really boosted the men's morale," she recalled, "it didn't hurt them or me."

Miss Fromme Obtained Gun From Retired Draftsman

Sacramento, Calif. (UPI) — A retired draftsman described as a "sugar daddy" of the Manson family girls was identified Tuesday as the owner of the gun used by Lynette "Squeaky" Fromme in the attempted assassination of President Ford last Friday.

Authorities said she obtained the pistol from Harold "Zeke" Boro, 65, who worked as a civilian engineering draftsman at McClellan Air Force Base for 32 years.

U.S. Atty. Dwayne Keyes confirmed Boro's identity, but refused to elaborate on his relationship with Miss Fromme, 26, other than to say they were friends. Keyes said no charges against Boro were contemplated.

However, Boro was "a sugar daddy to those people, probably a source of their money," said a state government source familiar with the remnants of the group of men and women who joined with convicted mass murderer Charles Manson in a drug and sex cult which culminated in the 1969 Sharon Tate-La Bianca murders in Los Angeles.

"We can't understand it. He was always such a quiet man," said Mrs. Eugene Boro, whose husband is Harold's uncle. She said her 83-year-old husband was so upset about the disclosure "he went out to take a walk."

Boro is expected to testify before a federal grand jury which will hear the government's case against Miss Fromme Wednesday.

Pam Cooper, daughter of Boro's former landlady, said Miss Fromme visited him on at least three occasions and he loaned his Cadillac to her and later apparently purchased a red 1973 Volkswagen for her after she wrecked the Cadillac.

Boro described the .45-caliber automatic pistol as a "World War II keepsake," Miss Cooper said.

Viking Leaps Toward Mars After Good Luck Ceremonies

Cape Canaveral, Fla. (UPI) — A second Viking vaulted into a gray sky Tuesday to chase its mate 505 million miles through space in a year-long search for life on Mars.

The oft-delayed voyage of the backup spaceship on the excursion to the red planet went off on schedule at 1:39 p.m. CDT after launch officials danced to Indian tom toms on the beach the night before and buried a knife in the sand to ward off evil spirits.

Viking 2 was 4.8 million miles behind the lead Viking spacecraft, which was launched on Aug. 20 and is programmed to lane at Chryse, Mars, on July 4, 1976, to kick off the nation's bicentennial celebration.

Thunder rolled and lightning flashed across the bleak swampland of the nation's spaceport in advance of the launch, but the rocket lifted off right on time, climbing on orange flame through the dark clouds hanging overhead.

Scientists, plagued by several false starts of the $1 billion expedition, relented to local custom and watched as Air Force officials donned Indian headdresses on the sands of Coca Beach Monday night to try to drum up good luck for the Titan Centaur launch rocket.

In a ceremony which began when lightning storms started threatening the launch, a group of Air Force officers buried a table knife, taken from a local restaurant 10 years ago. The knife, now mounted on a plaque, is supposed to direct lightning away from the launch pad.

Whether or not the ceremony helped, the second mini lab was on its way to Mars. The planet was 92.1 million miles away at launch time, but Viking 2 will travel 505 million looping miles before it lands at Cydonia, a hazy region on the southernmost edge of Mars' north polar hood, exactly a year from now.

"Everything is going smoothly," Cape Canaveral mission control announced as the spacecraft swung into a brief orbit while being put into position for its route to Mars. "All continues to go well."

Scientists differed on chances of the Viking lab finding evidence of past, present or future life on Mars. One said chances are 1 in 50. Another said it was a tossup.

James Martin, the Viking project manager, said, "I think the probabilities are reasonably high that both landers will settle down on Mars in working condition."

Both spacecraft will split off into two parts when they reach a Martian orbit. An orbiter will circle the planet, shooting pictures and relaying radio messages while a lander will plop down to the surface.

In conducting some 13 different experiments, the landers will scoop up Martian dirt and test it in built-in laboratories, transmit pictures, and relay information about the planet's atmosphere and weather.

Questions and answers about new Freedent® chewing gum

Q. What is special about Freedent gum?

A. Freedent is the only gum to be specially formulated so it will not stick to most dental work.

Q. How serious is this problem?

A. The Wrigley Company has received many letters from consumers who had the problem. People all over the world said they were very anxious to get a product they could chew. That's why Wrigley's developed Freedent chewing gum.

Q. How many people have the type of dental work that may cause sticking problems?

A. Over 30 million people in the U.S. alone.

Q. What exactly causes the sticking?

A. The surfaces of the synthetic materials used in the manufacture of caps, bridges, full dentures and other dental work do not retain moisture; they become almost dry instantly. So ordinary gum sticks. The Freedent gum formula overcomes this problem.

Q. Does Freedent taste good?

A. Freedent has a delicious mint flavor. The formula has no effect on the taste quality, so even people without a sticking problem can enjoy chewing Freedent gum.

Q. Where has Freedent been tried, and how well did it work?

A. Freedent has become one of the most popular brands in Scotland where the Wrigley Company first introduced it last year. Consumer reports there continue to show wide satisfaction with the new gum and to confirm its non-sticking properties in actual use.

Q. Did Freedent work for everyone?

A. During a five-month test, only one person reported that Freedent adhered to a denture. (It turned out that medication for arthritis had roughed this persons's acrylic denture and caused the problem.)

Q. Has Freedent been used in the U.S. by people with a sticking problem?

A. Yes The Wrigley Company introduced Freedent early this year in nine western states and the response has been most enthusiastic. People have written letters praising Freedent for its non-stick formula and for its flavor. Rising sales of Freedent and consumer surveys also show that Americans want and like this new gum.

Q. Is Freedent now available everywhere in the U.S.?

A. The gradual introduction of Freedent into chewing gum displays across the country will be complete by this fall. Each bright blue pack of Freedent contains five sticks and costs 15¢

"New Freedent® gum won't stick to my dental work."

"I had to give up chewing ordinary gum because of the sticking problem. But Freedent, the new gum from Wrigley's, is specially formulated not to stick to most dental work. So I'm free to enjoy chewing again. And I like the fresh mint flavor of Freedent. Everyone does."

Try some yourself. New Freedent in the bright blue pack. You'll like it.

Ford Expected To Win Showdown On Oil Veto

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford finally issued his long-expected veto of extending oil price controls Tuesday, sending the dispute back to Congress for a showdown vote that Ford is expected to win.

The collision between Ford and Congress over oil prices is scheduled for Wednesday afternoon as the Senate attempts to override his veto.

Federal Energy Administrator Frank G. Zarb said he thinks Congress will sustain the President's action by a close vote. Key Democrats have also said they expect to fail in the override attempt.

If the veto is not overridden, then Congress faces the choice of approving a gradual removal of controls, as proposed by the President, or accepting the sudden, complete decontrol which took effect Sept. 1, and which would allow swift price hikes.

The veto had been expected for more than a month, and Ford said he was acting in order to nudge Congress into action rather than allow matters to slide into the 1976 election year.

"I am well aware of the reluctance of members of Congress to face up to such a difficult problem just as an election campaign is getting underway," Ford said.

Zarb has estimated that removal of the controls would increase the cost of gasoline six or seven cents per gallon. But he said this could be cut back to an increase of about three cents a gallon by removal of import fees previously imposed by the President. In fact, the fees may be removed anyway, as they have been ruled illegal by a federal court. The White House is appealing.

The controls in dispute hold the price of about 60% of the oil produced in the United States to $5.25 per barrel. The rest of American-produced oil, and that imported from other nations, costs about $13.50 a barrel, the level to which all prices could rise if prices were freed.

Ford has sought removal of price controls as part of his program to conserve energy by raising the price and thus reducing usage.

The administration has estimated that decontrol might increase the consumer price index only about 0.8% and increase unemployment by about 100,000 workers by 1977.

At the same time, the FEA estimated the increased domestic oil prices would cut demand for oil by about 480,000 barrels per day and would increase domestic production by about 200,000 barrels a day so that a total of some 680,000 barrels daily could be eliminated from oil imports which now run to about 6 million barrels a day.

A Time Of Trial

Some of the best of Lincoln was exhibited in the recent controversy about the selection of the city's next police chief.

Some of the worst was exhibited, too, but it is better to dwell on the positive.

What should be remembered:

— Mayor Helen Boosalis' courage and determination to search for a person whom she would consider the best police chief she could find, regardless of political pressure. It was altogether a gutsy performance, not calculated to win her a whole bunch of new friends.

— The Lincoln City Council majority vote to sustain and confirm the mayor's nomination in a firestorm of controversy. The four council members apparently were not satisfied to rest on past laurels. They realized that a good police department can be made better. All the votes were crucial. Council Chairman Max Denney, who might have made another choice had he been mayor, but who recognized the executive's right of appointment of competent nominees, cast a surpassingly crucial vote.

— The good, hard work of the citizen's selection committee, which unanimously recommended the appointment of new Lincoln Police Chief George K. Hansen. It was not an easy chore. The members have to live with themselves and their neighbors. The entire community owes them a debt of gratitude. When passions subside, it will be remembered, hopefully, that they performed a lasting service to their city.

— The appearance at the City Council hearing of Mrs. Fern Adams, surely disappointed that her husband Dale Adams was not chosen as permanent police chief. But Mrs. Adams asked that the selection be "worked out so that there is no animosity anywhere and so that there can be peace." That was gallantry and Lincoln at its best.

Tradition, loyalty, friendship, suspicion, apprehension, manipulation, politics, courage, professionalism, municipal pride . . . the factors and feelings ran the gamut. It is fervently hoped that Mrs. Adams' plea for community peace will be fulfilled.

As for the Lincoln Police Department, the men and women who are doing their jobs well will adjust to new leadership. There is every reason to place faith in the judgment of the selection committee and Mrs. Boosalis and the council majority. But Chief Hansen, a native Nebraskan but nevertheless a stranger to the peculiar passions his appointment has aroused, will need the support of all of Lincoln to make it work. Let's give him a chance.

Hold That Tiger . . . Please!

Indeed, it appears as if Tony Galbreath is faster than a speeding bullet, more powerful than a locomotive. He could leap the Confederacy's rock-hard line with a single bound. And Missouri's defense isn't all that tacky, either. Holding Alabama to seven points. Ouch!

It was glorious to see the Big Eight's representative to ABC Sports serve up another heaping platter of humility to the Bear.

But the stunning performance of Missouri on national television Monday night poses a very serious problem to Nebraskans. It is not as important as drought or encephalitis, but more interesting and emotional.

The Columbians have now beaten the Cornhuskers twice in a row: that disgraceful theft of a game on their home field two years ago, of which they should be ashamed, and last year, when Missouri played four quarters of football in Lincoln and Nebraska played three. Problem is, Missouri is much better this year.

If one was brought up in a family that loves football, one has learned to respect and fear Missouri. Even in a down year, the Tigers play tough. And if you manage to beat them 62-0, they carry a grudge for years. It's almost enough to make one apologize.

We must wake up. The trophies are gathering dust. Jerry Tagge just got his walking papers from Green Bay. "We're Number Seven" just doesn't have the same jolly ring.

We must also be realistic. Missouri is only outtasight. Oklahoma is dynamite. Thus we offer the proposition that it is more important (and more attainable) to beat Missouri this year.

Yeah . . . "Beat Missouri."

"BEAT MISSOURI!"

Time was, in the early Seventies, when Missouri only had a better band and higher faculty salaries.

Schools Vs. Education

NEW YORK — By the age of six the average child will have completed the basic American education and be ready to enter school. If the child has been attentive in these pre-school years, he or she will already have mastered many skills.

From television, the child will have learned how to pick a lock, commit a fairly elaborate bank holdup, prevent wetness all day long, get the laundry twice as white and kill people with a variety of sophisticated armaments.

From watching his parents, the child, in many cases, will already know how to smoke, how much soda to mix with whisky, what kind of language to use when angry, and how to violate the speed laws without being caught.

At this stage, the child is ready for the second stage of education which occurs in school. There, a variety of lessons may be learned in the very first days.

The teacher may illustrate the economic importance of belonging to a strong union by closing down the school before the child arrives. Fathers and mothers may demonstrate to the child the social cohesion that can be built on shared hatred by demonstrating their dislike for children whose pigmentation displeases them. In the later event, the child may receive visual instruction in techniques of stoning buses, cracking skulls with a night stick, and subduing mobs with tear-gas. Formal education has begun.

During formal education, the child learns that life is for testing. This stage lasts 12 years, a period during which the child learns that success comes from telling testers what they want to hear.

Early in this stage, the child learns that he is either dumb or smart. If the teacher puts intelligent demands upon the child, the child learns he is smart. If the teacher expects little of the child, the child learns he is dumb and soon quits bothering to tell the testers what they want to hear.

At this point, education becomes more subtle. The child taught by school that he is dumb observes that neither he, she, nor any of the many children who are even dumber ever failed to be promoted to the next grade. From this, the child learns that while everybody talks a lot about the virtue of being smart, there is very little incentive to stop being dumb.

What is the point of school, besides attendance? The child wonders. As the end of the first formal stage of education approaches, school answers this question. The point is to equip the child to enter college.

Children who have been taught that they are smart have no difficulty. They have been happily telling testers what they want to hear for 12 years. Being artists at telling testers what they want to hear, they are admitted to college joyously, where they promptly learn that they are the hope of America.

Children whose education has been limited to adjusting themselves to their schools' low estimates of them are admitted to less joyous colleges which, in some cases, may teach them to read.

At this stage of education, a fresh question arises for everyone. If the point of lower education was to get into college, what is the point of college? The answer is soon learned. The point of college is to prepare the student — no longer a child now — to get into graduate school. In college, the student learns that it is no longer enough simply to tell the testers what they want to hear. Many are tested for graduate school; few are admitted.

Those excluded may be denied valuable certificates to prosper in medicine, at the bar, in the corporate boardroom. The student learns that the race is to the cunning and, often, alas, to the unprincipled.

Thus, the student learns the importance of destroying competitors and emerges richly prepared to play his role in the great simmering melodrama of American life.

Afterward, the former student's destiny fulfilled, his life rich with Oriental carpets, rare porcelain, and full bank accounts, he may one day find himself with the leisure and the inclination to open a book; and, with curious mind, start to become educated.

Near-Miss For Ford And Country

NEW YORK — Mrs. Gerald Ford may be able to say courageously that, in the personal sense, the possibility of an assassination is just something a president's family has "to live with." In the more general sense, however, the nation can hardly take the same fatalistic attitude — particularly a nation that in less than a decade has seen a president assassinated, a leading presidential candidate assassinated, a major presidential candidate paralyzed for life after an assassination attempt, and a great racial and political leader assassinated.

"STOP ME IF YOU'VE HEARD THIS 'TWO-GUN' THEORY BEFORE..."

Looked at that way — even without any conspiratorial inferences — it is obvious that modern American history is too nearly being dictated by murder. No one will ever know, for only one example, whether the Vietnam war would have developed the way it did had it not been for the assassination of John Kennedy; but it can be said with some certainty that Lyndon Johnson could not have become president except by succession from the vice presidency.

Even the incident involving Ford — although it cannot as yet certainly be called an assassination attempt — was near enough to the real thing to have its possible effect on the 1976 campaign. That is because it is now less likely than ever that Edward Kennedy will be a candidate; and if he does become a candidate, it is more likely that this last of the Kennedy brothers will become an assassin's target. There seems little question but that one of these incidents, its echoes playing on unstable minds, leads to another.

But what is to be done? The Ford incident reminds us in at least two ways that the problem is difficult indeed. For one thing, the gun involved turns out to be an Army surplus weapon sold into civilian hands in 1913 and with no known criminal history since then.

Here is a weapon more than 60 years old, therefore, in still good working order. That only dimly suggests how many handguns are available in this country today; hundreds of thousands of new ones go into circulation every year and there is no practical limit on their "useful" life. Most are not under any kind of registration, only a small percentage have a traceable criminal history and short of mass confiscation — a political impossibility in a nation so dominated by fear and macho — there is not much to be done about them.

But if the supply of weapons is ample, the supply of potential assassins may be even greater. It is not easy to predict criminal behavior by previously law-abiding people, nor to know when mental or emotional instability may produce sudden violence; and those who find evidence of conspiracies in recent assassinations would add that it is not easy to detect or prevent well-planned crimes.

The Secret Service, for example, keeps extensive files on persons who are known to have threatened a president's life, by mail or otherwise, and on others who can be reasonably considered a threat. There is simply no way, however, to keep tabs on all potential assassins by keeping tabs on those who have made some overt move.

That the Secret Service did not have in its files a woman known to have been under the strange influence of Charles Manson, known to have been deeply alienated from American society and middle-class life, known to be living in Sacramento, known to have been charged once with murder, as well as convicted of some lesser crimes — that such a woman was not under surveillance when Ford was exposed to a crowd in Sacramento may well have been a serious oversight by the Secret Service. But even the most comprehensive efforts to identify threats to the President's life will almost certainly remain inadequate to the sheer magnitude of the problem.

Before these twin problems — the supply of guns and the supply of people willing to use them — the difficulty of affording anything like certain protection for American presidents seems nearly insurmountable. It can be argued that presidents ought to stay out of crowds! But even as things are, most of them become too isolated and remote from the people and their real problems. Something certainly ought to be done about gun control but if even after his near miss, Ford himself is not willing to recommend strong measures, the political problem is apparent.

As for potential assassins, the Secret Service certainly should have all the money and manpower needed to identify and keep up with the whereabouts of any person who might reasonably be considered a threat — but only under careful congressional delineation of the extent to which agents can go in keeping such persons under necessary surveillance because they might commit a crime.

Finally, further congressional consideration should be given to the 25th Amendment and its provisions for the presidential succession. If the gun aimed at Ford last week had been fired, Nelson Rockefeller — appointed vice president by a man appointed vice president by a president later discredited — would have been president of the United States with congressional assent but not a shred of public sanction. That is one aspect of a painful dilemma — maybe the only one — for which a sensible solution ought to be possible.

Serious Suggestions

Lincoln, Neb.

In The Star's Friday morning coverage of the Sept. 4 Goals & Policies meeting, it was stated that I "facetiously" suggested that car-pooling be organized for members of the committee attending G&P meetings.

I would like to state that the suggestion for some energy-conserving means of traveling to the meetings was seriously made, and I hope the report of our committee will be seriously considered by members of G&P.

In my mind, the need to conserve energy and particularly petroleum fuels is very real and worthy of the serious attention of all citizens.

Light In Dark Corners

Lincoln, Neb.

About two weeks ago Gordon Winters wrote a story about a man who couldn't find anyone in city government who would offer him protection from assault.

I say thanks to Gordon Winters and The Lincoln Star for that story.

Not only did the man involved benefit from the articles, but everyone in Lincoln should be a little better off because The Star reporter prodded someone into action.

It's really great how they found a way to help the man — AFTER the story of his plight was published.

The last few years have really demonstrated how desperately this country needs a free press. It's scary to think what might go on locally and nationally if it weren't for the newspapers and their staffs shining light in all those dark corners of government.

Seeking Research Funds

Lincoln, Neb.

Our thanks for printing the Ronald Reagan article on the People's Bicentennial Commission, in the Sept. 6 Star. I have been following this group's activities for a year now in the media.

I cannot understand why the national endowment groups award grants to groups like this, whose openly announced goal is to bring forth revolutionary acts during our Bicentennial. They also openly have announced that they plan to break up the Bicentennial events.

Yet they receive $401,210 in grants financed by our taxes.

For several years now, I have been applying for grants from the national endowment, but have had no luck. Others who have been working to preserve our American traditional arts and skills have had similar luck. It seems that anything to do with preserving dying American folk skills are automatically turned down, while groups working to decay the arts of America receive huge grants.

I figure it will take $65,000 to complete the 18 years of research already done and financed by my own resources. I am the only one doing this research in this field. Colleges around the country are teaching courses in the field without even reference material, in many cases, and without textbooks. Yet one cannot get financial assistance to complete the research. Each year that passes means there are fewer fiddlers and fiddling informants alive and able to help in the research.

Fiddling is rapidly becoming a most popular subject across the country. Many false assumptions are being passed on as fact because of the lack of research into the subject. So money which could be used effectively to correct this problem is going to "The People's Bicentennial Commission."

Isn't it time this business of financing groups who are trying to revolt against our American Constitution and way of life stop being financed by our tax money?

Defends Hunting

Lincoln, Neb.

Concerning the September 4 comments on the poor innocent doves from "Bird Lover," "Damned Mad," "Disgusted Farm Wife" and Bob Drda — nature provides us with all kinds of food which can either be utilized or wasted.

The bird-lover may have had a chicken or turkey sandwich while writing but forgot to comment on the poor innocent birds that we raise in captivity so very well only to kill them for food.

While "Damned Mad" was writing about killed and crippled doves, we had hundreds of thousands of human beings crippled by accidents, disease, etc. suffering in our hospitals. The wounded dove is promptly taken care of by nature with a long list of birds and animals that depend on fellow wildlife to maintain their bodies. Suffering and death are the grim prices all of us pay for a short stay on this planet.

As to the "disgusted farm wife," I can understand her frustration toward hunters, as I have also experienced some of the ill manners a few unsportsmanlike people display in the field, but I believe the large percentage of hunters are gentlemen and ladies who are not all that different from her great-grandfather and great-grandmother who set us up in business in this country using the gun to provide food for their family.

Bob Drda should also concern himself with the poor innocent cows, pigs, sheep, horses, fish and fowl that so harmless to anyone — lovable, too — but we choose to have them killed by gas or knife and to include them in our diets.

Life is made up of a multitude of elements. I and millions of other Americans sincerely believe hunting to be a valuable and worthwihle activity that creates exercise, fellowship, recreation and relaxation to supplement a life that is filled with tensions and uncertainties. Laws are not passed without consideration for available resources and management controls. Comments inferring that our elected legislators are a bunch of "thoughtless ninnies", in my opinion, are a display of disrespect for law and order that most mature persons feel only the younger generation are capable of.

It is time for a change. In Lincoln we have been led around by the nose by the P.D. too long! Ask any well-informed traveler by rail (inside or under the box-cars) what he thought of Lincoln, Nebraska, and how many times he had been hassled by the P.D. on a Sunday afternoon.

We can't just run this town for those who have it made. It takes all types and the new appointment is our best chance in years of fulfilling this.

Very Little Peace

Lincoln, Neb.

"Nebraska, The Good Life," should be renamed "Nebraska, The Gun Life," since the recent decision on the dove issue.

It is a disgrace and discredit to our state to allow these hunters (they don't deserve to be called sportsmen) to seek out and destroy the dove, a long-standing symbol of peace. One wonders how much peace anyone could enjoy after a day of such needless slaughter. They surely don't need them for food in a land of plenty — plenty of everything, that is, except the appreciation and compassion for our beautiful birds and animals which are fast becoming not only the endangered species, but will finally be completely eliminated by the gun-lovers.

Does it make them perhaps feel more of a man to pull the trigger on something helpless and unsuspecting which was put here for our pleasure and respect, not to satisfy the ego of a few?

Friend, Neb.

In the item in the Sept. 5 Star on a prize-winning recipe for Sauerkraut-Pork Casserole, I notice the cost listed at $1.83.

I haven't been able to get even the pork for $1.83, let alone the other ingredients.

If Mrs. Val Sypal of Brainard can tell me where I can get all the ingredients for that price, I'll run all the way!

Day At The Fair

Pawnee City, Neb.

We want to say thank you for a wonderful day at the State Fair in Lincoln last Saturday. We were very happy when we discovered we had won the trophy. We are proud to have it on display for awhile.

We feel it is a pleasure to work for The Star.

Seeking An Answer

Sargent, Neb.

Many people think I am a kook because I am so adamant in opposing aid and trade with Russia and Red China.

I wish some Democrat or Republican would tell me why we have a national defense budget of $80 billion.

To protect us from Lower Slobovia, maybe?

Serious Suggestions

Lincoln, Neb.

In The Star's Friday morning coverage of the Sept. 4 Goals & Policies meeting, it was stated that I "facetiously" suggested that car-pooling be organized for members of the committee attending G&P meetings.

I would like to state that the suggestion for some energy-conserving means of traveling to the meetings was seriously made, and I hope the report of our committee will be seriously considered by members of G&P.

In my mind, the need to conserve energy and particularly petroleum fuels is very real and worthy of the serious attention of all citizens.

Light In Dark Corners

Lincoln, Neb.

About two weeks ago Gordon Winters wrote a story about a man who couldn't find anyone in city government who would offer him protection from assault.

I say thanks to Gordon Winters and The Lincoln Star for that story.

Not only did the man involved benefit from the articles, but everyone in Lincoln should be a little better off because The Star reporter prodded someone into action.

It's really great how they found a way to help the man — AFTER the story of his plight was published.

The last few years have really demonstrated how desperately this country needs a free press. It's scary to think what might go on locally and nationally if it weren't for the newspapers and their staffs shining light in all those dark corners of government.

Seeking Research Funds

Lincoln, Neb.

Our thanks for printing the Ronald Reagan article on the People's Bicentennial Commission, in the Sept. 6 Star. I have been following this group's activities for a year now in the media.

I cannot understand why the national endowment groups award grants to groups like this, whose openly announced goal is to bring forth revolutionary acts during our Bicentennial. They also openly have announced that they plan to break up the Bicentennial events.

Yet they receive $401,210 in grants financed by our taxes.

For several years now, I have been applying for grants from the national endowment, but have had no luck. Others who have been working to preserve our American traditional arts and skills have had similar luck. It seems that anything to do with preserving dying American folk skills are automatically turned down, while groups working to decay the arts of America receive huge grants.

I figure it will take $65,000 to complete the 18 years of research already done and financed by my own resources. I am the only one doing this research in this field. Colleges around the country are teaching courses in the field without even reference material, in many cases, and without textbooks. Yet one cannot get financial assistance to complete the research. Each year that passes means there are fewer fiddlers and fiddling informants alive and able to help in the research.

Fiddling is rapidly becoming a most popular subject across the country. Many false assumptions are being passed on as fact because of the lack of research into the subject. So money which could be used effectively to correct this problem is going to "The People's Bicentennial Commission."

Isn't it time this business of financing groups who are trying to revolt against our American Constitution and way of life stop being financed by our tax money?

Defends Hunting

Lincoln, Neb.

Concerning the September 4 comments on the poor innocent doves from "Bird Lover," "Damned Mad," "Disgusted Farm Wife" and Bob Drda — nature provides us with all kinds of food which can either be utilized or wasted.

The bird-lover may have had a chicken or turkey sandwich while writing but forgot to comment on the poor innocent birds that we raise in captivity so very well only to kill them for food.

While "Damned Mad" was writing about killed and crippled doves, we had hundreds of thousands of human beings crippled by accidents, disease, etc. suffering in our hospitals. The wounded dove is promptly taken care of by nature with a long list of birds and animals that depend on fellow wildlife to maintain their bodies. Suffering and death are the grim prices all of us pay for a short stay on this planet.

As to the "disgusted farm wife," I can understand her frustration toward hunters, as I have also experienced some of the ill manners a few unsportsmanlike people display in the field, but I believe the large percentage of hunters are gentlemen and ladies who are not all that different from her great-grandfather and great-grandmother who set us up in business in this country using the gun to provide food for their family.

Bob Drda should also concern himself with the poor innocent cows, pigs, sheep, horses, fish and fowl that so harmless to anyone — lovable, too — but we choose to have them killed by gas or knife and to include them in our diets.

Life is made up of a multitude of elements. I and millions of other Americans sincerely believe hunting to be a valuable and worthwihle activity that creates exercise, fellowship, recreation and relaxation to supplement a life that is filled with tensions and uncertainties. Laws are not passed without consideration for available resources and management controls. Comments inferring that our elected legislators are a bunch of "thoughtless ninnies", in my opinion, are a display of disrespect for law and order that most mature persons feel only the younger generation are capable of.

It Takes All Types

Lincoln, Neb.

It is time for a change. In Lincoln we have been led around by the nose by the P.D. too long! Ask any well-informed traveler by rail (inside or under the box-cars) what he thought of Lincoln, Nebraska, and how many times he had been hassled by the P.D. on a Sunday afternoon.

We can't just run this town for those who have it made. It takes all types and the new appointment is our best chance in years of fulfilling this.

Very Little Peace

Lincoln, Neb.

"Nebraska, The Good Life," should be renamed "Nebraska, The Gun Life," since the recent decision on the dove issue.

It is a disgrace and discredit to our state to allow these hunters (they don't deserve to be called sportsmen) to seek out and destroy the dove, a long-standing symbol of peace. One wonders how much peace anyone could enjoy after a day of such needless slaughter. They surely don't need them for food in a land of plenty — plenty of everything, that is, except the appreciation and compassion for our beautiful birds and animals which are fast becoming not only the endangered species, but will finally be completely eliminated by the gun-lovers.

Does it make them perhaps feel more of a man to pull the trigger on something helpless and unsuspecting which was put here for our pleasure and respect, not to satisfy the ego of a few?

Right Of Way Debate Goes On, And On, And

By NANCY HICKS

Analysis

The record playing "Right Way for Right of Way" is stuck, and each week the Lancaster County Board hears a repeat of months-old lines.

Another subdivision permit came up Tuesday. Another hour of volleying the right of way question, and County Commissioner Bruce Hamilton wearily said, "I'm getting awfully tired of this."

Lined up on either side of the right of way question are City-County Planning Director Doug Brogden, a man who believes in the time-consuming process of planning, and County Engineer Marv Nuernberger, a man who doesn't like to wait even days for a major decision.

And the question could eventually affect any person who wants to build a home on less than five acres of land in the county, anyone who wants to subdivide.

Basically the question boils down to this: How much land will each subdivider have to give to the county in order to protect for future road expansion?

The possible consequences of that decision can be seen in Lincoln along 48th and Holdrege Sts. Streets which for traffic purposes city planners feel should be widened. But streets with homes close to the road and large trees along the curb, assets the homeowners don't want destroyed by widening.

County subdivision regulations spelling out the basic right of way rules leave unanswered the questions of what are "major" or "minor" roads and how much right of way is needed on these "major" roads.

Brogden and Nuernberger agree on the questions. But on the answers, "we are 90,000 miles apart," Nuernberger candidly admits.

At the heart of the dispute is basic difference over taking of private land and the planning method.

The government has an obligation to protect future taxpayers by getting right of way now rather than paying dearly for it later, Nuernberger believes.

There should be as little taking of private property as is necessary and then only for good reason, reason which can be substantiated, Brogden believes.

Two sides of one coin.

The coin is planning. For one man planning is a process which leads to an end result; for the other it is often an end which allows a means.

A plan evolves through a planning process, according to Brogden, whose carefully worded answers indicate his preference for a low public profile.

The road system planning should take into consideration proposed land uses, possible changes over the next 25 years, population projections, traffic count projections.

The plan must look into such things as will Hickman grow to 50,000 or only 4,000 over the next 25 years, Brogden believes.

And the plan should not go beyond what the county can afford to do. It should be a realistic assessment of what can be done, not an idealistic dream of what should be done.

Ideally this plan would evolve slowly, with the help of citizen input.

The outspoken Nuernberger doesn't talk much about that kind of planning. He doesn't really buy being able to foresee 25 years into the future with any accuracy.

His planning is often more specific — bridges are more important than surfacing, gravel more important than surfacing in many cases and all county roads are important.

Nuernberger doesn't need a plan to tell him that every county road is "major."

Look at the amount of traffic around Branched Oak. No one could have forecast that traffic, the new homes, before the lake was built, he says.

Since gazing into the crystal ball of planning doesn't work, then the county has the obligation to protect all county roads, Nuernberger believes.

When farm land turns to residential use through subdivision, the value of land rises. And that is the time to protect the road right of way — no matter whether the road is major or minor today or 10 years from today.

Government leaders didn't need 66 feet of right of way back in 1890 when the current county road right of ways were dedicated, Nuernberger points out.

"All there was running up and down these roads was a saddle horse."

These leaders had the foresight to protect every road, says Nuernberger.

Looking around for a plan to fit his purpose Nuernberger, discovered a state law and accompanying map showing the primary and secondary roads in the county in 1957.

The map, or plan, approved by county boards for more than a decade, lists as primary more than 90% of all county roads. In fact the law says that school bus routes and mail routes are primary, so even under today's conditions 90% of all county roads are still primary.

And primary is synonomous with "major," Nuernberger contends.

Ninety per cent is close enough to 100% for comfort, and Nuernberger is working to get this map or a facsimile adopted by the County Board.

The board, caught in the crossfire, unable to come up with its own solution, stumbles along subdivision by subdivision while urging the two men to work on a compromise.

Both men say they are willing to talk to each other. Neither has said to what extent he is willing to listen.

County Board OKs Raise Of 10% Beginning Sept. 15

County employes' pay will rise by 10% Sept. 15 under a cost of living increase approved Tuesday by the Lancaster County Board.

On a 2-1 vote the board approved the 10% hike over another plan giving county employes a 6% retroactive pay to early July then another 4% in mid-September.

Only Board Chairman Jan Gauger wanted the 6% and 4% plan, the one supported by county employes and department heads during the meeting.

The 10% pay hike, which will continue through next September, marks the end of a county policy of giving retroactive pay increases.

Though agreeing with the idea of eliminating retroactive pay, Mrs. Gauger and employes argued that county employes had been told they would get a lump sum retroactive pay increase this fall and many were counting on that extra check.

The 10% September to September plan will give the employes an 8.1% increase for the county's fiscal year and represents a $50,000 saving to taxpayers over the 6% and 4% plan. The second plan would have given a 9.33% increase to employes for the fiscal year.

In approving the flat 10% increase, Commissioner Bruce Hamilton said that it will still give employes a good cost of living raise, give them a 10% increase to build upon for next year and is the fairest for the taxpayers.

In going to a September to September pay plan the board is trying to eliminate the problem it faced this year.

The county fiscal year runs from July 1 to June 30, and the county was just adopting a budget when the city was still negotiating salaries with employes.

In order to keep the two government's employes on a similar wage rate, since they work in the same building and compete for the same help, the county tried to guess the city's pay hike.

They guessed wrong, leaving enough money for an anticipated 7½% increase while the city went to a 10% increase.

More than 90% of county employes are also eligible for a 5% merit increase during the year, on top of the cost of living boost.

In other action, the board approved a $4.2 million public facility revenue bond series to finance the State Fair grandstand.

The bond issue, which is merely channeled through the county and reflects no financial obligation on the county's part, is the second bond issue for improvements at the fairground.

A former bond issue financed the race track improvements and new horse barns.

A Wolf's Suit

Rocky the Timber Wolf and handler Aleta Pahl field questions at a news conference in Chicago. Rocky and his owner, John Harris, are suing the State of New Jersey for $1 million for slander in reports of an incident in which Rocky accidently bit a child. Harris also said the State of Illinois has not kept its promise to issue a permit to display Rocky in Illinois.

Little Piece Of Chimney Rock Falls

Bayard (AP) — Another small piece of Chimney Rock, an Oregon Trail landmark in extreme western Nebraska, has broken off the top.

Mrs. Marie Frakes of Bayard, an attendant at the Chimney Rock Mobile Museum, said Tuesday a piece about one foot tall and smaller chunks fell from the northeast spire about three weeks ago.

She is saving the largest piece at her home.

A piece fell from the southwest side about a year ago, and in 1954 a 25-foot section dropped to the ground.

1 Of Accused Pot Pickers Bound Over

One of four men arrested for allegedly harvesting marijuana in late August has been bound over to District Court.

Gregory R. Spurlock, 21, of California, waived his right to a preliminary hearing in County Court and an Oct. 9 date was set for arraignment in Lancaster County District Court.

Spurlock and Michael J. Sloan, 21, of Oregon, were charged with manufacturing a controlled substance after they were arrested in a field about two miles southwest of Lincoln while allegedly putting 88½ pounds of marijuana into sacks.

A preliminary hearing for Sloan has been set for Sept. 16.

Two other men charged with possession of marijuana with intent to deliver in connection with the same incident were Donald Edwin King, 22, of Issaquah, Wash., and Brian Scott Sund, 22, of Seattle, Wash. King's case has been continued and Sund is scheduled to appear for a preliminary hearing Oct. 3.

All four men are free on bond.

Adams, Wessel Waiting To Make Career Plans

Acting police chief Dale Adams and police-community relations coordinator Leighton Wessel said Tuesday they do not expect to make immediate decisions on future plans.

After Mayor Helen Boosalis nominated Californian George K. Hansen, 54, last week, both men indicated they were considering leaving the department.

"I haven't been out looking for a different job," Adams said. "I'm not going to leave tomorrow."

Mrs. Boosalis and some City Council members have urged Adams to stay with the department, of which he has been a member since 1947.

"I plan to move cautiously. I hope I make the right decision," Adams said.

Wessel, who along with Adams and Hansen was one of six finalists from among about 90 who applied for the job, said that he too will take some time to reach a final decision.

He said he does not expect to make a decision until some time after Hansen has spent some time in the chief's spot.

Hansen, who is now public safety director in Sunnyvale, California, begins as Lincoln police chief on Sept. 29.

Beatrice Home Settlement Questioned

The State Mental Retardation Advisory Committee Tuesday voiced objections to portions of the proposed settlement of the Beatrice State Home lawsuit.

Chuck Lowry of Columbus referred to Judge Albert Schatz and U.S. Justice Department attorneys and said, "How can these people who have never been through the Beatrice State Home tell us what's wrong with it?"

Dr. James D. Eisen of Omaha said, "As a taxpayer, I don't think the settlement has an appropriate check-and-balance system."

The proposed settlement suggests that the Beatrice State Home's population should be cut from 1,100 to 250. Those removed from the home would be placed in community mental retardation programs.

The committee agreed to ask Gov. J. James Exon if they could send their objections on to Judge Schatz.

Their concerns included the quality of community-based programs, guardians' rights, confidentiality of records, and the role of the state mental retardation office.

Independence Asked

Mexico City (UPI) — President Osvaldo Dorticos of Cuba called for the independence of Puerto Rico which he said was under colonial domination.

They Won't Cash President's Checks

LOS ANGELES (AP) — President Ford says he's having trouble getting people to cash his checks.

Not that they'd bounce. The payees would simply rather keep them as souvenirs.

Right Of Way Debate Goes On, And On, And

By NANCY HICKS

Analysis

The record playing "Right Way for Right of Way" is stuck, and each week the Lancaster County Board bears a repeat of months-old lines.

Another subdivision permit came up Tuesday. Another hour of volleying the right of way question, and County Commissioner Bruce Hamilton wearily said, "I'm getting awfully tired of this."

Lined up on either side of the right of way question are City-County Planning Director Doug Brogden, a man who believes in the time-consuming process of planning, and County Engineer Marv Nuernberger, a man who doesn't like to wait even days for a major decision.

And the question could eventually affect any person who wants to build a home on less than five acres of land in the county, anyone who wants to subdivide.

Basically the question boils down to this: How much land will each subdivider have to give to the county in order to protect for future road expansion?

The possible consequences of that decision can be seen in Lincoln along 48th and Holdrege Sts. Streets which for traffic purposes city planners feel should be widened. But streets with homes close to the road and large trees along the curb, assets the homeowners don't want destroyed by widening.

County subdivision regulations spelling out the basic right of way rules leave unanswered the questions of what are "major" or "minor" roads and how much right of way is needed on these "major" roads.

Brogden and Nuernberger agree on the questions. But on the answers, "we are 90,000 miles apart," Nuernberger candidly admits.

At the heart of the dispute is basic difference over taking of private land and the planning method.

The government has an obligation to protect future taxpayers by getting right of way now rather than paying dearly for it later, Nuernberger believes.

There should be as little taking of private property as is necessary and then only for good reason, reason which can be substantiated, Brogden believes.

Two sides of one coin.

The coin is planning. For one man planning is a process which leads to an end result; for the other it is often an end which allows a means.

A plan evolves through a planning process, according to Brogden, whose carefully worded answers indicate his preference for a low public profile.

The road system planning should take into consideration proposed land uses, possible changes over the next 25 years, population projections, traffic count projections.

The plan must look into such things as will Hickman grow to 50,000 or only 4,000 over the next 25 years, Brogden believes.

And the plan should not go beyond what the county can afford to do. It should be a realistic assessment of what can be done, not an idealistic dream of what should be done.

Ideally this plan would evolve slowly, with the help of citizen input.

The outspoken Nuernberger doesn't talk much about that kind of planning. He doesn't really buy being able to foresee 25 years into the future with any accuracy.

His planning is often more specific — bridges are more important than surfacing, gravel more important than surfacing in many cases and all county roads are important.

Nuernberger doesn't need a plan to tell him that every county road is "major."

Look at the amount of traffic around Branched Oak. No one could have forecast that traffic, the new homes, before the lake was built, he says.

Since gazing into the crystal ball of planning doesn't work, then the county has the obligation to protect all county roads, Nuernberger believes.

When farm land turns to residential use through subdivision, the value of land rises. And that is the time to protect the road right of way — no matter whether the road is major or minor today or 10 years from today.

Government leaders didn't need 66 feet of right of way back in 1890 when the current county road right of ways were dedicated, Nuernberger points out.

"All there was running up and down these roads was a saddle horse."

These leaders had the foresight to protect every road, says Nuernberger.

Looking around for a plan to fit his purpose Nuernberger, discovered a state law and accompanying map showing the primary and secondary roads in the county in 1957.

The map, or plan, approved by county boards for more than a decade, lists as primary more than 90% of all county roads. In fact the law says that school bus routes and mail routes are primary, so even under today's conditions 90% of all county roads are still primary.

And primary is synonomous with "major," Nuernberger contends.

Ninety per cent is close enough to 100% for comfort, and Nuernberger is working to get this map or a facsimile adopted by the County Board.

The board, caught in the crossfire, unable to come up with its own solution, stumbles along subdivision by subdivision while urging the two men to work on a compromise.

Both men say they are willing to talk to each other. Neither has said to what extent he is willing to listen.

County Board OKs Raise Of 10% Beginning Sept. 15

County employes' pay will rise by 10% Sept. 15 under a cost of living increase approved Tuesday by the Lancaster County Board.

On a 2-1 vote the board approved the 10% hike over another plan giving county employes a 6% retroactive pay to early July then another 4% in mid-September.

Only Board Chairman Jan Gauger wanted the 6% and 4% plan, the one supported by county employes and department heads during the meeting.

The 10% pay hike, which will continue through next September, marks the end of a county policy of giving retroactive pay increases.

Though agreeing with the idea of eliminating retroactive pay, Mrs. Gauger and employes argued that county employes had been told they would get a lump sum retroactive pay increase this fall and many were counting on that extra check.

The 10% September to September plan will give the employes an 8.1% increase for the county's fiscal year and represents a $50,000 saving to taxpayers over the 6% and 4% plan. The second plan would have given a 9.33% increase to employes for the fiscal year.

In approving the flat 10% increase, Commissioner Bruce Hamilton said that it will still give employes a good cost of living raise, give them a 10% increase to build upon for next year and is the fairest for the taxpayers.

In going to a September to September pay plan the board is trying to eliminate the problem it faced this year.

The county fiscal year runs from July 1 to June 30, and the county was just adopting a budget when the city was still negotiating salaries with employes.

In order to keep the two government's employes on a similar wage rate, since they work in the same building and compete for the same help, the county tried to guess the city's pay hike.

They guessed wrong, leaving enough money for an anticipated 7½% increase while the city went to a 10% increase.

More than 90% of county employes are also eligible for a 5% merit increase during the year, on top of the cost of living boost.

In other action, the board approved a $4.2 million public facility revenue bond series to finance the State Fair grandstand.

The bond issue, which is merely channeled through the county and reflects no financial obligation on the county's part, is the second bond issue for improvements at the fairground.

A former bond issue financed the race track improvements and new horse barns.

Little Piece Of Chimney Rock Falls

Bayard (AP) — Another small piece of Chimney Rock, an Oregon Trail landmark in extreme western Nebraska, has broken off the top.

Mrs. Marie Frakes of Bayard, an attendant at the Chimney Rock Mobile Museum, said Tuesday a piece about one foot tall and smaller chunks fell from the northeast spire about three weeks ago.

She is saving the largest piece at her home.

A piece fell from the southwest side about a year ago, and in 1954 a 25-foot section dropped to the ground.

1 Of Accused Pot Pickers Bound Over

One of four men arrested for allegedly harvesting marijuana in late August has been bound over to District Court.

Gregory R. Spurlock, 21, of California, waived his right to a preliminary hearing in County Court and an Oct. 9 date was set for arraignment in Lancaster County District Court.

Spurlock and Michael J. Sloan, 21, of Oregon, were charged with manufacturing a controlled substance after they were arrested in a field about two miles southwest of Lincoln while allegedly putting 88½ pounds of marijuana into sacks.

A preliminary hearing for Sloan has been set for Sept. 16.

Two other men charged with possession of marijuana with intent to deliver in connection with the same incident were Donald Edwin King, 22, of Issaquah, Wash., and Brian Scott Sund, 22, of Seattle, Wash. King's case has been continued and Sund is scheduled to appear for a preliminary hearing Oct. 3.

All four men are free on bond.

Adams, Wessel Waiting To Make Career Plans

Acting police chief Dale Adams and police-community relations coordinator Leighton Wessel said Tuesday they do not expect to make immediate decisions on future plans.

After Mayor Helen Boosalis nominated Californian George K. Hansen, 54, last week, both men indicated they were considering leaving the department.

"I haven't been out looking for a different job," Adams said. "I'm not going to leave tomorrow."

Mrs. Boosalis and some City Council members have urged Adams to stay with the department, of which he has been a member since 1947.

"I plan to move cautiously. I hope I make the right decision," Adams said.

Wessel, who along with Adams and Hansen was one of six finalists from among about 90 who applied for the job, said that he too will take some time to reach a final decision.

He said he does not expect to make a decision until some time after Hansen has spent some time in the chief's spot.

Hansen, who is now public safety director in Sunnyvale, California, begins as Lincoln police chief on Sept. 29.

Beatrice Home Settlement Questioned

The State Mental Retardation Advisory Committee Tuesday voiced objections to portions of the proposed settlement of the Beatrice State Home lawsuit.

Chuck Lowry of Columbus referred to Judge Albert Schatz and U.S. Justice Department attorneys and said, "How can these people who have never been through the Beatrice State Home tell us what's wrong with it?"

Dr. James D. Eisen of Omaha said, "As a taxpayer, I don't think the settlement has an appropriate check-and-balance system."

The proposed settlement suggests that the Beatrice State Home's population should be cut from 1,100 to 250. Those removed from the home would be placed in community mental retardation programs.

The committee agreed to ask Gov. J. James Exon if they could send their objections on to Judge Schatz.

Their concerns included the quality of community-based programs, guardians' rights, confidentiality of records, and the role of the state mental retardation office.

Trucking Rate Debate Rekindled At PSC Meet

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

The age-old regulatory debate over whether all truckers, regardless of their overhead, should be forced to charge identical rates was rekindled Tuesday before the Nebraska Public Service Commission.

On one hand, the commission was told that disparities in truck rates will virtually dry up truck service to rural communities through rate wars. In the end, the same truckers whom the lower rates were intended to help will be hurt, some said.

James Preston, director of the Nebraska Motor Carriers Association, said, "If the commission turns (rates) loose, you'll end up with a handful of carriers. The big boys wouldn't stand for it."

Reflecting the opposite view, J. C. Wilkins, transportation manager for Hormel & Co. in Fremont, said, "Certainly there are no two carriers that operate in the exact same manner with the exact same efficiency or the exact same costs. Should not the charges reflect the individual situations?"

The debate over rates was touched off by a small firm, Trans Nebraska Express of Ceresco, when it asked to drop its general commodity rates on intrastate shipments by 5%.

Terry Miller said the cut is needed to regain business lost to Mills Film Transfer. Another small firm with limited, expedited service, Mills Film Transfer bowed out of the 5% general rate increase given truckers two years ago.

It was the first time the commission allowed a trucker to "flag out" of a rate increase.

This has given Mills a competitive edge over Trans Nebraska on shipments between Lincoln and Omaha.

Miller said Mills' lower rates have "cost us some business — how much I'm not sure. I feel we could pick up quite a bit of business, if I could charge the same rates as Mills."

Revenue lost by the 5% cut would be more than offset by the increased business, Miller said. Trans Nebraska mainly hauls furniture and appliances to retail outlets in Lincoln from Omaha.

Non-union help, six-day-a-week service and a lack of terminals make it possible for Miller to operate at a lower cost than some larger truckers.

Proponents of maximum but not minimum truck rates feel such a system would encourage efficiency and stem a trend among businesses to haul their own freight. To make them operate at higher than necessary rates basically penalizes efficiency, proponents claim.

But Preston noted that firms such as Mills and Trans Nebraska are "skimming" the most profitable route (Omaha to Lincoln) and are hauling the most profitable items (liquor).

"These are the cream of the crop; they've zeroed in on the best traffic."

Preston said towns which are not on lucrative routes, such as Red Cloud, Humphrey and Tilden, would not get the benefits of such rate competition.

H.C. Ahlberg, administrative vice president of Briggs Transfer of St. Paul, Minn., said if the commission were to allow some firms to charge lower rates, cuts in service could occur.

"The low-cost carrier cannot dictate the rates and expect the economy to prosper and flourish," Ahlberg said.

Preston added, "Nebraska has one of the lowest intrastate rate structures in the nation, and it has statewide service. Carriers should be allowed to compete on service. If they compete on rates, they will cut on safety measures and unprofitable runs to make the difference."

Real Estate Commission Hearing Ends

The Nebraska Real Estate Commission Tuesday concluded two days of hearings into an alleged deceptive house transaction in Lincoln and reserved until later possible disciplinary action against two real estate brokers.

Attorneys for the two brokers told the commission that the state had not proven guilt. Instead, testimony was contradictory, they argued, and the complain against the brokers should be dismissed.

Dave Twes, attorney for Stanley Portsche, cited a number of lapses in the testimony of the complaintant. Mrs. Marie Vogt of Omaha, and the two brokers' reputations and asked, "Who do you believe?"

The commission earlier dropped the portion of the complaint against Town & Country Realty of Lincoln.

The complaint, filed by the commission staff, alleges Portsche sold a home owned by Mrs. Vogt at 1728 S. 26th St. to his partner, Gerald F. Gulland, without informing Mrs. Vogt that they were partners.

In addition, the complaint charges they knew the house was worth $16,000 but only gave Mrs. Vogt $13,500 for it. The complaint also says Portsche did not show the house to other prospective buyers. Gulland bought the house in 1971; in 1973, he sold it for $28,500.

Portsche and Gulland countered that Mrs. Vogt was given a business card indicating that Gulland was Portsche's partner. Mrs. Vogt said she did not remember it. Commission attorney Robert Peterson questioned whether that would have been sufficient notice had it occurred.

The disparity in sale prices was due to the fact that Gulland made significant improvements in the house, attorney Ed Carter said.

"What evidence is there to show they knew it was worth $16,000?" Carter asked.

Tews noted that Mrs. Vogt had trouble remembering her daughter-in-law's name and questioned whether her memory could be relied upon to recall the events of 1971.

Portsche, he said, had only an $810 commission to gain out of the transaction, but Mrs. Vogt has roughly $15,000 to gain from the complaint.

Dr. Svoboda was a past president of Cozad Rotary Club and the Cozad Chamber of Commerce, and a former member of the Board of Education.

For 30 years he served as editor for the Nebraska Dental Association and was a former president of the district dental society.

His wife, Esther, and youngest daughter, Mrs. James (Ellen) Tye of Boulder, Colo., are also dentists.

Other survivors are daughters, Mrs. Raymond (Shirley) Talcott of Boulder and Mrs. John (Andrea) Lowe III of Kearney; brother, Dr. Norman Svoboda of Sendona, Ariz.; sisters, Mrs. Clara Spence of Van Nuys, Calif., and Mrs. Erma Jacobsen of Sendona; 10 grandchildren and three great grandchildren.

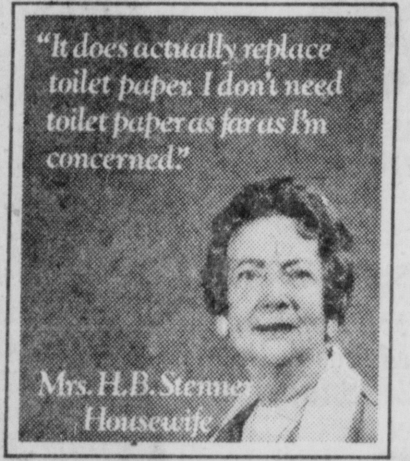
THOUSANDS STOP USING TOILET PAPER!

What makes people abandon a life-long habit? Read the facts about Fresh'n Pre-moistened Toilet Tissue and find out why.

You can't expect people to stop doing something they've done all their lives unless you give them some pretty good reasons.

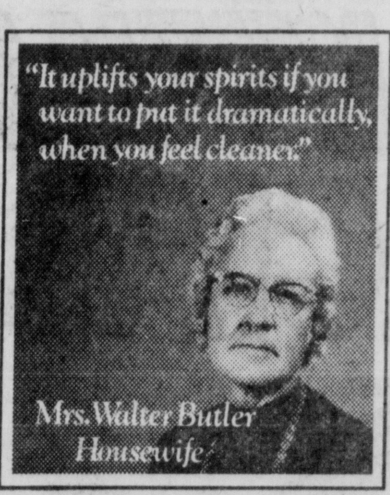
We can do better than that. We're going to give you some very good reasons why Fresh'n is better than what you're using now. So much better, in fact, that thousands of people right here in Lincoln now include Fresh'n as part of their everyday family hygiene. And they tell us they couldn't be happier about it.



"It does actually replace toilet paper. I don't need toilet paper as far as I'm concerned."
Mrs. H.B. Stemmer
Housewife

Feel better about yourself.

Fresh'n isn't dry. It's lightly moistened to get you cleaner than dry toilet tissue can. And when you know you're as clean as you can be, you feel good all over. It's as simple as that.

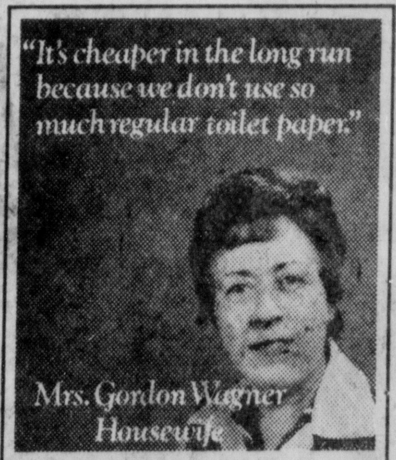


"It uplifts your spirits if you want to put it dramatically, when you feel cleaner."
Mrs. Walter Butler
Housewife

Costs less than you think.

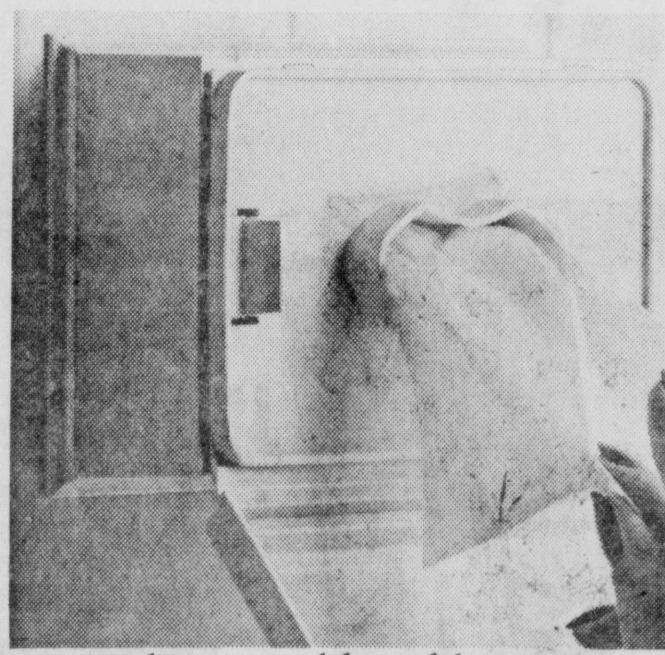
A Fresh'n refill—about a 20 day supply for most families—costs about 39¢.* Or less than 2¢ a day. So its actual cost is much less than many people think. In fact, you can now get a Fresh'n dispenser for half price. (See offer at right.)

But Fresh'n is economical in other ways as well. When you switch to Fresh'n, one of the first things you'll notice is how little you use. Fresh'n cleans so much more effectively, two 6"x 6½" sheets can replace several feet of dry tissue.



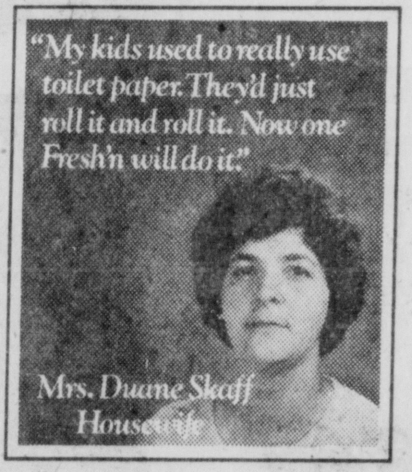
"It's cheaper in the long run because we don't use so much regular toilet paper."
Mrs. Gordon Wagner
Housewife

Compared to Fresh'n, dry toilet tissue is no bargain.



Attractive sheet at a time dispenser discourages waste.

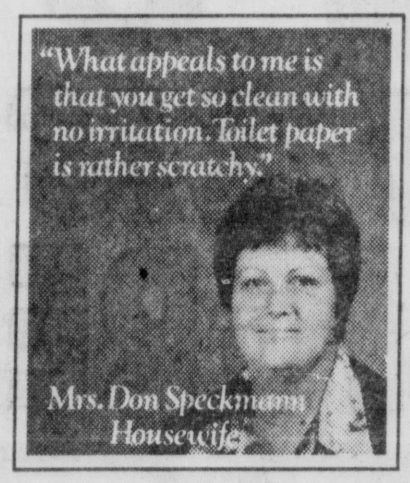
And unlike toilet tissue on a roll, Fresh'n won't end up all over the floor when children use it. The Fresh'n dispenser doesn't just sit there on the wall looking attractive. It pops up one sheet at a time, encourages economical use.



"My kids used to really use toilet paper. They'd just roll it and roll it. Now one Fresh'n will do it."
Mrs. Duane Skaff
Housewife

No dry toilet paper roughness.

Fresh'n has been thoroughly tested and found to be safe and gentle in even the most sensitive areas. Fresh'n is incredibly soft. With none of the abrasiveness you occasionally find in dry tissue. And because it's moist, it soothes and refreshes. This is why many doctors recommend Fresh'n to people who are especially sensitive or suffer from hemorrhoids.



"What appeals to me is that you get so clean with no irritation. Toilet paper is rather scratchy."
Mrs. Don Speckmann
Housewife

A private message for the lady of the house.

If Fresh'n is the greatest advance in personal hygiene since the invention of toilet paper, as many people believe it is, it's particularly significant for you.

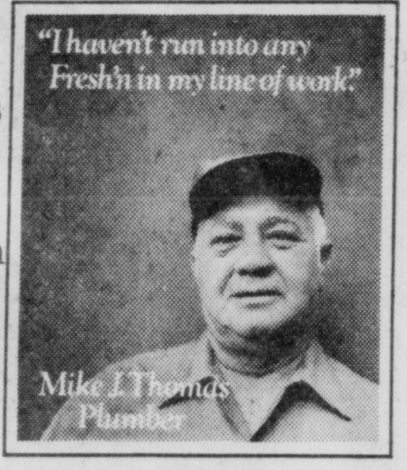
Dry toilet tissue dries. Because Fresh'n is pre-moistened, it cleans. Leaves you feeling fresher and more sanitary than ever before.

Replaces expensive specialty wipes.

Don't confuse Fresh'n with other pre-moistened products. Fresh'n is much less expensive than the specialty products you may be familiar with. Yet you can use Fresh'n for all the same things. For cleaning hands after messy meals. For camping, for travel. Anything expensive pre-moistened wipes can do, Fresh'n can do. And cheaper.

No strain on the drain.

Fresh'n has been tested for flushability and biodegradability in plumbing and septic systems in various parts of the country. And if your children tend to over-stuff the bowl with wads of toilet tissue, you might find our one sheet at a time system a blessing.



"I haven't run into any Fresh'n in my line of work."

THOUSANDS STOP USING TOILET PAPER!

What makes people abandon a life-long habit? Read the facts about Fresh'n Pre-moistened Toilet Tissue and find out why.

You can't expect people to stop doing something they've done all their lives unless you give them some pretty good reasons.

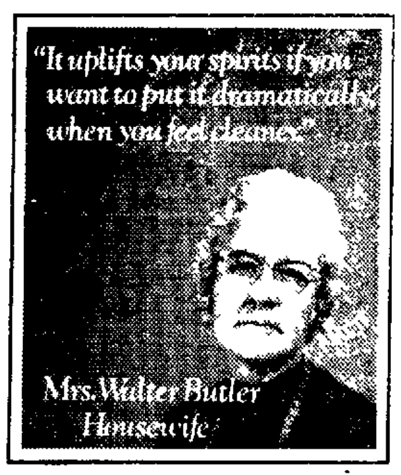
We can do better than that. We're going to give you some very good reasons why Fresh'n is better than what you're using now. So much better, in fact, that thousands of people right here in Lincoln now include Fresh'n as part of their everyday family hygiene. And they tell us they couldn't be happier about it.

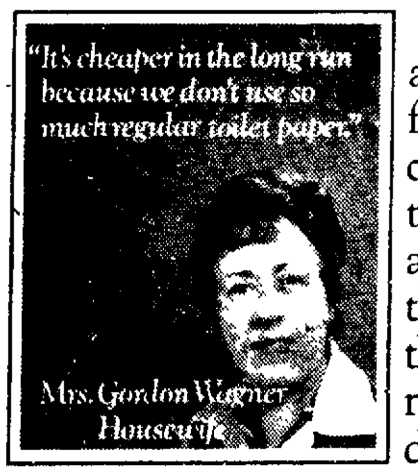
Feel better about yourself.



"It uplifts your spirits if you want to put it dramatically, when you feel cleaner."
Mrs. Walter Butler
Housewife

Fresh'n isn't dry. It's lightly moistened to get you cleaner than dry toilet tissue can. And when you know you're as clean as you can be, you feel good all over. It's as simple as that.

Costs less than you think.

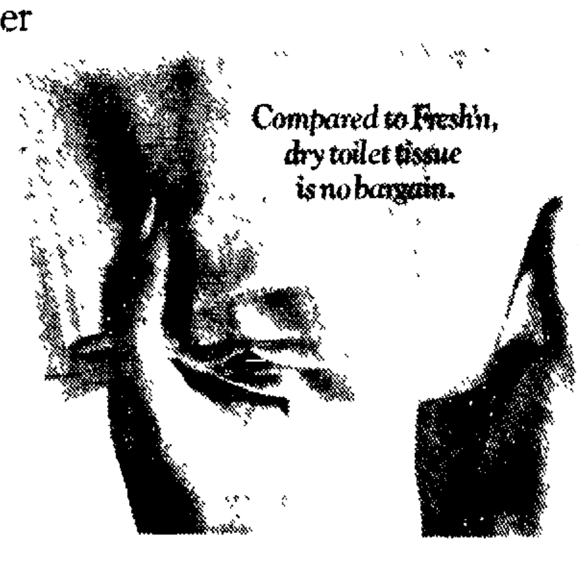


"It's cheaper in the long run because we don't use so much regular toilet paper."
Mrs. Gordon Wagner
Housewife

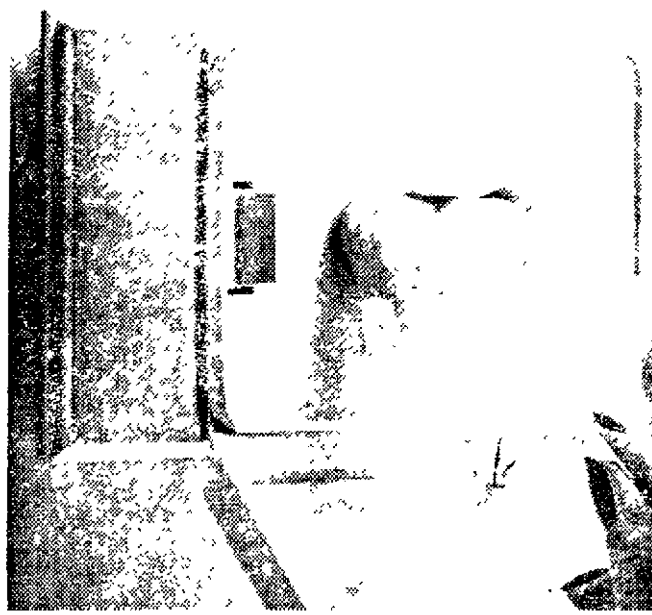
A Fresh'n refill—about a 20 day supply for most families—costs about 39¢.* Or less than 2¢ a day. So its actual cost is much less than many people think. In fact, you can now get a Fresh'n dispenser for half price. (See offer at right.)

But Fresh'n is economical in other ways as well.

When you switch to Fresh'n, one of the first things you'll notice is how little you use. Fresh'n cleans so much more effectively, two 6"x 6½" sheets can replace several feet of dry tissue.

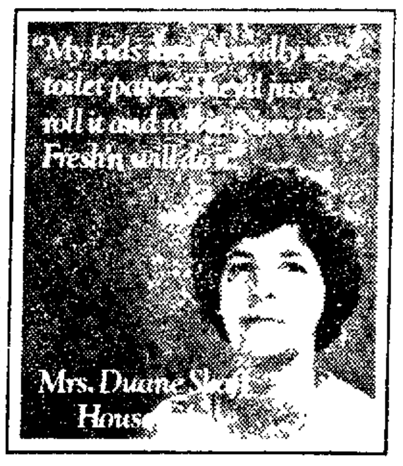


Compared to Fresh'n, dry toilet tissue is no bargain.



Attractive sheet at a time dispenser discourages waste.

And unlike toilet tissue on a roll, Fresh'n won't end up all over the floor when children use it. The Fresh'n dispenser doesn't just sit there on the wall looking attractive. It pops up one sheet at a time, encourages economical use.



"My kids roll it and Fresh'n

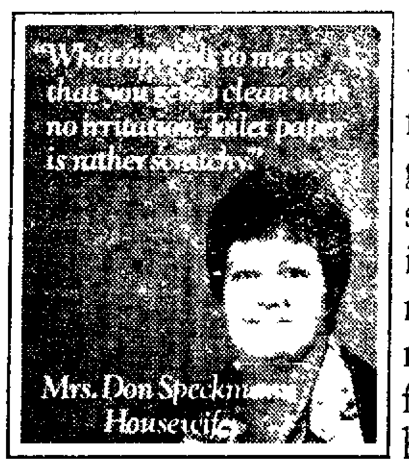
No dry toilet paper roughness.



"What to me is that you clean with no irritation. Toilet paper is rather scratchy."
Mrs. Don Speckm
Housewife

Fresh'n has been thoroughly tested and found to be safe and gentle in even the most sensitive areas. Fresh'n is incredibly soft. With none of the abrasiveness you occasionally find in dry tissue. And because it's moist, it soothes and refreshes. This is why many doctors recommend Fresh'n to people who are especially sensitive or suffer from hemorrhoids.

A private message for the lady of the house.

If Fresh'n is the greatest advance in personal hygiene since the invention of toilet paper, as many people believe it is, it's particularly significant for you.

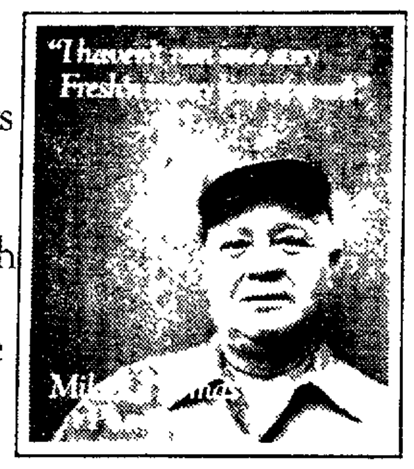
Dry toilet tissue dries. Because Fresh'n is pre-moistened, it cleans. Leaves you feeling fresher and more sanitary than ever before.

Replaces expensive specialty wipes.

Don't confuse Fresh'n with other pre-moistened products. Fresh'n is much less expensive than the specialty products you may be familiar with. Yet you can use Fresh'n for all the same things. For cleaning hands after messy meals. For camping, for travel. Anything expensive pre-moistened wipes can do, Fresh'n can do. And cheaper.

No strain on the drain.

Fresh'n has been tested for flushability and biodegradability in plumbing and septic systems in various parts of the country. And if your children tend to over-stuff the bowl with wads of toilet tissue, you might find our one sheet at a time system a blessing.



70¢ Half Price Coupon.

If you call our toll-free number, 800-243-2986 right now, you'll find Fresh'n won't be a strain on your budget either. Because we'll send you a 70¢ coupon* good for half the price of your dispenser. Minnesota's Peat Bogs Are Studied As Potential Fuel Source

EDITOR'S NOTE: Peat bogs conjure up visions of mist and scary nights. In Minnesota a more practical use for the bogs than settings for movies or novels is being explored, as Jane S. Shaw of the Chicago bureau of McGraw-Hill World News reports.)

By JANE S. SHAW

Chicago — Anticipating a long-term shortage of natural gas in this country, many gas utilities are developing methods of converting coal to gas. But the Minnesota Gas Co. has what it thinks is an even better idea than coal gasification — a plan to make gas out of peat.

If gas can be made from peat, Minnesota is the logical place in the U.S. to do it. Within its boundaries Minnesota has half the nation's commercial peat bogs — about 7 million acres. (To be commercial, a peat bog must have a layer of peat at least five feet deep.) And studies sponsored by the Minnesota Gas Co. (known as Minnegasco) indicate that peat may be somewhat easier to gasify than coal.

Furthermore, the large peat reserves in Minnesota could make peat economically advantageous over coal or lignite, says Minnegasco Ass't. V.P. Arnold M. Rader. Also favoring peat gasification is the fact that while coal gasification has led to something of a rush to obtain coal reserves, there hasn't been such a rush to lease peat bogs.

Peat is an organic material made of partially decayed vegetable matter which has built up in lake beds for millions of years. It represents the first stage in the formation of coal. Traditionally it has been a major source of fuel where coal or oil is scarce.

In Ireland, which has used peat for home heating for hundreds of years, marshy peat bogs are a notable feature of the landscape; today the Irish peat industry is commercial, with most of the 3,500,000 tons harvested each year used as fuel to produce electricity or for horticultural purposes.

The Soviet Union is believed to be the largest peat producer; there it is also used as an electric power plant fuel; Sweden, East and West Germany and Denmark also produce and use considerable quantities of peat.

Minnegasco recently asked the state to grant it a 25-year-lease on areas in northwest Minnesota which contain 200,000 acres of commercial peat bogs. If current studies of peat gasification indicate that it would be commercially feasible, the utility believes it could start building a demonstration plant in about two years.

Undoubtedly, peat gasification would face many of the same obstacles that coal gasification plans currently face. Making gas from peat or coal is expensive and no one is quite sure whether enough money will come from federal sources and financial moneymarkets to bring gasification projects to full commercial scale.

In addition, peat poses a problem because it is so wet — in its natural state, it may consist of 95% water. Traditionally, peat has been excavated (often by hand-held spade) and then laid out on the marshland to dry. Although the Minnegasco hasn't ruled out sun drying, it is hoping to find a method that is more reliable and less dependent on weather.

Finally, the question of the environmental impact of peat harvesting must be explored. Minnegasco executives believe that use of peat for gasification purposes could be beneficial it might turn virtually unusuable peat bogs into land that can be tilled or forested. But the Minnesota Dept. of Natural Resources has made clear that an environmental impact statement will be required before it permits the state to lease any peat bogs, and it has authorized a study of the uses of peat and the environmental effects of its harvesting, to be done by the Midwest Research Institute.

So peat gasification has its obstacles to overcome, but it has some advantages that make it a likely candidate in the growing search for alternative fuel sources.

NU Law Students Plan Library Protest

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

University of Nebraska law students will hold a flashlight study vigil at midnight Thursday outside the new College of Law Building on the Lincoln east campus, as a peaceful protest against revised law library regulations.

Student Bar Association President Gene Crump said Tuesday the demonstration over access to books will first "highlight the problem."

Then on Friday, Crump said, he'll request an appointment with UNL acting Chancellor Adam Breckenridge and Libraries Dean Gerald A. Rudolph "to initiate a dialogue" based on "student solidarity" to seek changes in law library rules.

Student Bar Vice President Paul Canarsky said law students object to midnight closing hours that went into effect last spring, and the campus library fine system extended in August to include the law library.

Canarsky said "study and rally" demonstrators will gather in the law library at 11:30 p.m. Thursday, then move outside at midnight, "at which time we'll discuss the situation and what we're going to do about it, hopefully in an environment that's quiet enough (that) students who wish to study can continue to do so by flashlight."

Crump explained that law students have "different needs" of library services than other students who may get books from other libraries.

By contrast, Canarsky said, the Law College houses "the only library law students have" and "we should have access to facilitites at least a few more hours" than at other UNL branches.

Crump said the state law library also has limited hours.

Regarding the fine system, Canarsky said books on four-hour reserve, for example, "are used quite a lot" and "people have adhered to the restriction." But the law school "is small enough so that if a book is overdue, we know who has it and we can just go and say, 'I need that book.' "

Moreover, Canarsky said, law students follow a "code of professional ethics" which is a "much better system" than imposing book fines.

He added he thinks it's "ironic," however, that "the faculty is not bound by the fines," when they're bound by the same ethics code.

Dean Rudolph said he's willing to talk with law students "if they're interested" in changing the rules. "None of our policies are geared to inhibit the students from using our libraries."

Rudolph said the decision on midnight closing took into account general use of the law library and available funding for late staffing.

Regarding the system of fines, Rudolph said, he cannot "justify to a certain segment of the student population that 'You are liable for fines,' " while law students, for example, are not.

But the non-fining of faculty for overdue books is "the sore point with the whole student population," Rudolph said. He prefers to "do away with the fine schedule altogether."

Faculty fines can't be enforced, he said, whereas students with delinquent library records may have their records placed on hold. "Most people," Rudolph said, "do obey regulations."

Collective Bargaining Called 'Calm, Rational'

"Collective bargaining," Prof. John W. Robinson told the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Faculty Senate Tuesday, "is a calm, rational, non-flag-waving, non-self-centered way" to address faculty problems and needs.

Thus delivered, Robinson's one-sentence report on UNL faculty unionization efforts was a direct response to James H. Zumberge, who resigned as chancellor Saturday and told the Faculty Senate in a parting address Tuesday:

"Many (faculty) feel no other alternative" to achieve "recourse, redress" to correct the "imbalance" of faculty pay, particularly. Dr. Zumberge called it "most unfortunate" when an "education institution must come to the circumstance of collective bargaining."

He urged faculty to examine more than "self-serving solutions" because the "intellectual atmosphere" of UNL hangs in the balance. The "right attitude" in a "quiet, unemotional" approach can solve grievances, without outsiders stepping in and imposing unsatisfactory solutions.

The mandate implicit in collective bargaining "goes against that basic American principle" of rewards based on individual professional competence, Zumberge said, expressing regret that not all professors embrace "this kind of structure to achieve their ends."

Zumberge acknowledged there's "nothing that I count more as a disappointment in my (four) years here" than his inability to persuade the governor and Legislature of the need to improve UNL faculty pay.

And Zumberge said he regrets, because UNL "fell far short" of salary goals "three years in a row," collective bargaining now is emerging as "the only solution."

Robinson, president of the Lincoln chapter of American Association of University Professors (AAUP), said "Collective Bargaining Newsletter No. 1" has been distributed to faculty. He announced the State Court of Industrial Relations will consider the AAUP petition for an election to represent faculty in two weeks.

More than 60% of UNL faculty signed cards calling for the election, in a campaign sparked by NU Regents' temporary blocking of tenure in April to faculty who had qualified, and whom Zumberge had recommended.

Regents ordered NU system academic affairs vice president Steven Sample to conduct a "tenure density" study — to lead to new policy governing the number of tenure awards allowable among total eligible faculty members.

Sample told Faculty Senate members Tuesday he has no "firm recommendations" yet in the study due Oct. 1. But he shared some personal feelings based on his and faculty findings.

"I am very strongly against the concept of arbitrary quotas," Sample said, because they "don't address the question of academic quality."

He said the ratio of tenured faculty to the eligible total at UNL is 75%; at the Omaha campus, 66%, and at the NU Medical Center, 42%. He cited a "strong consensus" that the tenure fraction should be limited to 60%.

Yet there's "some valid basis for concern" about academic freedom, high faculty turnover, and "bringing in new blood," he said.

Alternatives being considered, Sample said, include requiring completion of the full seven-year probation period, and significantly raising academic standards for awarding tenure — separate from questions of pay raises and promotion.

Tenure should be "the most significant award the university can make for outstanding teaching or scholarship," he said, while salary and promotion should be interim devices to reward invidivual promise.

Sample said campuswide faculty committees could review tenure, and outside evaluations could be required before granting it. Also under consideration is a UNL bylaws change to establish a category for non-tenure-bound staff, to exclude it from campus tenure ratios.

Anticipating problems from raising tenure standards, Sample said it could result in denying the award to faculty more qualified than some who already hold it.

Zumberge Asks, Who's In Charge Here?

Solving two issues is "paramount" to the sound health of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, James H. Zumberge said Tuesday.

Zumberge offered his "constructive" perceptions — not "sour grapes" — in his last Faculty Senate address before the UNL chancellor leaves in three weeks for the Southern Methodist University presidency.

First, he said, the "legal question of where the authority of the Legislature ends and where the (NU) Regents' begins" is the "crux" of a "haunting and growing problem" requiring an "early solution."

"In recent years, I've seen the frustration index of the regents rise to an intolerable level," Zumberge said the "cherished goal" of campus autonomy and lines of authority have become "less clear" than they were four years ago, when he became chancellor.

That current "instability" wasn't caused "by a plan or scheme of the (NU) central administration," he said; rather, the governor wished "to deal with a single individual." Zumberge said NU President D. B. Varner had no choice but to accommodate that "pressure from the executive office of the state."

Further, the Legislature in passing LB610 — the omnibus NU budget bill — intended to "lodge more control in the hands of the (NU) president," Zumberge said. Varner "did not write that bill," and was "just as surprised" at the intent.

Those "very clear and very pointed" external pressures aren't what Varner anticipated four years ago either, Zumberge said.

The issues "will continue to cause very difficult times until they are resolved," he said, predicting they'll be "front-and-center" problems for at least a year. Meanwhile, a "level of uncertainty" will pervade the campus and the public.

"It will take some of the best statesmanship you've ever seen to make it work," Zumberge said.

NU Law Students Plan Library Protest

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

University of Nebraska law students will hold a flashlight study vigil at midnight Thursday outside the new College of Law Building on the Lincoln east campus, as a peaceful protest against revised law library regulations.

Student Bar Association President Gene Crump said Tuesday the demonstration over access to books will first "highlight the problem."

Then on Friday, Crump said, he'll request an appointment with UNL acting Chancellor Adam Breckenridge and Libraries Dean Gerald A. Rudolph "to initiate a dialogue" based on "student solidarity" to seek changes in law library rules.

Student Bar Vice President Paul Canarsky said law students object to midnight closing hours that went into effect last spring, and the campus library fine system extended in August to include the law library.

Canarsky said "study and rally" demonstrators will gather in the law library at 11:30 p.m. Thursday, then move outside at midnight, "at which time we'll discuss the situation and what we're going to do about it, hopefully in an environment that's quiet enough (that) students who wish to study can continue to do so by flashlight."

Crump explained that law students have "different needs" of library services than other students who may get books from other libraries.

By contrast, Canarsky said, the Law College houses "the only library law students have" and "we should have access to facilitites at least a few more hours" than at other UNL branches.

Crump said the state law library also has limited hours.

Regarding the fine system, Canarsky said books on four-hour reserve, for example, "are used quite a lot" and "people have adhered to the restriction." But the law school "is small enough so that if a book is overdue, we know who has it and we can just go and say, 'I need that book.' "

Moreover, Canarsky said, law students follow a "code of professional ethics" which is a "much better system" than imposing book fines.

He added he thinks it's "ironic," however, that "the faculty is not bound by the fines," when they're bound by the same ethics code.

Dean Rudolph said he's willing to talk with law students "if they're interested" in changing the rules. "None of our policies are geared to inhibit the students from using our libraries."

Rudolph said the decision on midnight closing took into account general use of the law library and available funding for late staffing.

Regarding the system of fines, Rudolph said, he cannot "justify to a certain segment of the student population that 'You are liable for fines,' " while law students, for example, are not.

But the non-fining of faculty for overdue books is "the sore point with the whole student population," Rudolph said. He prefers to "do away with the fine schedule altogether."

Faculty fines can't be enforced, he said, whereas students with delinquent library records may have their records placed on hold. "Most people," Rudolph said, "do obey regulations."

Collective Bargaining Called 'Calm, Rational'

"Collective bargaining," Prof. John W. Robinson told the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Faculty Senate Tuesday, "is a calm, rational, non-flag-waving, non-self-centered way" to address faculty problems and needs.

Thus delivered, Robinson's one-sentence report on UNL faculty unionization efforts was a direct response to James H. Zumberge, who resigned as chancellor Saturday and told the Faculty Senate in a parting address Tuesday:

"Many (faculty) feel no other alternative" to achieve "recourse, redress" to correct the "imbalance" of faculty pay, particularly Dr. Zumberge called it "most unfortunate" when an "education institution must come to the circumstance of collective bargaining."

He urged faculty to examine more than "self-serving solutions" because the "intellectual atmosphere" of UNL hangs in the balance. The "right attitude" in a "quiet, unemotional" approach can solve grievances, without outsiders stepping in and imposing unsatisfactory solutions.

The mandate implicit in collective bargaining "goes against that basic American principle" of rewards based on individual professional competence, Zumberge said, expressing regret that not all professors embrace "this kind of structure to achieve their ends."

Zumberge acknowledged there's "nothing that I count more as a disappointment in my (four) years here" than his inability to persuade the governor and Legislature of the need to improve UNL faculty pay.

And Zumberge said he regrets, because UNL "fell far short" of salary goals "three years in a row," collective bargaining now is emerging as "the only solution."

Robinson, president of the Lincoln chapter of American Association of University Professors (AAUP), said "Collective Bargaining Newsletter No. 1" has been distributed to faculty. He announced the State Court of Industrial Relations will consider the AAUP petition for an election to represent faculty in two weeks.

More than 60% of UNL faculty signed cards calling for the election, in a campaign sparked by NU Regents' temporary blocking of tenure in April to faculty who had qualified, and whom Zumberge had recommended.

Regents ordered NU system academic affairs vice president Steven Sample to conduct a "tenure density" study — to lead to new policy governing the number of tenure awards allowable among total eligible faculty members.

Sample told Faculty Senate members Tuesday he has no "firm recommendations" yet in the study due Oct. 1. But he shared some personal feelings based on his and faculty findings.

"I am very strongly against the concept of arbitrary quotas," Sample said, because they "don't address the question of academic quality."

He said the ratio of tenured faculty to the eligible total at UNL is 75%; at the Omaha campus, 66%, and at the NU Medical Center, 42%. He cited a "strong consensus" that the tenure fraction should be limited to 60%.

Yet there's "some valid basis for concern" about academic freedom, high faculty turnover, and "bringing in new blood," he said.

Alternatives being considered, Sample said, include requiring completion of the full seven-year probation period, and significantly raising academic standards for awarding tenure — separate from questions of pay raises and promotion.

Tenure should be "the most significant award the university can make for outstanding teaching or scholarship," he said, while salary and promotion should be interim devices to reward invidivual promise.

Sample said campuswide faculty committees could review tenure, and outside evaluations could be required before granting it. Also under consideration is a UNL bylaws change to establish a category for non-tenure-bound staff, to exclude it from campus tenure ratios.

Anticipating problems from raising tenure standards, Sample said it could result in denying the award to faculty more qualified than some who already hold it.

Zumberge Asks, Who's In Charge Here?

Solving two issues is "paramount" to the sound health of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, James H. Zumberge said Tuesday.

Zumberge offered his "constructive" perceptions — not "sour grapes" — in his last Faculty Senate address before the UNL chancellor leaves in three weeks for the Southern Methodist University presidency

First, he said, the "legal question of where the authority of the Legislature ends and where the (NU) Regents' begins" is the "crux" of a "haunting and growing problem" requiring an "early solution."

"In recent years, I've seen the frustration index of the regents rise to an intolerable level," Zumberge said the "cherished goal" of campus autonomy and lines of authority have become "less clear" than they were four years ago, when he became chancellor.

That current "instability" wasn't caused "by a plan or scheme of the (NU) central administration," he said; rather, the governor wished "to deal with a single individual." Zumberge said NU President D. B. Varner had no choice but to accommodate that "pressure from the executive office of the state."

Further, the Legislature in passing LB610 — the omnibus NU budget bill — intended to "lodge more control in the hands of the (NU) president," Zumberge said. Varner "did not write that bill," and was "just as surprised" at the intent.

Those "very clear and very pointed" external pressures aren't what Varner anticipated four years ago either, Zumberge said

The issues "will continue to cause very difficult times until they are resolved," he said, predicting they'll be "front-and-center" problems for at least a year. Meanwhile, a "level of uncertainty" will pervade the campus and the public.

"It will take some of the best statesmanship you've ever seen to make it work," Zumberge said.

To Your Good Health:

Burning Tongue Common Problem After Menopause

By George C. Thosteson, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am a woman 58 years old. I would like to know what makes the end of my tongue burn all the time. I was told it was because of a lack of hormones. But I take a hormone tablet daily.—Mrs. L.I.W.

The burning tongue is a common complaint among women after menopause. But the deficiency is more likely in vitamin B than in hormones. It can be a sign of pernicious anemia, but it can also be caused by something as simple as a habit of rubbing the tongue against the teeth, your toothpaste, or irritation from a food (nuts is an example). You should have a blood test to see if you are anemic.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Could you answer some questions about collagen disease? Is there more than one kind? Is there a rheumatoid collagen disease? Is collagen disease fatal? Is cortisone used for treating it? — J.H.

Collagen is the fibrous tissue that quite literally holds the body together. It is a fascinating material about which we know all too little, even less about what to do when something goes wrong with it. The name comes from the Greek words, "kolla" (glue) and "gennan" (to produce). About 40% of the body's protein is contained in this tissue.

A disorder in the material, which extends throughout the body and its organs, is called a collagen disease, or, more descriptively, a "connective tissue disease."

There are several forms. Rheumatoid arthritis is one, in which the joint tissues are involved. Other types involve the skin, the muscles, and the organs, even the cornia of the eyes. It can be fatal if the kidney, the heart, or any other vital organ is involved.

Since there is no specific treatment for any of the collagean diseases, treatment is limited to alleviating the symptoms. Cortisone is used to treat the inflammatory aspects, and quite effectively, too.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have been advised to have partial removal of my parathyroid gland because my calcium level reads "12." My doctor feels this is the correct surgery to lower high blood pressure and prevent kidney and bone problems.

I am in good health now, but I am skeptical about such an operation. I've had various tests and everything comes out "normal," so I feel the surgery is unnecessary. Should I listen to my doctor?—C.V.I.

You cannot say everything is "normal" with a calcium level reading of 12.

The parathyroid glands control the calcium level in the blood at about 10 milligrams per 100 cubic millimeters. The variance of even a few milligrams either way can be quite significant. A proper calcium level is important, for example, in maintaining membrane permeability. High levels can lead to a host of problems,

You require close observation to see if the high reading you report persists. If it does, you should certainly listen to your doctor. Surgery is the only answer to hyperparathyroidism, which, since it indirectly affects the organs, could indeed, have an effect on your blood pressure.

HEALTH TIP

FROM THE NEBRASKA MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

In numbers, drug addiction seems small when compared with alcoholism or venereal disease. The Nebraska Medical Association reports it is hard to know exactly how many people are addicted to drugs, but the toll in human suffering, disrupted lives and cost to society is devastating.

The sociologist looks at addiction as an environmental problem. The psychoanalyst sees addiction as a response to a specific family situation. Many see the problem as strictly law enforcement, while others take a totally opposite view pointing out that enforcement is not a cure, as evidenced during prohibition.

There is no general agreement about the type of personality of addicts according to the Nebraska Medical Association.

To Your Good Health:

By George C. Thosteson, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am a woman 58 years old. I would like to know what makes the end of my tongue burn all the time. I was told it was because of a lack of hormones. But I take a hormone tablet daily.—Mrs. L.I.W.

The burning tongue is a common complaint among women after menopause. But the deficiency is more likely in vitamin B than in hormones. It can be a sign of pernicious anemia, but it can also be caused by something as simple as a habit of rubbing the tongue against the teeth, your toothpaste, or irritation from a food (nuts is an example). You should have a blood test to see if you are anemic.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Could you answer some questions about collagen disease? Is there more than one kind? Is there a rheumatoid collagen disease? Is collagen disease fatal? Is cortisone used for treating it? — J.H.

Collagen is the fibrous tissue that quite literally holds the body together. It is a fascinating material about which we know all too little, even less about what to do when something goes wrong with it. The name comes from the Greek words, "kolla" (glue) and "gennan" (to produce). About 40% of the body's protein is contained in this tissue.

A disorder in the material, which extends throughout the body and its organs, is called a collagen disease, or, more descriptively, a "connective tissue disease."

There are several forms. Rheumatoid arthritis is one, in which the joint tissues are involved. Other types involve the skin, the muscles, and the organs, even the cornia of the eyes. It can be fatal if the kidney, the heart, or any other vital organ is involved.

Since there is no specific treatment for any of the collagean diseases, treatment is limited to alleviating the symptoms. Cortisone is used to treat the inflammatory aspects, and quite effectively, too.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have been advised to have partial removal of my parathyroid gland because my calcium level reads "12." My doctor feels this is the correct surgery to lower high blood pressure and prevent kidney and bone problems.

I am in good health now, but I am skeptical about such an operation. I've had various tests and everything comes out "normal," so I feel the surgery is unnecessary. Should I listen to my doctor?—C.V.L

You cannot say everything is "normal" with a calcium level reading of 12.

The parathyroid glands control the calcium level in the blood at about 10 milligrams per 100 cubic millimeters. The variance of even a few milligrams either way can be quite significant. A proper calcium level is important, for example, in maintaining membrane permeability. High levels can lead to a host of problems.

You require close observation to see if the high reading you report persists. If it does, you should certainly listen to your doctor. Surgery is the only answer to hyperparathyroidism, which, since it indirectly affects the organs, could indeed, have an effect on your blood pressure.

HEALTH TIP

FROM THE NEBRASKA MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

In numbers, drug addiction seems small when compared with alcoholism or venereal disease. The Nebraska Medical Association reports it is hard to know exactly how many people are addicted to drugs, but the toll in human suffering, disrupted lives and cost to society is devastating.

The sociologist looks at addiction as an environmental problem. The psychoanalyst sees addiction as a response to a specific family situation. Many see the problem as strictly law enforcement, while others take a totally opposite view pointing out that enforcement is not a cure, as evidenced during prohibition.

There is no general agreement about the type of personality of addicts according to the Nebraska Medical Association.

It's Quiet With Kids At School

By PATTY BEUTLER
Star Staff Writer

When you're used to the clump, crash, bang of little ones around the house, you learn to hear yourself think through the din.

Now many mothers who have sent their last youngster off to kindergarten are getting used to the strange silence that stays behind.

The change, they say, is just about as hard to take as steak would be for dinner over the usual hamburger fare.

For some newly liberated moms, it's the little things that can make the difference.

Private Bath

"Just to take a bath by myself and not have anyone watch," JoAnne Bettenhausen sighed.

With her 5-year-old son Brian now joining his 10-year-old sister at Rousseau School, Mrs. Bettenhausen is anxious "to do fun things just for me."

There's some adjustment involved, she said, since so much of a mother's life revolves around a child when he's young. "Now all of a sudden it's just me."

Mrs. Phyllis Henrichs, mother of four, is also reveling in her free time now that Wendy is in afternoon kindergarten at Randolph School.

Peace and Quiet

"I just like to sit up in a chair and have no one say 'Mom, can I have a drink?' " Mrs. Henrichs said. "I enjoy the peace and quiet, and sometimes don't even turn the radio on."

Although she's joined a weekly bowling league, Mrs. Henrichs has hardly changed her lifestyle. "I just kinda do what I want for two hours, not that I'd do a whole lot differently."

She says she was looking forward to this time because the kids were. "But I don't know how I'd feel if one didn't want to go to school and cried."

For the first time in 14 years, Marilyn Carr, the mother of three, will have some time to herself every afternoon when Jennifer goes off to school.

She plans to go shopping by herself and attend all the afternoon meetings she's always given up. And then there's fall housecleaning to do — "alone and uninterrupted." She's also hoping to get in a few sets of tennis after this summer's lessons.

Not Missed Yet

Because Jennifer is so happy with school, Mrs. Carr finds it hard to be sad that she's going. "Two hours is not long enough to really, truly miss her. Next year (first grade) is when the really big difference comes."

Marlene Ford also did not feel remorseful when Rusty joined the ranks of school-goers. The mother of four had been through it three times already.

However, she chose to have her son attend afternoon class so that mother and son might have some time together in the mornings. Besides, Rusty is a late sleeper.

No Boredom Yet

As far as sitting around doing nothing in her free hours, Mrs. Ford hasn't had that happen yet.

This year's president of Rousseau PTO, Mrs. Ford says the job is new to her and will require a lot of background work. Then there's sewing and refinishing furniture and preparing for the Sunday School class she teaches.

On top of all that activity, Mrs. Ford says she's "a person who likes to have a little quiet time to herself."

Sally Roper would agree. Now that her third child has entered kindergarten, she plans to do some catching up on all the half-finished projects she's got going.

"I really didn't feel any regret. John was so excited to go that it was exciting for me."

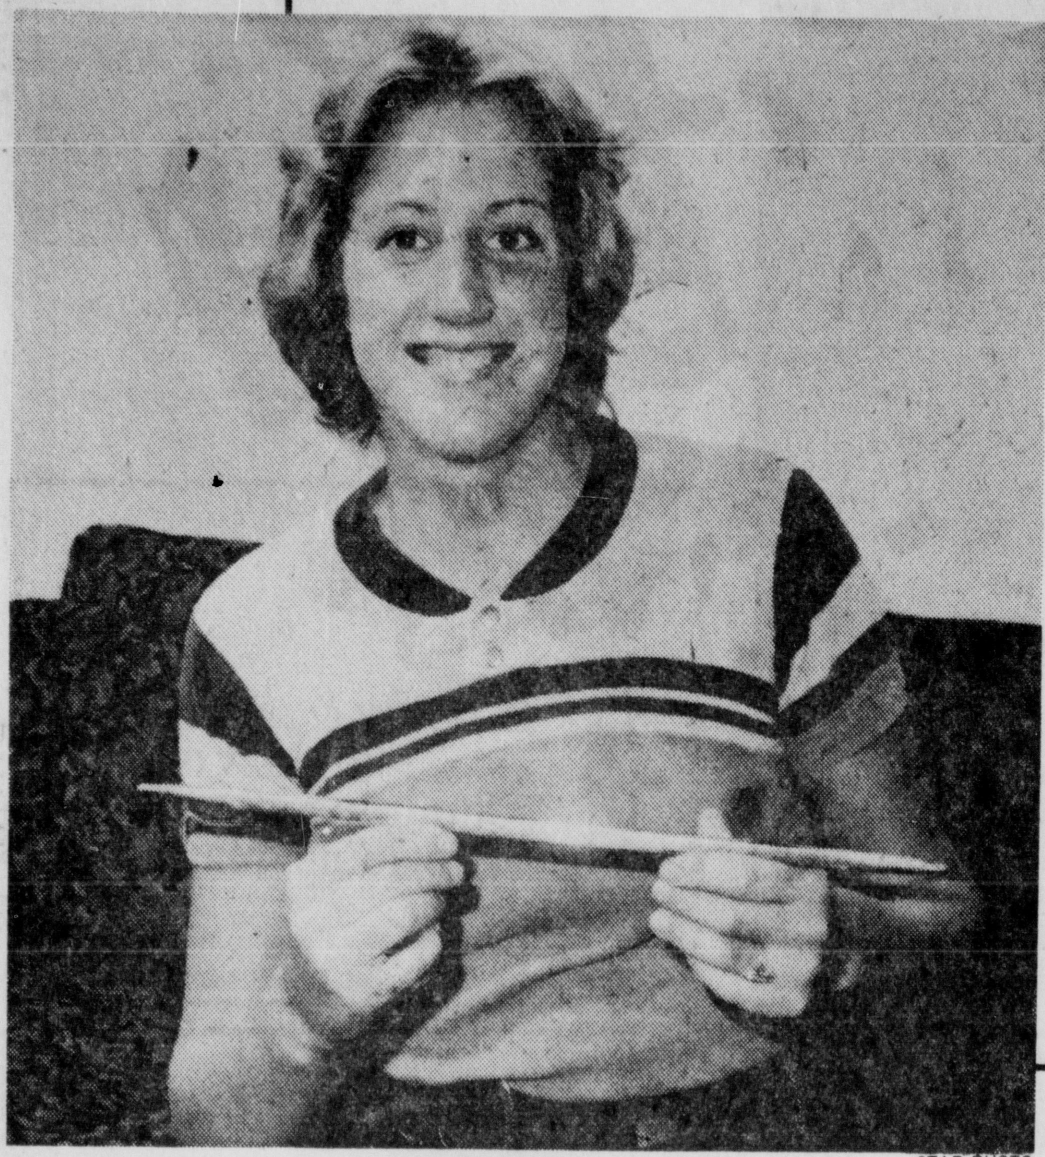
Help So Near . . . Yet So Far



STAR PHOTO

SOUVENIR . . . Ms. Bergstrom saving steel rod from leg.

By LINDA OLIG
Star Staff Writer

For 3½ hours, Joanie Bergstrom was so near, yet so far, from help and, possibly, death.

Her life-threatening situation was compounded by the fact that she was cold, frightened, hurt — and alone.

It all started out innocently enough. Ms. Bergstrom, a University of Nebraska-Lincoln student from North Platte, was driving to Omaha last Valentine's Day, following a few cars behind her boyfriend.

Smashed Up

Suddenly, she awakened with a start. The car windows were broken out. She was half-lying, half-sitting on the passenger side of her car. Her head and face were bleeding. Her right leg looked as if it "had two knees." Her shoulder hurt.

"Slowly, as I gathered my thoughts, I tried to understand what had happened," Ms. Bergstrom recalled.

Her injuries caused a six-week hospital stay and lengthy recuperation at her North Platte home. Ms. Bergstrom is back in Lincoln now, fully recuperated and picking up her life where it it left off Feb. 14.

But the memories are there. She'll never forget her emotions, her thoughts, her actions during those hours that she was trapped in her automobile.

'Don't Remember'

"I don't remember the crash," Ms. Bergstrom said. "All I know is someone ran me off the road" near the Greenwood exchange on Interstate 80. Her car was forced into the cement support and stopped on the shoulder of the highway.

Ms. Bergstrom was unconscious for a half hour . . . maybe more, maybe less.

"I started to cry. I needed help," she wrote in an unpublished story recounting her experience.

"I wondered why no one had stopped to help me," she said, her voice tinged with anger. The car was clearly visible; motorists continued on their way without even slowing.

Out of the darkness, she heard a loudspeaker. "I thought, 'Oh, the cops are here.' I was really excited."

But her excitement soon turned to despair as she realized the voice was coming from the weigh station across the four-lane interstate.

No One Answered

Her frantic screams for help fell on deaf ears. "I broke down and cried."

Ms. Bergstrom wondered why her boyfriend hadn't found her. Surely, he would have arrived in Omaha. Time would have told that something was amiss. It was later that she discovered that he had, indeed, been searching for her — ironically, he "kept driving over the overpass I was underneath."

Since help didn't appear to be coming, she decided to do something to help her own cause — to get out and flag down a passerby. The passenger door would not open, so she decided to try the driver's door. The impact had forced the steering wheel to the back of the seat; there was no way to slip past the obstacle. Exiting by the back door was equally impossible; the spare tire was in the back seat. "It was in the trunk when I left," Ms. Bergstrom said.

"I wondered how I had ever managed to survive such an impact," she wrote. As cars passed, "I screamed my head off." Fatigue and shock set in; her screams grew father apart.

Falling Asleep

She was sleepy. She was cold. "I was starting to fall asleep. I tried to keep awake because I remembered reading Jack London's 'To Build a Fire.' Before freezing to death you first fall asleep.

"I thought about death. I remembered how brave my younger brother had been only a few months before" while he suffered from a rare form of cancer, only to die a month and a half after the disease was diagnosed.

"I thought about my brother a lot," she said. "He was strong. He knew he was going to die.

"I couldn't lie here and die," Ms. Bergstrom said she told herself. "I knew I wasn't going to die so I thought about the good things that had happened to me."

Then she heard voices. "Is anyone over there?"

Was She Dreaming?

"I thought I was dreaming so I didn't say anything," Ms. Bergstrom ecalled.

"Is anyone over there?" There they were again. The voices were real. While two of the rescuers tried to calm the hysterical Ms. Bergstrom, the other two went in search of an ambulance.

The emergency vehicle whisked the injured young woman off to Bryan Memorial Hospital. Ms. Bergstrom never learned the names of those who found her.

The ordeal was over — she thought. Actually, it was just beginning. She had several operations — one to mend her ruptured liver, another to mend her leg. Three inches of the bone had been shattered in the accident.

Steel Rod Souvenir

In July, the steel rod inserted in her femur was removed. Ms. Bergstrom keeps it as a souvenir, a reminder of an ordeal she'll never forget. The four steel plates inserted in her leg will be there much longer, if not forever.

Her right leg is now 1½ inches shorter than the left. She has to have her shoes lifted and "when I try to walk perfectly my hips just ache," she said.

But she isn't wallowing in self pity. Ms. Bergstrom is swimming and riding her bike again. She's almost as active as before.

And she's back on the UNL campus more eager than ever to take a huge bite of life.

New York — "Susie Smith, a part, blue-eyed blonde, is the first woman crane operator in our town since World War II. The men on the job laughed and said she added a lot to the scenery at the work site."

Frivolous news items like this about women breaking into non-traditional jobs really irritated Betty Medsger, a freelance photo journalist who is "very much a feminist." But instead of sitting and stewing, she decided to do something about her anger.

So Miss Medsger, a 33-year-old resident of Washington, D.C., spent the year of 1974 traveling around the country, photographing and interviewing women in what were once considered men's jobs, as well as some in the so-called "women's jobs."

"I just wanted to show the incredible range of work done by American women," Miss Medsger said. "I also wanted to help put an end to the question, 'Is there some work that women can't do?' The answer is 'No'."

Among the women she photographed were a lobsterwoman from Maine, an oil rig "roughneck," a Playboy bunny, a truck driver who wears false eyelashes, a schoolteacher, a house painter, a police officer, a housewife, a pilot, a railroad engineer, a steel company president, a wheat farmer, a blacksmith and a clown.

Photographs of these women were displayed in an exhibition called "Women at Work" in the art gallery of the National Union of Hospital and Health Care Employes in the Martin Luther King Jr. Labor Center here.

It included 38 photographs that were taken from Miss Medsger's book, "Women at Work," published by Sheed and Ward, Inc.

"I had been wanting to do the book for several years, ever since it became apparent that the woman doing the non-traditional job was seen as an oddity, and was not taken seriously," Miss Medsger said.

During her research, Miss Medsger was chased out of a California celery field by a farm manager who thought she was an agitator for the United Farm Workers; rode the freeways of Los Angeles in the cab of a Mack diesel double trailer; and accompanied a Washington police sergeant as she responded to a report that a man had been decapitated.

Miss Medsger said her most difficult subject was Jackie Lacouture, a roughneck on the night shift of an oil rig in Lockport, La. Company officials forgot to notify Mrs. Lacouture that she was going to be photographed, and she "ran away into the night" when Miss Medsger arrived with her cameras.

"She was hostile because a film crew from a television station had shot some film on her," Miss Medsger recalled. "When it ran on TV, it caused the jealous wife of one of the male roughnecks to beat him up, slash his tires and break his car windows."

Help So Near . . . Yet So Far

By LINDA OLIG

STAR PHOTO

SOUVENIR ... Ms. Bergstrom saving steel rod from leg.

For 3½ hours, Joanie Bergstrom was so near, yet so far, from help and, possibly, death.

Her life-threatening situation was compounded by the fact that she was cold, frightened, hurt — and alone.

It all started out innocently enough. Ms. Bergstrom, a University of Nebraska-Lincoln student from North Platte, was driving to Omaha last Valentine's Day, following a few cars behind her boyfriend.

Smashed Up

Suddenly, she awakened with a start. The car windows were broken out. She was half-lying, half-sitting on the passenger side of her car. Her head and face were bleeding. Her right leg looked as if it "had two knees." Her shoulder hurt.

"Slowly, as I gathered my thoughts, I tried to understand what had happened," Ms. Bergstrom recalled.

Her injuries caused a six-week hospital stay and lengthy recuperation at her North Platte home. Ms. Bergstrom is back in Lincoln now, fully recuperated and picking up her life where it it left off Feb. 14.

But the memories are there. She'll never forget her emotions, her thoughts, her actions during those hours that she was trapped in her automobile.

'Don't Remember'

"I don't remember the crash," Ms. Bergstrom said. "All I know is someone ran me off the road" near the Greenwood exchange on Interstate 80. Her car was forced into the cement support and stopped on the shoulder of the highway.

Ms. Bergstrom was unconscious for a half hour . . . maybe more, maybe less.

"I started to cry. I needed help," she wrote in an unpublished story recounting her experience.

"I wondered why no one had stopped to help me," she said, her voice tinged with anger. The car was clearly visible; motorists continued on their way without even slowing.

Out of the darkness, she heard a loudspeaker. "I thought, 'Oh, the cops are here.' I was really excited."

But her excitement soon turned to despair as she realized the voice was coming from the weigh station across the four-lane interstate.

No One Answered

Her frantic screams for help fell on deaf ears. "I broke down and cried."

Ms. Bergstrom wondered why her boyfriend hadn't found her. Surely, he would have arrived in Omaha. Time would have told that something was amiss. It was later that she discovered that he had, indeed, been searching for her — ironically, he "kept driving over the overpass I was underneath."

Since help didn't appear to be coming, she decided to do something to help her own cause — to get out and flag down a passerby. The passenger door would not open, so she decided to try the driver's door. The impact had forced the steering wheel to the back of the seat; there was no way to slip past the obstacle. Exiting by the back door was equally impossible; the spare tire was in the back seat. "It was in the trunk when I left," Ms. Bergstrom said.

"I wondered how I had ever managed to survive such an impact," she wrote. As cars passed, "I screamed my head off." Fatigue and shock set in; her screams grew father apart.

Falling Asleep

She was sleepy. She was cold. "I was starting to fall asleep. I tried to keep awake because I remembered reading Jack London's 'To Build a Fire.' Before freezing to death you first fall asleep.

"I thought about death. I remembered how brave my younger brother had been only a few months before" while he suffered from a rare form of cancer, only to die a month and a half after the disease was diagnosed.

"I thought about my brother a lot," she said. "He was strong. He knew he was going to die.

"I couldn't lie here and die," Ms. Bergstrom said she told herself. "I knew I wasn't going to die so I thought about the good things that had happened to me "

Then she heard voices. "Is anyone over there?"

Was She Dreaming?

"I thought I was dreaming so I didn't say anything," Ms. Bergstrom ecalled.

"Is anyone over there?" There they were again. The voices were real. While two of the rescuers tried to calm the hysterical Ms. Bergstrom, the other two went in search of an ambulance.

The emergency vehicle whisked the injured young woman off to Bryan Memorial Hospital. Ms. Bergstrom never learned the names of those who found her.

The ordeal was over — she thought. Actually, it was just beginning. She had several operations — one to mend her ruptured liver, another to mend her leg. Three inches of the bone had been shattered in the accident.

Steel Rod Souvenir

In July, the steel rod inserted in her femur was removed. Ms. Bergstrom keeps it as a souvenir, a reminder of an ordeal she'll never forget. The four steel plates inserted in her leg will be there much longer, if not forever.

Her right leg is now 1½ inches shorter than the left. She has to have her shoes lifted and "when I try to walk perfectly my hips just ache," she said.

But she isn't wallowing in self pity. Ms. Bergstrom is swimming and riding her bike again. She's almost as active as before.

And she's back on the UNL campus more eager than ever to take a huge bite of life.

Cutesy Slant Avoided In 'Women At Work'

Line Exhibitionist Up For Psychiatric Help

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 72-year-old man. Two weeks ago when I went to my son's house, his wife greeted me at the door topless!

She said my son was not home, and she stood there smiling, then asked me to come in and have a cup of coffee. I didn't know what to do, so I just kept looking her in the face and told her I just remembered I had to meet a fellow in a few minutes. Then, I left fast.

I said nothing about this to my son or anybody else, but yesterday my son asked me to meet him at his house.

When I got there his wife greeted me at the door with absolutely nothing on! I told her I left some tools in my car and then I got into my car and drove straight home.

Abby, I don't think I can ever look that girl in the face again. I hate to tell my son, but if his wife acts like this with me, I am afraid she acts this way with others.

Should I tell my son or just forget about it?

NAME WITHHELD

DEAR NAME: Tell your son. His wife is in need of psychiatric help — and the sooner, the better.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I were married eight months ago. When I mailed the wedding invitations to his relatives who all live out of state, I enclosed a little note inside, which read, "Money would be the gift most appreciated."

The main reason I did it was to avoid duplications of gifts and to save them postage on the gift. I was only trying to do them a favor, but I got a lot of criticism for it.

Was that wrong? And if so, why?

MEANT WELL

DEAR MEANT: I think you were wrong. An invitation to a wedding should be just that — an "invitation." To express one's preference in a gift indicates that a gift is expected. And even more presumptuous is the request for money. A gift is a gift — not an obligation.

DEAR ABBY: Stick to your guns. You are right.

Nowhere in the Bible does it say the Jesus had long hair.

However, your correspondent referred to Jesus as a Nazarite! He is wrong. A Nazarite was a member of a sect whose male members took a vow never to cut their hair, shave their beards, drink wine or touch a dead body.

Jesus was NOT a Nazarite — he was a Nazarene, which means he came from the city of Nazareth. Jesus drank wine, touched the dead, cut his hair and shaved his face. Just keeping the record straight in . .

Opening lead - jack of spades.

There is more to the art of guessing two-way finesses correctly than meets the eye. The best players have a knack for guessing right far more frequently than they apparently should, but it's not just plain luck that leads them to the right decision so often.

Consider this deal where the play started with three rounds of spades. Declarer ruffed and was faced with the question of whether to play a trump to the king and take a trump finesse at trick five, or whether to take a trump finesse at trick four by playing low to the ten.

Declarer "guessed" right when he played a low heart to the ten, which won. He continued with the king, played a club to the ace, and cashed his ace of trumps, East showing out. South then ran his clubs and it did not matter when West ruffed, because that would be the last trick for the defense.

Had declarer played a heart to the king and then finessed the ten, he would have gone down at least one after a fourth round of spades by West.

Now let's suppose East had held the Q-8-5-2 of trumps instead of West. In that case, East would have won dummy's ten with the queen, but he would then have found himself helpless, whatever he returned. South, in that event, would have had ten unassailable tricks.

In effect, declarer's willingness to lose the ten of trumps to East and his unwillingness to lose it to West was a safety play covering every possible 4-2 or 3-3 division of the trumps. It was not so much a question of guessing which defender held the queen; it was more a question of guaranteeing the contract against any normal division of the cards.

Vietnamese Refugees Selling Hoarded Gold

By United Press International

Gold, the glittering wealth that has separated the haves from the have-nots since antiquity, is flowing from Vietnamese refugee camps at a rate of more than $40,000 a day.

Some refugees are selling wedding bands off their fingers.

Others have hoards of gold squirreled away in their belongings.

The two firms doing the most business have bought more than $3 million in refugee gold at camps in California, Florida, Arkansas and Pennsylvania. The going price is $193 per tael — three thin gold leafs weighing a total of 1.2 ounces used throughout Southeast Asia.

$10 Million Purchase Seen

One firm, U.S. Silver Corp. of Van Nuys, Calif., expects to buy $10 million in refugee gold when the Vietnamese get out of the camps and into American society.

"We expect to buy four or five times more gold then — $10 million would be a safe figure," said Richard Thies, chief economist for U.S. Silver. He said many refugees who fled South Vietnam are rich businessmen with "considerable wealth."

"They do have a lot of gold," he said.

His firm and another, Deak-Perera International, Inc., of New York, have bought $2.3 million in gold alone at the Ft. Indiantown Gap, Pa., refugee camp, according to an Army spokesman, Lt. Col. Hal Roeder.

A third firm, Manfra, Tordella and Brooks of New York, has bought another $600,000 at one camp alone.

Evan Ecko, branch manager for Deak-Perera at the Pennsylvania camp, said most refugees have sold gold in taels. But some have peddled gold jewelry, particularly wedding bands worth $10 to $50.

"Apparently many of the refugees left Vietnam without money or valuables and their wedding bands are the only things of value they have left to their names," Ecko said.

"We hear rumors all the time that some of the refugees have large amounts of gold they are holding onto. Now that they're in the United States, holding onto the gold and knowing they can get money for it any time makes the refugees feel a little more secure."

U.S. Silver Corp. refuses to buy wedding bands.

"Selling your wedding band is a personal thing and involves a lot of emotion," said Robert Rosebrock of U.S. Silver.

"If a person comes in and wants to sell his or her wedding band, it's probably the last thing of value they have. We try to encourage them to hold off and say that things will probably get better for them."

They Know the Score

Most of the selling is going on at Camp Pendleton, Calif., and Ft. Chaffee, Ark. Most Vietnamese know what they're doing and the gold market in the refugee camps is competitive.

"There's a price war on and it's very unprofitable for all the companies sitting there," said Luis Vigdor, assistant vice president of Manfra, Tordella and Brooks. "The Vietnamese are very wise. They shop around for the best price."

There is more to the art of guessing two-way finesses correctly than meets the eye. The best players have a knack for guessing right far more frequently than they apparently should, but it's not just plain luck that leads them to the right decision so often

Consider this deal where the play started with three rounds of spades. Declarer ruffed and was faced with the question of whether to play a trump to the king and take a trump finesse at trick five, or whether to take a trump finesse at trick four by playing low to the ten.

Declarer "guessed" right when he played a low heart to the ten, which won. He continued with the king, played a club to the ace, and cashed his ace of trumps, East showing out South then ran his clubs and it did not matter when West ruffed, because that would be the last trick for the defense.

Had declarer played a heart to the king and then finessed the ten, he would have gone down at least one after a fourth round of spades by West.

Now let's suppose East had held the Q-8-5-2 of trumps instead of West. In that case, East would have won dummy's ten with the queen, but he would then have found himself helpless, whatever he returned. South, in that event, would have had ten unassailable tricks.

In effect, declarer's willingness to lose the ten of trumps to East and his unwillingness to lose it to West was a safety play covering every possible 4-2 or 3-3 division of the trumps. It was not so much a question of guessing which defender held the queen; it was more a question of guaranteeing the contract against any normal division of the cards.

Vietnamese Refugees Selling Hoarded Gold

By United Press International

Gold, the glittering wealth that has separated the haves from the have-nots since antiquity, is flowing from Vietnamese refugee camps at a rate of more than $40,000 a day

Some refugees are selling wedding bands off their fingers

Others have hoards of gold squirreled away in their belongings

The two firms doing the most business have bought more than $3 million in refugee gold at camps in California, Florida, Arkansas and Pennsylvania The going price is $193 per tael — three thin gold leafs weighing a total of 1 2 ounces used throughout Southeast Asia.

$10 Million Purchase Seen

One firm, U S. Silver Corp of Van Nuys, Calif , expects to buy $10 million in refugee gold when the Vietnamese get out of the camps and into American society

"We expect to buy four or five times more gold then — $10 million would be a safe figure," said Richard Thies, chief economist for U S Silver He said many refugees who fled South Vietnam are rich businessmen with "considerable wealth "

"They do have a lot of gold," he said

His firm and another, Deak-Perera International, Inc , of New York, have bought $2 3 million in gold alone at the Ft Indiantown Gap, Pa , refugee camp, according to an Army spokesman, Lt Col Hal Roeder.

A third firm, Manfra, Tordella and Brooks of New York, has bought another $600,000 at one camp alone

Evan Ecko, branch manager for Deak-Perera at the Pennsylvania camp, said most refugees have sold gold in taels. But some have peddled gold jewelry, particularly wedding bands worth $10 to $50.

"Apparently many of the refugees left Vietnam without money or valuables and their wedding bands are the only things of value they have left to their names," Ecko said.

"We hear rumors all the time that some of the refugees have large amounts of gold they are holding onto. Now that they're in the United States, holding onto the gold and knowing they can get money for it any time makes the refugees feel a little more secure."

U S Silver Corp refuses to buy wedding bands

"Selling your wedding band is a personal thing and involves a lot of emotion," said Robert Rosebrock of U S Silver

"If a person comes in and wants to sell his or her wedding band, it's probably the last thing of value they have. We try to encourage them to hold off and say that things will probably get better for them."

They Know the Score

Most of the selling is going on at Camp Pendleton, Calif., and Ft. Chaffee, Ark Most Vietnamese know what they're doing and the gold market in the refugee camps is competitive.

"There's a price war on and it's very unprofitable for all the companies sitting there," said Luis Vigdor, assistant vice president of Manfra, Tordella and Brooks. "The Vietnamese are very wise. They shop around for the best price "

Wayne State To Abandon 'Trimester'

Wayne (UPI) — Wayne State College, beginning in the fall of 1976, will be dropping its "trimester" scheduling program, unique in the state college system, in favor of the traditional two semester system.

The trimester plan has been in use at Wayne since 1961. But Dr. Lyle Seymour, campus president, said Tuesday the decision to abandon the program "does not really represent a radical departure" for students or personnel.

In fact, said Seymour, the switch will result in a number of advantages to Wayne State students.

Under the new calendar for the next academic year, the fall semester will begin Aug. 30, 1976, and the second semester will end on May 5, 1977.

Seymour said what in the past has been the third trimester of the year (on other college campuses it is the summer session), which has been composed of two seven-and-a-half week sessions, will be replaced in 1977 with a short two- or three-week session followed by two five-week sessions.

In short, the campus president said, students will still be able to get their degrees in about two and two-thirds years by taking full loads each of the two regular semesters as well as the three summer sessions.

At the same time, he said those students who wish to transfer from one Nebraska public institution of higher learning to another will not have to sit out a few weeks. Under the trimester plan, Seymour said, the calendars of the various institutions didn't conform with that of Wayne State College and students were apt to get caught with some waiting time.

In other words, Seymour said, uniformity of calendars among institutions was a major consideration in deciding to abandon the trimester plan.

Another reason, he said, was to get rid of state accounting problems which require comparisons of one kind or another of one institution with another.

"We are now under the (state) management information system," Seymour said, which dictates the ability to, in fact, be able to view and compare institutions on a common ground basis.

Seymour also said the use of personnel and facilities was involved in the decision. He said as it turned out "not as many people were in that third trimester" as were enrolled in the others.

The normal enrollment of 1,900 dropped to 600 or 700, he said.

As to classroom changes affecting students that the decision will bring about, class periods will be cut from 60 to 50 minutes and actual in-class hours for a three credit hour course will drop from 43 to 38 hours per semester.

Betty Crocker Alive, Well And Living In David City

Omaha (AP) — Relax America, one of your favorite homemakers, Betty Brocker, is alive and well, and baking cakes and other goodies in her David City, Neb., home.

Several months ago the legend of Betty Crocker, a General Mills trademark for more than a half century, was shattered. The company acknowledged that Betty wasn't for real, but a made up person.

According to John Wickland of Minneapolis, a spokesman for General Mills, Betty Crocker was created in 1921.

Wickland said Crocker was the last name of a popular member of the board of General Mills' predecessor company, and Betty was a "good American name." So the company put them together, using the name to sign company responses to questions from homemakers.

The same year, 1921, Betty Jane Grogan was born in Chicago, and 28 years ago she married Donald A. Crocker, thus becoming "Betty Crocker."

AP

BETTY'S CAKES . . . 'good as her's.'

"I just claim the name, but not the fame, but my cakes are as good as her's," said the true-life, flesh and blood Betty Crocker in a telephone interview.

However, Mrs. Crocker has been having problems because of her name, especially since the General Mills announcement.

"Today was just a little bit too much to take," said Mrs. Crocker after getting nine telephone calls from pranksters. The calls have become so numerous that Mrs. Crocker has resorted to leaving the phone off the hook. She rejects the idea of getting an unlisted number, but she has entertained thoughts of a name change.

The calls don't just come from persons in Nebraska, but from other states as well. Mrs. Crocker can't figure out how the callers are getting her number, but she wishes they would stop calling at all hours of the day and night.

So far, the callers have been nice. About the worst one was when one caller asked Mrs. Crocker how her crumbs were.

Betty says she likes to talk with the unknown callers, but that it gets very tiring after awhile.

"It does get irritating. I don't want to be a complainer, but I do get tired of it once in awhile," she said.

Despite her famous name and a good hand in the kitchen, Mrs. Crocker has never won a cooking contest, in fact she's never entered one — because of her name.

There are other problems too. Mrs. Crocker said that every time she has sent coupons in to General Mills, she has received her letter and money back.

But Mrs. Crocker has made the most of her name, and gets a kick out of some of the odd looks she gets.

Two of her prized possessions are buttons given her by friends. One reads "Betty Crocker Week," the other says "Betty Crocker for Sheriff."

17 Named To Search For UNL Chancellor

University of Nebraska President D. B. Varner announced appointments Tuesday to the 17-member search committee to find a permanent successor to Lincoln campus Chancellor James H. Zumberge.

Dr. Zumberge resigned to become president of Southern Methodist University and will depart UNL about Oct. 1.

The committee met Tuesday — Varner said a chairman will be named soon, and ordered the members to report back with no less than six nominees by Dec. 1 after a nationwide search.

From the UNL faculty, committee members include Dr. Richard E. Gilbert, chemical engineering professor and faculty senate immediate past president; Dr. C. Cale Hudson, educational administration professor; Dr. Lowell E. Moser, associate professor of agronomy; and Dr. John W. Robinson, professor and chairman of the English department.

UNL student members are Carolyn Grice, of Omaha; James Macember, of Whitman, and Susan Reitz, of North Platte.

William R. Pedersen, county extension agent of Broken Bow, was selected. NU Alumni Association members named are Mrs. John (Beth) Klosterman, president of David City; S. Sam Jensen, first vice president of Omaha; and Dr. Robert Rosenlof, immediate past president of Kearney.

Members from the public are Mrs. Harold W. (Marian) Andersen of Omaha; William E. Colwell, State Colleges Board president of Chadron; and William C. Smith, First National Bank president of Lincoln.

Representing various levels of UNL employes are Lucille A. Griess, president, NU Office Personnel Association; Clinton A. Hoover, president, NU Association for Administrative Development; and William F. Swanson, NU central administration vice president and Btard of Regents corporation secretary.

Two ex officio members, with no voting privileges, will be Dr. Rena Boyle, dean of NU Medical Center Nursing College; and Dr. Edward Dejnozka, dean of the UNO College of Education.

Panel Named To Screen Candidates

A search committee has been named to select a district director for the University of Nebraska North Platte Station to replace Dr. Leo Lucas, who was appointed dean and director of the Nebraska Cooperative Extension Service.

Dr. Howard W. Ottoson, NU acting vice chancellor, said the committee will solicit and screen candidates for the position and hopes to submit a recommendation to the administration by no later than Nov. 15.

Members of the committee are: chairman, Dr. John B. Campbell, district Extension entomologist, North Platte Station; Dr. Darrell Watts, district Extension irrigation specialist, North Platte Station; Dr. Paul Nordquist, sorghum breeder, North Platte Station; Robert Kelin, Red Willow County Extension agent; Mrs. Elizabeth Kime, assistant home economist, Valentine; David Stenberg, Dawson County Extension agent, Lexington; Dr. Donald Sander, NU Extension agronomist; and Dr. Marvin Twiehaus, chairman of the NU Department of Veterinary Science.

Leuder's Bid Said Low On Medical Center Job

Omaha (UPI) — An Omaha contractor Tuesday submitted the apparent low bid for a more than $6 million project at the University of Nebraska Medical Center.

A Medical Center spokesman said Leuder Construction Co. topped a list of five bidders with a $6.5 million offer for the outpatient facility.

The architect's estimate vs $6.7 million.

The spokesman said the University of Nebraska Board of Regents would meet in Lincoln Saturday to consider the bid which also needs federal approval.

Construction on the expansion of the northwest wing of University Hospital is scheduled to begin in October. The contract calls for completion within 20 months.

Doing the subcontracting for mechanical work will be the Ray Martin Co., of Omaha, while Commonwealth of Lincoln will do the electrical work and Otis Elevator of Omaha, the elevator installation.

Wells Memorial Fund Established

The board of trustees of the Nebraska Art Assn. has voted to establish a Fred M. Wells Memorial fund. The fund will be used for acquisition of a work of art, probably a painting, according to Mrs. Carl Rohman, board president.

Donations may be made through the Lincoln Foundation or Nebraska Art Association at Sheldon Art Gallery.

Global Flight Takes 12 Days For Father, Son

Seattle (AP) — The flying Mucklestones landed in Seattle after an around-the-world flight in a single-engine aircraft.

Robert S. Mucklestone, 46, of Seattle and his son Peter, 20, arrived just less than 12 days and four hours after they took off Aug. 23.

If sanctioned by the Federal Aeronautique Internationale in Paris, their flight would be a record for a single-engine aircraft flight around the world.

The old record is 13 days, eight hours and 41 minutes, according to the agency.

The pilot said he was "a little bit sleepy" but "I really don't feel it too much at all.

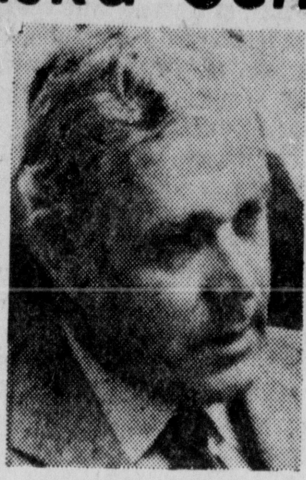
Tiemann Keeping An Eye On Nebraska Senate Seat



Norbert T. Tiemann

Omaha (UPI) — Federal Highway Administrator Norbert T. Tiemann said Tuesday he was leaving the door open to a possible return to Nebraska politics and was keeping an eye particularly on the 1978 U.S. Senate race.

If U.S. Sen. Carl T. Curtis, R-Neb., decides to retire in 1978, Tiemann said that "would be the seat" he would like to run for, adding, "I like to keep my options open."

"I spent most of my 51 years in the state," the former Republican governor said, "and I just can't walk away from it."

Clash With Exon

If Tiemann decides to seek Curtis' post, he could run head-on into Gov. J. James Exon, who many observers feel will seek the Democratic nomination. Exon defeated Tiemann in 1970 following a GOP primary battle between the incumbent Tiemann and conservative Clifton Batchelder of Omaha.

Batchelder's wife, Anne, is the current GOP state chairman, and Tiemann said if he did decide to run, his campaign would be a "repeat of 1966" when he built his own campaign organization.

"The Republicans in Nebraska are not under the leadership of anybody who would support me," Tiemann said.

Tiemann said during his four years administering the state he built a "record of accomplishment," and chided Exon for failure to keep up the imprint he made on the state's highway system, mental health and retardation program and education.

'Clean Up Mess'

"Some day along the way," Tiemann said, "somebody will have to come into the state like I did in 1966 and clean up a mess."

In the operation of his own office, Tiemann said "Nebraska piles up more complaints than any state in the Union."

"I thought it was just because I was there," Tiemann said, "but my staff assured me that it wasn't."

The former Nebraska banker said he was making a rare appearance back in the state and spoke to reporters prior to keynoting an Omaha Press Club seminar.

Unicam Questioned

Tiemann noted the states have until the end of the fiscal year to show they are enforcing the 55 mile per hour speed limit and questioned legislation approved by the last Unicameral.

That law, initiated by Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha, provided for an automatic $10 fine and no points taken off a driver's record if one was convicted or pleaded guilty to traveling 65 miles per hour in a 55 mile per hour zone.

"If it doesn't border on subterfuge," Tiemann said, "it's very close."

However, Tiemann said problems in acceptance of the 55 mile per hour speed limit weren't "unique to Nebraska," adding "It's not popular at all."

'Suspicion'

He said "12 to 15 states have some laws we are looking at with a great deal of suspicion."

Tiemann said he didn't believe in cutting off federal safety funds for the failure of the states to enact adequate motorcycle helmet safety legislation.

Cutting the funds off, Tiamnn said, "would wreck all the safety programs which are far more important than the helmet safety law."

Tiemann conceded his battle with Exon over billboards next to highways was an "overkill" on the government's part but "that was my only sanction" at the time.

When asked by a reporter if he felt federal agencies were overstepping themselves in regulating the states, Tiemann said they were. "It's a horrendous problem."

"A complete overhaul of regulatory agencies is needed," Tiemann said, "but that will have to come through Congress since these agencies are a creation of Congress."

8,100 Sign Petitions To Recall Lincoln County Commissioners

North Platte (UPI) — Petitions bearing the signatures of about 8,000 Lincoln County residents who are unhappy with county commissioner zoning decisions were filed with the county clerk Tuesday seeking a recall of the commissioners.

The petitions were filed with Virgil Burke, Lincoln County clerk. They were ones being circulated by Mrs. Max Vanarnsdale of Hershey and were filed by a group of residents who oppose the board's stand on land use zoning.

Mrs. Vanarnsdale said in a statement the commissioners, "contrary to the will of the majority of electors in the county, voted for adoption of a county-wide zoning plan that would materially affect the property rights of individuals residing in the county to their detriment."

Mrs. Vanarnsdale told newsmen the petitions had 8,100 signatures.

Burke said after receiving the petions he had 15 days in which to verify and certify the signatures.

Once that has been done, he said they would be turned over to the county commissioners, the subjects of the recall movement, who are responsible for authorizing an election for new commissioners.

Meanwhile, Burke said an opinion was being sought on the legality of the petitions from Milton Larsen, Lincoln County attorney.

The three Lincoln County commissioners are Jerry Calhoun of North Platte, Leo Gutherless of Maxwell and William Dymond of Hershey.

Ogallala Facing $5.5 Million Issue

Ogallala (AP) — The Ogallala Board of Education has adopted a school bond of $5.5 million for a proposed junior-senior high school for Ogallala. The board set the election for the bond for Tuesday Oct. 21. The school is to be located on a 35-acre tract of land owned by the school district. The board also added 300 seats to the school's planned lecture hall to boost its seating capacity to 1,000. School officials say the combined school enrollment will be 900 students. The present high school, built in 1963, is to be converted to a grade school if the bond issue is passed.

The Fairbury mayor will receive $1,600 a year, up from the present $750. Other hikes include the city attorney's pay from the present $1,500 to $4,800, and the city treasurer's salary at $1,500 yearly, up $300.

Tornado Blamed For School Drop

Omaha (AP) — Total enrollment in District 66 schools is down this year from a year ago, partly because of the May 6 tornado, administrators told the Board of Education. Bob Adams, associate superintendent for personnel, said a total of 8,688 students were enrolled in the West Omaha district's 16 schools, or 377 less than last year's enrollment. Adams said the biggest decreases were at Hillside and Westgate elementary schools, which were hardest hit by the tornado. He said more pupils were expected to enroll in the next few weeks as families continue to rebuild their homes.

Bingham Man Killed In Crash At RR Crossing

Bingham (AP)—A 31-year-old Bingham man was killed Tuesday morning in a car-train crash at a crossing on the main street in Bingham, according to the State Patrol.

Lyle Boots was killed when his southbound car collided with the eastbound Burlington Northern freight, investigators said.

Earle Annible of Alliance was the engineer on the freight train. He said the train whistle was blowing as the freight approached the crossing.

Bingham is located in extreme southeastern Sheridan County, 17 miles west of Hyannis.

The death was the 14th of the year involving a car and train and brought the 1975 Nebraska traffic fatality count to 241, compared with 276 on the same date last year.

Car Runs Over Omaha Girl, 11

Omaha (AP) — Police said Tuesday the death of 11-year-old Cynthia Wilmoth will not be counted as a traffic fatality.

The Omaha girl died in a hospital Tuesday of injuries suffered when she was apparently run over by a car.

Police said the girl and a friend got into a car parked in the driveway of a house. Officers said one of the girls apparently moved the gearshift lever, releasing the car from park.

The vehicle rolled backwards and the girl was run over when she either fell out of or got out of the car, police said.

Wayne State To Abandon 'Trimester'

Wayne (UPI) — Wayne State College, beginning in the fall of 1976, will be dropping its "trimester" scheduling program, unique in the state college system, in favor of the traditional two semester system.

The trimester plan has been in use at Wayne since 1961. But Dr. Lyle Seymour, campus president, said Tuesday the decision to abandon the program "does not really represent a radical departure" for students or personnel.

In fact, said Seymour, the switch will result in a number of advantages to Wayne State students.

Under the new calendar for the next academic year, the fall semester will begin Aug. 30, 1976, and the second semester will end on May 5, 1977.

Seymour said what in the past has been the third trimester of the year (on other college campuses it is the summer session), which has been composed of two seven-and-a-half week sessions, will be replaced in 1977 with a short two- or three-week session followed by two five-week sessions.

In short, the campus president said, students will still be able to get their degrees in about two and two-thirds years by taking full loads each of the two regular semesters as well as the three summer sessions.

At the same time, he said those students who wish to transfer from one Nebraska public institution of higher learning to another will not have to sit out a few weeks. Under the trimester plan, Seymour said, the calendars of the various institutions didn't conform with that of Wayne State College and students were apt to get caught with some waiting time.

In other words, Seymour said, uniformity of calendars among institutions was a major consideration in deciding to abandon the trimester plan.

Another reason, he said, was to get rid of state accounting problems which require comparisons of one kind or another of one institution with another.

"We are now under the (state) management information system," Seymour said, which dictates the ability to, in fact, be able to view and compare institutions on a common ground basis.

Seymour also said the use of personnel and facilities was involved in the decision. He said as it turned out "not as many people were in that third trimester" as were enrolled in the others.

The normal enrollment of 1,900 dropped to 600 or 700, he said.

As to classroom changes affecting students that the decision will bring about, class periods will be cut from 60 to 50 minutes and actual in-class hours for a three credit hour course will drop from 43 to 38 hours per semester.

Global Flight Takes 12 Days For Father, Son

Seattle (AP) — The flying Mucklestones landed in Seattle after an around-the-world flight in a single-engine aircraft.

Robert S. Mucklestone, 40, of Seattle and his son Peter, 20, arrived just less than 12 days and four hours after they took off Aug. 23.

If sanctioned by the Federal Aeronautique Internationale in Paris, their flight would be a record for a single-engine aircraft flight around the world.

The old record is 13 days, eight hours and 41 minutes, according to the agency.

The pilot said he was "a little bit sleepy" but "I really don't feel it too much at all

AP

BETTY'S CAKES . . . 'good as her's.'

Omaha (AP) — Relax America, one of your favorite homemakers, Betty Brocker, is alive and well, and baking cakes and other goodies in her David City, Neb., home.

Several months ago the legend of Betty Crocker, a General Mills trademark for more than a half century, was shattered. The company acknowledged that Betty wasn't for real, but a made up person

According to John Wickland of Minneapolis, a spokesman for General Mills, Betty Crocker was created in 1921.

Wickland said Crocker was the last name of a popular member of the board of General Mills' predecessor company, and Betty was a "good American name." So the company put them together, using the name to sign company responses to questions from homemakers.

The same year, 1921, Betty Jane Grogan was born in Chicago, and 28 years ago she married Donald A Crocker, thus becoming "Betty Crocker"

"I just claim the name, but not the fame, but my cakes are as good as her's," said the true-life, flesh and blood Betty Crocker in a telephone interview

However, Mrs Crocker has been having problems because of her name, especially since the General Mills announcement

"Today was just a little bit too much to take," said Mrs Crocker after getting nine telephone calls from pranksters The calls have become so numerous that Mrs Crocker has resorted to leaving the phone off the hook She rejects the idea of getting an unlisted number, but she has entertained thoughts of a name change

The calls don't just come from persons in Nebraska, but from other states as well Mrs Crocker can't figure out how the callers are getting her number, but she wishes they would stop calling at all hours of the day and night.

So far, the callers have been nice About the worst one was when one caller asked Mrs Crocker how her crumbs were

Betty says she likes to talk with the unknown callers, but that it gets very tiring after awhile

It does get irritating I don't want to be a complainer, but I do get tired of it once in awhile," she said

Despite her famous name and a good hand in the kitchen, Mrs. Crocker has never won a cooking contest, in fact she s never entered one — because of her name

There are other problems too Mrs Crocker said that every time she has sent coupons in to General Mills, she has received her letter and money back

But Mrs Crocker has made the most of her name, and gets a kick out of some of the odd looks she gets

Two of her prized possessions are buttons given her by friends One reads "Betty Crocker Week,' the other says "Betty Crocker for Sheriff"

Leuder's Bid Said Low On Medical Center Job

Omaha (UPI) — An Omaha contractor Tuesday submitted the apparent low bid for a more than $6 million project at the University of Nebraska Medical Center.

A Medical Center spokesman said Leuder Construction Co. topped a list of five bidders with a $6 5 million offer for the outpatient facility

The architect's estimate vs $6.7 million.

The spokesman said the University of Nebraska Board of Regents would meet in Lincoln Saturday to consider the bid which also needs federal approval.

Construction on the expansion of the northwest wing of University Hospital is scheduled to begin in October. The contract calls for completion within 20 months

Doing the subcontracting for mechanical work will be the Ray Martin Co., of Omaha, while Commonwealth of Lincoln will do the electrical work and Otis Elevator of Omaha, the elevator installation.

The board of trustees of the Nebraska Art Assn has voted to establish a Fred M. Wells Memorial fund The fund will be used for acquisition of a work of art, probably a painting, according to Mrs. Carl Rohman, board president.

Donations may be made through the Lincoln Foundation or Nebraska Art Association at Sheldon Art Gallery.

Meetings Law Covers Unicam

By DON BEMAN
United Press International

The Unicameral, despite the opinions of some, does fall under the provisions of Nebraska's open meetings law, it was learned Tuesday.

Earlier, UPI questioned a meeting of the Unicameral's executive board held Sept. 2 during which an attorney was hired to represent the Legislature in Beatrice State Home lawsuit settlement activities, a budget proposal was approved, plans for further investigations into the controversial bicentennial sculpture project were approved and $30,000 was set aside for a power rate study.

No notice of the meeting was issued, other than to executive board members.

Claimed Exempt

At the time, legislative employes told UPI the Inicameral did not fall under the open meetings law and at most only Legislature rules on meetings notices were violated.

But Tuesday, UPI learned the State Justice Department has held the law does apply to the Unicameral.

In an opinion written for Sen. Jerome Warner of Waverly, Paul W. Snyder, special assistant attorney general, discussed the term "public body" as used in the law and whether the Unicameral holds the kind of "public meetings" to which the law applies.

"The Legislature is clearly a 'public body' and does hold 'meetings' as defined in the act," Snyder wrote. "Therefore, the clear and unambiguous language of the act which reads 'Every meeting of a public body shall be open to the public' must be said to apply to the Legislature and its various committees."

On the possibility of constitutional exemption from the law, Snyder said, "The constitution does not exempt the Legislature from coverage."

The open meetings law does provide for "emergency meetings," the designation of which allows for exemptions from notice requirements.

Tuesday, legislative staff members said the Sept. 2 meeting, which was arranged the afternoon of the Friday before (Monday was the Labor Day holiday), was of an emergency nature.

They said the executive board needed to act quickly in order to hire an attorney to deal with the proposed out-of-court settlement in the Beatrice State Home case.

Lobbyist Hired

Ultimately hired was Arlen Beam, who is also a lobbyist for a number of groups, including segments of the building industry.

As to the opinion, Warner said it had no connection with executive board activities but instead was needed in order to plan committee activities of his own.

Warner told UPI in asking for the opinion he did not want to "run into the same thing the (University of Nebraska) Board of Regents ran into" when it held a breakfast meeting that was closed to the public and news media.

Lancaster County Attorney Ron Lahners decided in that case not to invoke penalty provisions contained in the open meetings law on the grounds that any violation by the regents was unintentional.

The Warner opinion was dated Aug. 29 and was marked received by the Legislature on Sept. 4, two days after the meeting of the executive board.

NU Collects Livestock Judging Win

The University of Nebraska varsity livestock judging team won first place in the intercollegiate livestock judging contest held in conjunction with the National Barrow Show at Austin, Minn., according to word received Tuesday from Prof. R. B. Warren, team coach.

Trailing NU, in order, were South Dakota State University, the University of Minnesota, Iowa State University and University of Missouri.

In a field of 76 individual contestants, four NU student judges placed in the top 20: Dick Wilson of Kearney was high individual; Andrea Roberts of Lincoln was ninth; Steve Betka of Fairmont, eleventh; Brian Thompson of Flats, fifteenth, and Dave Lamb of Anselmo, eighteenth.

Alternates in the contest were Mike Treffer, Broken Bow; Boyd Strope, Orhcard, and Delton Barr, Liberty.

Thurston County Given Caution Along With Spending Go-Ahead

By United Press International

The State Justice Department Tuesday told Thurston County officials state rehabilitation aid may be used for room and board jail expenses and administrative work release costs for Indians being held on intoxication charges.

The question on the use of the money was raised by Thurston County Attorney Mark J. Fuhrman of Pender.

But in responding to Fuhrman's question, C. C. Sheldon, assistant attorney general, said caution should be the rule in spending that state aid money.

Sheldon said the law clearly states the money that Thurston County, as a county with extensive reservation lands within its borders, receives may be used for law enforcement and rehabilitation.

The money, he said, is to be "divided as equally as possible between the areas of enforcement and rehabilitation."

Sheldon told Fuhrman in clearing the way for use of the money to cover room and board costs, "the process of rehabilitation may take many forms: physical, mental, moral and economic, to mention a few."

But the assistant attorney general said, while rehabilitation can include room and board expenses, "there is a school of thought to the effect that no one should be incarcerated solely because of simple intoxication." Thus, he said, some may not agree that state aid should be used to pay those expenses.

On that basis, Sheldon said, "a word of caution may be in order."

"Any very extended period of incarceration with no opportunity for work release and not attended by some affirmative rehabilitative action could tend to cast doubt upon the rehabilitative purpose and effect of the incarceration," he said.

As to those involved in work release programs and the resulting costs, Sheldon said another section of law authorizes Thurston County to participate in alcohol related programs to the extent of becoming involved with nonprofit corporations.

Committee Limits Investigation Of Electricity Rate Structures

By United Press International

The Unicameral's Public Works Committee Tuesday decided to limit a probe into electricity rate structures to the Omaha Public Power District and the Nebraska Public Power District.

The decision was made on a 5-2 vote on a motion from Sen. John Cavanaugh of Omaha.

Those committee members who voted for the motion — Maurice Kremer of Aurora, Richard Lewis of Holbrook, Jack Mills of Big Springs, Ralph Kelly of Grand Island and Cavanaugh — indicated that while the scope would be limited, the investigation would necessarily involve others.

Committee members noted that in NPPD's case, for example, any work on rates would involve some 25 rural power districts and municipal systems which buy wholesale power.

The decision was one of a number made by the committee as it prepared the specifications which will go out to consulting firms for bids on the task of investigating rate structures.

The committee also decided to place a 90-day deadline on the final consultant report, which would include interim progress reports at 30-day intervals.

Voting against the motion were Sens. Jerome Warner of Waverly and Irving Wiltse of Falls City.

Cavanaugh said he called for a limitation of some kind, even though in reality other power entities would be indirectly involved, in order to impose a lid on the amount of consulting work that would be done within the $30,000 approved by the executive board for the probe. Before a consultant begins to go to work on rates, however, the executive board must confirm the public works consultant selection.

The specifications brought before the committee by Lewis, who pushed for the probe, carried with it a stated objective, also a requirement established by the executive board.

That objective, according to the Lewis Plan:

"The objective of this project is to examine and isolate the methodology and components of the electrical energy rates charged by public power companies to wholesale and retail customers."

Restating concerns about power rates that have been voiced before, including on the floor of the Legislature, the Lewis plan said that "since 1933, no study of public energy rates has ever been done by the Legislature, even though it affects all Nebraskans."

Tiemann Keeping An Eye On Nebraska Senate Seat

Norbert T. Tiemann

Omaha (UPI) — Federal Highway Administrator Norbert T. Tiemann said Tuesday he was leaving the door open to a possible return to Nebraska politics and was keeping an eye particularly on the 1978 U.S. Senate race.

If U.S. Sen. Carl T. Curtis, R-Neb., decides to retire in 1978, Tiemann said that "would be the seat" he would like to run for, adding, "I like to keep my options open."

"I spent most of my 51 years in the state," the former Republican governor said, "and I just can't walk away from it."

Clash With Exon

If Tiemann decides to seek Curtis' post, he could run head-on into Gov. J. James Exon, who many observers feel will seek the Democratic nomination. Exon defeated Tiemann in 1970 following a GOP primary battle between the incumbent Tiemann and conservative Clifton Batchelder of Omaha.

Batchelder's wife, Anne, is the current GOP state chairman, and Tiemann said if he did decide to run, his campaign would be a "repeat of 1966" when he built his own campaign organization.

"The Republicans in Nebraska are not under the leadership of anybody who would support me," Tiemann said.

Tiemann said during his four years administering the state he built a "record of accomplishment," and chided Exon for failure to keep up the imprint he made on the state's highway system, mental health and retardation program and education.

'Clean Up Mess'

"Some day along the way," Tiemann said, "somebody will have to come into the state like I did in 1966 and clean up a mess."

In the operation of his own office, Tiemann said "Nebraska piles up more complaints than any state in the Union."

"I thought it was just because I was there," Tiemann said, "but my staff assured me that it wasn't."

The former Nebraska banker said he was making a rare appearance back in the state and spoke to reporters prior to keynoting an Omaha Press Club seminar.

Unicam Questioned

Tiemann noted the states have until the end of the fiscal year to show they are enforcing the 55 mile per hour speed limit and questioned legislation approved by the last Unicameral.

That law, initiated by Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha, provided for an automatic $10 fine and no points taken off a driver's record if one was convicted or pleaded guilty to traveling 65 miles per hour in a 55 mile per hour zone.

"If it doesn't border on subterfuge," Tiemann said, "it's very close."

However, Tiemann said problems in acceptance of the 55 mile per hour speed limit weren't "unique to Nebraska," adding "It's not popular at all."

'Suspicion'

He said "12 to 15 states have some laws we are looking at with a great deal of suspicion."

Tiemann said he didn't believe in cutting off federal safety funds for the failure of the states to enact adequate motorcycle helmet safety legislation.

Cutting the funds off, Tiamnn said, "would wreck all the safety programs which are far more important than the helmet safety law."

Tiemann conceded his battle with Exon over billboards next to highways was an "overkill" on the government's part but "that was my only sanction" at the time.

When asked by a reporter if he felt federal agencies were overstepping themselves in regulating the states, Tiemann said they were. "It's a horrendous problem."

"A complete overhaul of regulatory agencies is needed," Tiemann said, "but that will have to come through Congress since these agencies are a creation of Congress."

8,100 Sign Petitions To Recall Lincoln County Commissioners

North Platte (UPI) — Petitions bearing the signatures of about 8.000 Lincoln County residents who are unhappy with county commissioner zoning decisions were filed with the county clerk Tuesday seeking a recall of the commissioners.

The petitions were filed with Virgil Burke, Lincoln County clerk They were ones being circulated by Mrs. Max Vanarnsdale of Hershey and were filed by a group of residents who oppose the board's stand on land use zoning.

Mrs. Vanarnsdale said in a statement the commissioners, "contrary to the will of the majority of electors in the county, voted for adoption of a county-wide zoning plan that would materially affect the property rights of individuals residing in the county to their detriment."

Mrs. Vanarnsdale told newsmen the petitions had 8,100 signatures.

Burke said after receiving the petions he had 15 days in which to verify and certify the signatures.

Once that has been done, he said they would be turned over to the county commissioners, the subjects of the recall movement, who are responsible for authorizing an election for new commissioners.

Meanwhile, Burke said an opinion was being sought on the legality of the petitions from Milton Larsen, Lincoln County attorney.

The three Lincoln County commissioners are Jerry Calhoun of North Platte, Leo Gutherless of Maxwell and William Dymond of Hershey.

The board also added 300 seats to the school's planned lecture hall to boost its seating capacity to 1,000. School officials say the combined school enrollment will be 900 students. Tornado Blamed For School Drop

Omaha (AP) — Total enrollment in District 66 schools is down this year from a year ago, partly because of the May 6 tornado, administrators told the Board of Education. Bob Adams, associate superintendent for personnel, said a total of 8,688 students were enrolled in the West Omaha district's 16 schools, or 377 less than last year's enrollment. Adams said the biggest decreases were at Hillside and Westgate elementary schools, which were hardest hit by the tornado. He said more pupils were expected to enroll in the next few weeks as families continue to rebuild their homes.

Bingham Man Killed In Crash At RR Crossing

Bingham (AP)—A 31-year-old Bingham man was killed Tuesday morning in a car-train crash at a crossing on the main street in Bingham, according to the State Patrol.

Lyle Boots was killed when his southbound car collided with the eastbound Burlington Northern freight, investigators said.

Earle Annible of Alliance was the engineer on the freight train. He said the train whistle was blowing as the freight approached the crossing.

Bingham is located in extreme southeastern Sheridan County, 17 miles west of Hyannis.

The death was the 14th of the year involving a car and train and brought the 1975 Nebraska traffic fatality count to 241, compared with 276 on the same date last year.

Car Runs Over Omaha Girl, 11

Omaha (AP) — Police said Tuesday the death of 11-year-old Cynthia Wilmoth will not be counted as a traffic fatality.

The Omaha girl died in a hospital Tuesday of injuries suffered when she was apparently run over by a car.

Police said the girl and a friend got into a car parked in the driveway of a house. Officers said one of the girls apparently moved the gearshift lever, releasing the car from park.

The vehicle rolled backwards and the girl was run over when she either fell out of or got out of the car, police said.

Or Write P.O. Box 81689, Lincoln, NE 68501

When I received my football tickets this year there was a notice concerning new parking regulations this fall. Why have the police decided to be so strict this year and tow cars away when parking is so hard to find on game days?

—A.D., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Lincoln Police Inspector Dean Leitner says vehicles have always been towed that blocked traffic or caused property damage to citizens' lawns. However, he notes some parking infractions were tolerated in the past because of the limited parking that has been available. Leitner says there are now sufficient parking places available and notes new parking lots were noted on a map that should have been included with your tickets. He says the policy this fall will be to tow vehicles away that are parked between the curb and sidewalks or that are blocking and causing congestion of traffic after the game.

Once again it seems the city of Lincoln has managed to tear up a number of streets. Why are they doing construction work on 56th St. north of Holdrege?

—Concerned, Lincoln

DETOUR
ROAD CLOSED

ACTION LINE: Dick Erixson, with the city engineers office, says the city has already installed some storm sewers in this stretch of road. He notes there will be a few more days of work done on curbing and then 56th St. will be resurfaced. Erixson estimates the work will be completed in about two weeks.

Is it true that a person can now go around the crossarms at a railroad crossing, even if the red lights are blinking, and not be ticketed?

—Curious, Lincoln

ACTION LINE UPDATE: A new city ordinance permits this if the train is stopped or switching. However, the motorist must be cautious in exercising this option and can still be ticketed if it's felt he is racing the train through the crossing.

I sent a letter to Gurney Seed and Nursery Co. of Yankton, S.D. asking for a refund since the order I sent never arrived. I haven't heard anything from the firm, can ACTION LINE lend me a hand?

—C.R., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: The firm's customer relations department says it dropped a little behind on its correspondence this past summer, but has located your refind request and complied with it. The refund should be arriving in a few days.

My neighbors say they will be putting in a swimming pool in their backyard next spring. They don't have a fence and I'm worried about the safety of my own children. Are there any regulations dealing with this type of situation?

—Worried, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: There are local governmental regulations that require a fence to be built around any pool that is constructed. The regulations are quite explicit about the type of fence.

Theater Owner Sees Possibility Of Wider Strike

A movie projectionists' strike against Dubinsky Bros. Theaters may spread to all area theaters, Sarge Dubinsky said Tuesday.

He said negotiations over salary and money are "up in the air" after the projectionists made a "simply not acceptable" offer to a group of Lincoln theater owners, Dubinsky said.

Negotiations have been going on for more than a year and projectionists have been working reduced hours since April.

POSTCARD

by Stan Delaplane

San Francisco — On a sunny day, down to the drugstore to shore up the inner man. There's something for everybody in the drugstore.

The man in the white coat read the prescription. He said: "It'll take about 15 minutes to fill this. Do you want to wait?"

I said: "I'll just browse."

What a wealth of things in our drugstores today!

We can buy deodorants that pop-on, roll-on, stick-on, spray-on.

"Be safe all day," says the chick on the TV commercial.

The other day the director of National Parks said we should be careful using deodorants around National Park bears.

"Bears seem to resent the odor of deodorants and may attack the person using them."

You would think bears would resent you if you didn't use deodorant. But no, they prefer the way you smell naturally.

Thus the commercial, "Be safe all day" is all wrong in Yellowstone Park. You aren't even safe five minutes.

☆ ☆ ☆

The drugstores of my youth had mostly medicine inside. In the window they had enormous glass jars filled with colored liquids. Violent purples and flaming reds. They proved the druggist was a mystery man.

The man in the white coat filled the prescription by hand. He weighed out powders on a small brass scale. Mixed them up and put them in a bottle.

"That ought to do the trick," he said.

The powder tasted awful. "The worse the medicine, the quicker the cure," said my grandmother. "Open your mouth."

☆ ☆ ☆

The old drugstores did have a soda fountain. Nobody had discovered that ice cream sodas might give you more cavities than the other group.

We were all one group. Ignorant but happy.

Now in my drugstore I can buy a toothbrush that does all the work by electricity. Up-down. Up-down.

("That boy was not behind the door when the brains were passed out," said grandma.)

☆ ☆ ☆

In our wonderland drugstore we can buy paperback novels like "Jaws." We can buy cigarettes. And filters to filter the smoke out of them. We can get flashlights and batteries for transistor radios.

We can get liquor and, if it gives us acid indigestion, anti-acid pills to carry on the counter attack.

"Your prescription is ready," said the druggist. In these non-chemistry days he takes pills out of a big bottle and puts them into a small bottle. On the outside he types: "Take as directed."

☆ ☆ ☆

We can cure practically anything in our drugstore. "Anything else?" said the druggist. "Bathing caps are on sale today."

They don't sell many liquid patent medicines. It's been a long time since I saw any of Lydia Pinkham's cure for female problems.

My grandmother used to recharge her smelling salts bottle at the drugstore. I don't see those nowadays.

("Plague take it!" said grandma. "Where did I put my glasses?" And she took a couple of stiff whiffs of the magic bottle.)

☆ ☆ ☆

Smelling salts probably were phased out by tranquilizers. "Take three times a day as directed." We're a tranquil bunch. Groggy but game.

Grandmother said smelling salts put an edge on her like a razor.

"A whiff and I reckon I could climb a peach tree again," she said.

Meetings Law Covers Unicam

By DON BEMAN
United Press International

The Unicameral, despite the opinions of some, does fall under the provisions of Nebraska's open meetings law, it was learned Tuesday.

Earlier, UPI questioned a meeting of the Unicameral's executive board held Sept. 2 during which an attorney was hired to represent the Legislature in Beatrice State Home lawsuit settlement activities, a budget proposal was approved, plans for further investigations into the controversial bicentennial sculpture project were approved and $30,000 was set aside for a power rate study.

No notice of the meeting was issued, other than to executive board members.

Claimed Exempt

At the time, legislative employes told UPI the Unicameral did not fall under the open meetings law and at most only Legislature rules on meetings notices were violated.

But Tuesday, UPI learned the State Justice Department has held the law does apply to the Unicameral.

In an opinion written for Sen. Jerome Warner of Waverly, Paul W. Snyder, special assistant attorney general, discussed the term "public body" as used in the law and whether the Unicameral holds the kind of "public meetings" to which the law applies.

"The Legislature is clearly a 'public body' and does hold 'meetings' as defined in the act," Snyder wrote. "Therefore, the clear and unambiguous language of the act which reads 'Every meeting of a public body shall be open to the public' must be said to apply to the Legislature and its various committees."

On the possibility of constitutional exemption from the law, Snyder said, "The constitution does not exempt the Legislature from coverage."

The open meetings law does provide for "emergency meetings," the designation of which allows for exemptions from notice requirements.

Tuesday, legislative staff members said the Sept. 2 meeting, which was arranged the afternoon of the Friday before (Monday was the Labor Day holiday), was of an emergency nature.

They said the executive board needed to act quickly in order to hire an attorney to deal with the proposed out-of-court settlement in the Beatrice State Home case.

Lobbyist Hired

Ultimately hired was Arlen Beam, who is also a lobbyist for a number of groups, including segments of the building industry.

As to the opinion, Warner said it had no connection with executive board activities but instead was needed in order to plan committee activities of his own.

Warner told UPI in asking for the opinion he did not want to "run into the same thing the (University of Nebraska) Board of Regents ran into" when it held a breakfast meeting that was closed to the public and news media.

Lancaster County Attorney Ron Lahners decided in that case not to invoke penalty provisions contained in the open meetings law on the grounds that any violation by the regents was unintentional.

The Warner opinion was dated Aug. 29 and was marked received by the Legislature on Sept. 4, two days after the meeting of the executive board.

NU Collects Livestock Judging Win

The University of Nebraska varsity livestock judging team won first place in the intercollegiate livestock judging contest held in conjunction with the National Barrow Show at Austin, Minn., according to word received Tuesday from Prof. R. B. Warren, team coach.

Trailing NU, in order, were South Dakota State University, the University of Minnesota, Iowa State University and University of Missouri.

In a field of 76 individual contestants, four NU student judges placed in the top 20: Dick Wilson of Kearney was high individual; Andrea Roberts of Lincoln was ninth; Steve Betka of Fairmont, eleventh; Brian Thompson of Flats, fifteenth, and Dave Lamb of Anselmo, eighteenth.

Alternates in the contest were Mike Treffer, Broken Bow; Boyd Strope, Orhcard, and Delton Barr, Liberty.

Thurston County Given Caution Along With Spending Go-Ahead

By United Press International

The State Justice Department Tuesday told Thurston County officials state rehabilitation aid may be used for room and board jail expenses and administrative work release costs for Indians being held on intoxication charges.

The question on the use of the money was raised by Thurston County Attorney Mark J. Fuhrman of Pender.

But in responding to Fuhrman's question, C. C. Sheldon, assistant attorney general, said caution should be the rule in spending that state aid money.

Sheldon said the law clearly states the money that Thurston County, as a county with extensive reservation lands within its borders, receives may be used for law enforcement and rehabilitation.

The money, he said, is to be "divided as equally as possible between the areas of enforcement and rehabilitation."

Sheldon told Fuhrman in clearing the way for use of the money to cover room and board costs, "the process of rehabilitation may take many forms: physical, mental, moral and economic, to mention a few."

But the assistant attorney general said, while rehabilitation can include room and board expenses, "there is a school of thought to the effect that no one should be incarcerated solely because of simple intoxication." Thus, he said, some may not agree that state aid should be used to pay those expenses.

On that basis, Sheldon said, "a word of caution may be in order."

"Any very extended period of incarceration with no opportunity for work release and not attended by some affirmative rehabilitative action could tend to cast doubt upon the rehabilitative purpose and effect of the incarceration," he said.

As to those involved in work release programs and the resulting costs, Sheldon said another section of law authorizes Thurston County to participate in alcohol related programs to the extent of becoming involved with nonprofit corporations.

Committee Limits Investigation Of Electricity Rate Structures

By United Press International

The Unicameral's Public Works Committee Tuesday decided to limit a probe into electricity rate structures to the Omaha Public Power District and the Nebraska Public Power District.

The decision was made on a 5-2 vote on a motion from Sen. John Cavanaugh of Omaha.

Those committee members who voted for the motion — Maurice Kremer of Aurora, Richard Lewis of Holbrook, Jack Mills of Big Springs, Ralph Kelly of Grand Island and Cavanaugh — indicated that while the scope would be limited, the investigation would necessarily involve others.

Committee members noted that in NPPD's case, for example, any work on rates would involve some 25 rural power districts and municipal systems which buy wholesale power.

The decision was one of a number made by the committee as it prepared the specifications which will go out to consulting firms for bids on the task of investigating rate structures.

The committee also decided to place a 90-day deadline on the final consultant report, which would include interim progress reports at 30-day intervals.

Voting against the motion were Sens. Jerome Warner of Waverly and Irving Wiltse of Falls City.

Cavanaugh said he called for a limitation of some kind, even though in reality other power entities would be indirectly involved, in order to impose a lid on the amount of consulting work that would be done within the $30,000 approved by the executive board for the probe. Before a consultant begins to go to work on rates, however, the executive board must confirm the public works consultant selection.

The specifications brought before the committee by Lewis, who pushed for the probe, carried with it a stated objective, also a requirement established by the executive board.

That objective, according to the Lewis Plan:

"The objective of this project is to examine and isolate the methodology and components of the electrical energy rates charged by public power companies to wholesale and retail customers."

Restating concerns about power rates that have been voiced before, including on the floor of the Legislature, the Lewis plan said that "since 1933, no study of public energy rates has ever been done by the Legislature, even though it affects all Nebraskans."

Three Men Sentenced

Three men believed involved in passing a total of $15,000 to $20,000 in bad checks in six Nebraska cities this summer were each sentenced to 1½ to 3 years at the Nebraska Penal and Corrections Complex.

Terry A. Wade, 22, Duane Wade, 23, and Gary Wade, 24, all of Columbus, Ohio, had early pleaded guilty to a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses.

An original charge of possession of a forged instrument was amended for all three men.

The sentences handed down by Lancaster County District Court Judge Samuel Van Pelt, included a 47-day credit for the time spent in the county jail.

A fourth member of the alleged check passing group, Cheryl Irvine, of Columbus, Ohio, was earlier sentenced to 18 months to 3 years at the Women's Reformatory in York after pleading guilty to possession of a forged instrument.

Seward Airport Voted On

By TOM COOK
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Seward — Members of the Seward Chamber of Commerce issued a strong vote against the proposed airport at a Tuesday night meeting.

The stand reverses the group's earlier support for the project.

However, it is unclear what the consequences of Tuesday night's vote will be.

The question of an airport for Seward, planned for two miles south of town, has been hotly debated recently and has resulted in bitter differences of opinion. The major complaint has been that Seward citizens were not given a chance to vote on the issue.

Two questions asked in the special chamber ballot were: Are you in favor of the proposed plans for the Seward municipal airport? (31 yes, 144 no) Do you think the citizens of Seward should have the right to vote on the airport project? (160 yes, 24 no).

Out of the 275 ballots mailed out last week, 186 were returned.

All the arrangements for the airport have been completed by the Seward Airport Authority, and only await the majority vote of the authority before construction begins.

Jack Berger, president of the Seward Chamber of Commerce, said it is unclear what the chamber vote means.

"I don't know what they're going to do. To me the resolution is a little late," he said. "We've been working on this for nine years and it's ready to go."

Hitchhiker Takes Car At Gunpoint

North Platte (UPI) — The Nebraska State Patrol, as well as Colorado and Wyoming authorities, were searching Tuesday for a hitchhiker who forced three persons from an automobile on Interstate 80 at gunpoint and got away with the veihcle and some cash.

The patrol's North Platte office said the incident took place about 8 a.m. Tuesday on the interstate between Brady and Gothenburg.

The man was described as black, 6-foot-2, 230 pounds, wearing a black and white striped shirt, brown jacket and brown tweed trousers. The patrol warned that the man is armed and urged caution should he be spotted.

The car taken was described as a 1965 brown two-door Ford with Illinois in-transit plates.

The patrol said the three occupants of the car, a man, his wife and a friend, apparently picked the man up on the interstate near Lincoln. He was carrying only a green duffle bag. He later produced a handgun.

IBM Unveils Desk-Top Computer

New York (AP) — A new portable, desk-top computer only slightly larger than a typewriter was introduced by International Business Meachines Corp.

Called the IBM 5100, the 12 models unveiled will cost from $8,975 to $19,975, and will be available only by purchase and not be leased as many other computer lines now are.

Customer deliveries are scheduled for this month, the computer giant said.

C. B. Rogers, Jr., IBM vice president and president of the general systems division, said the IBM 5100 uses the latest computer technology. In the late 1960s, he said, a computer with the 5100's performance characteristics would have been nearly as large as two desks and would weigh about half a ton, instead of its present 50-pound weight.

Paging System Breaks Down

A malfunctioning transmitter has interrupted the radio-telephone paging system operated by Lincoln Telephone & Telegraph, a spokesman said Tuesday.

The spokesman said the transmitter, located in the LT&T building at 15th and M, will be repaired by Wednesday afternoon if not sooner.

The paging system enables a person carrying a pocket-sized receiver to be contacted when a special telephone number is dialed. It is used primarily by doctors, the spokesman said.

When I received my football tickets this year there was a notice concerning new parking regulations this fall. Why have the police decided to be so strict this year and tow cars away when parking is so hard to find on game days?

—A.D., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Lincoln Police Inspector Dean Leitner says vehicles have always been towed that blocked traffic or caused property damage to citizens' lawns. However, he notes some parking infractions were tolerated in the past because of the limited parking that has been available. Leitner says there are now sufficient parking places available and notes new parking lots were noted on a map that should have been included with your tickets. He says the policy this fall will be to tow vehicles away that are parked between the curb and sidewalks or that are blocking and causing congestion of traffic after the game.

Once again it seems the city of Lincoln has managed to tear up a number of streets. Why are they doing construction work on 56th St. north of Holdrege?

—Concerned, Lincoln

ROAD CLOSED
DETOUR

ACTION LINE: Dick Erixson, with the city engineers office, says the city has already installed some storm sewers in this stretch of road. He notes there will be a few more days of work done on curbing and then 56th St. will be resurfaced. Erixson estimates the work will be completed in about two weeks.

Is it true that a person can now go around the crossarms at a railroad crossing, even if the red lights are blinking, and not be ticketed?

—Curious, Lincoln

ACTION LINE UPDATE: A new city ordinance permits this if the train is stopped or switching. However, the motorist must be cautious in exercising this option and can still be ticketed if it's felt he is racing the train through the crossing.

I sent a letter to Gurney Seed and Nursery Co. of Yankton, S.D. asking for a refund since the order I sent never arrived. I haven't heard anything from the firm, can ACTION LINE lend me a hand?

—C.R., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: The firm's customer relations department says it dropped a little behind on its correspondence this past summer, but has located your refind request and complied with it. The refund should be arriving in a few days.

My neighbors say they will be putting in a swimming pool in their backyard next spring. They don't have a fence and I'm worried about the safety of my own children. Are there any regulations dealing with this type of situation?

—Worried, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: There are local governmental regulations that require a fence to be built around any pool that is constructed. The regulations are quite explicit about the type of fence.

Theater Owner Sees Possibility Of Wider Strike

A movie projectionists' strike against Dubinsky Bros. Theaters may spread to all area theaters, Sarge Dubinsky said Tuesday.

He said negotiations over salary and money are "up in the air" after the projectionists made a "simply not acceptable" offer to a group of Lincoln theater owners, Dubinsky said.

Negotiations have been going on for more than a year and projectionists have been working reduced hours since April.

POSTCARD

by Stan Delaplane

San Francisco — On a sunny day, down to the drugstore to shore up the inner man. There's something for everybody in the drugstore.

The man in the white coat read the prescription. He said: "It'll take about 15 minutes to fill this. Do you want to wait?"

I said: "I'll just browse."

What a wealth of things in our drugstores today!

We can buy deodorants that pop-on, roll-on, stick-on, spray-on.

"Be safe all day," says the chick on the TV commercial.

The other day the director of National Parks said we should be careful using deodorants around National Park bears.

"Bears seem to resent the odor of deodorants and may attack the person using them."

You would think bears would resent you if you didn't use deodorant. But no, they prefer the way you smell naturally.

Thus the commercial, "Be safe all day" is all wrong in Yellowstone Park. You aren't even safe five minutes.

☆ ☆ ☆

The drugstores of my youth had mostly medicine inside. In the window they had enormous glass jars filled with colored liquids. Violent purples and flaming reds. They proved the druggist was a mystery man.

The man in the white coat filled the prescription by hand. He weighed out powders on a small brass scale. Mixed them up and put them in a bottle.

"That ought to do the trick," he said.

The powder tasted awful. "The worse the medicine, the quicker the cure," said my grandmother. "Open your mouth."

☆ ☆ ☆

The old drugstores did have a soda fountain. Nobody had discovered that ice cream sodas might give you more cavities than the other group.

We were all one group. Ignorant but happy.

Now in my drugstore I can buy a toothbrush that does all the work by electricity. Up-down. Up-down.

("That boy was not behind the door when the brains were passed out," said grandma.)

☆ ☆ ☆

In our wonderland drugstore we can buy paperback novels like "Jaws." We can buy cigarettes. And filters to filter the smoke out of them. We can get flashlights and batteries for transistor radios.

We can get liquor and, if it gives us acid indigestion, antiacid pills to carry on the counter attack.

"Your prescription is ready," said the druggist. In these nonchemistry days he takes pills out of a big bottle and puts them into a small bottle. On the outside he types: "Take as directed."

☆ ☆ ☆

We can cure practically anything in our drugstore. "Anything else?" said the druggist. "Bathing caps are on sale today."

They don't sell many liquid patent medicines. It's been a long time since I saw any of Lydia Pinkham's cure for female problems.

My grandmother used to recharge her smelling salts bottle at the drugstore. I don't see those nowadays.

("Plague take it!" said grandma. "Where did I put my glasses?" And she took a couple of stiff whiffs of the magic bottle.)

☆ ☆ ☆

Smelling salts probably were phased out by tranquilizers. "Take three times a day as directed." We're a tranquil bunch. Groggy but game.

Grandmother said smelling salts put an edge on her like a razor.

"A whiff and I reckon I could climb a peach tree again," she said.

Ed Board Denies Speech Therapy For Parochial Schools

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

The Lincoln Board of Education denied Tuesday a request by The Rev. James Dawson to provide speech therapy services in parochial schools.

The vote was 5-0-1, with Lu Pansing abstaining.

In offering the motion, Pearl Goldenstein cited her "respect" for Father Dawson, superintendent of the Lincoln Catholic Schools, and for their attorney, former Gov. Robert Crosby.

But Mrs. Goldenstein said, "I feel strongly about the separation of church and state." While the public schools "are making as many provisions as we can" for non-public school students, it's "with regret I move the request be denied."

Under the Catholic Schools proposal, the public district would lease parochial classroom space and provide a public school teacher to rove among the buildings, serving 75 children.

Supt. John Prasch said speech therapy programs are available on the same basis for parochial and public school students, who have equal access to the services in public school buildings.

Father Dawson said he believes it's "disruptive" for parochial students to be required to walk any distance to public schools for speech therapy. Crosby said it's disruptive for them emotionally and psychologically, as well.

Crosby cited what he said is precedent for public schools to lease parochial classroom space, which in effect then comes under public control. The Nebraska Supreme Court in the Hartington decision upheld the concept.

The Nebraska attorney general's office has declared the concept permissible but not required, which Crosby acknowledged.

In recommending against the request, Prasch said, "The larger issue is protection of the principle of church and state" while complying with the law.

The Hartington case was based on lack of available space in that Nebraska public school district. For Lincoln, with "no such shortage," Prasch said leasing classrooms in parochial schools "is simply a way of 'getting around' the restrictions of the law."

Prasch said temporarily selling part of a parochial school to run a public program represents a sacrifice, in this case, by parents of Catholic school children, "who have the most at stake in this issue."

But accepting "public money to support the program by any guise is the first step toward destruction of the independence that private and parochial schools enjoy and rightfully deserve."

Crosby said denying the request would represent a change in Lincoln board policy.

Prasch explained that two years ago, space in parochial schools was leased under Title I programs paid by federal funds for disadvantaged students. That was discontinued last year, as state law (LB403) disallowed the federal support.

Prasch said LB403 places no requirement on the board to provide speech therapy at parochial schools, as long as services for all handicapped children are being offered.

Public school children in other special education programs must be transported to limited attendance centers, he said.

Prasch discounted the argument that LB403 intends the state to pay $9 of $10 in special education costs that exceed regular program expenses. He reasoned that the public district must first pay the bill with public money before getting state reimbursement.

Board President Louis Roper said that the 90-10% state-local mix of excess cost payments is misleading anyway. He said the Legislature has not yet provided sufficient LB403 reimbursement funds, forcing public school taxpayers to pay the missing dollars for the required programs.

Mrs. Pansing asked Crosby, "Can the Catholic schools help" to pay for speech therapy programs in their own schools? He replied that Catholic parents already "pay 100% of the public school taxes" and an additional burden would be "discriminatory."

Mrs. Pansing said it "worries me that we can't help these children, too."

Lincoln board attorney Edwin C. Perry said it might possibly be unconstitutional to lease such space, if the action were based on the state attorney's opinion, which hasn't the effect of a constitutional interpretation by the Supreme Court.

United Way Drive 15% Toward Goal

The 1976 Lincoln-Lancaster United Way campaign, launched Tuesday morning, is already 15% of the way toward its nearly $1.5 million goal.

Donations during the pilot campaign plus corporate gifts have brought in approximately $229,000.

The hoped-for $1,498,100 will support some 25 United Way-affiliated social service agencies.

Pastor Jerry Dunn of the People's City Mission told the campaign volunteers and agency executives attending the kickoff in the Lincoln Foundation Garden that United Way dollars come "from the heart of this community."

He said the one general fund drive conducted by Lincoln Community Services "sets us (agencies) free" to look after people-serving functions rather than having to worry about generating funds.

Mayor Helen Boosalis told the crowd that Lincoln's support of the United Way is the best example that Lincoln cares, Lincoln responds.

Pilot campaign firms reported a 21% increase in giving. The firms already having completed this year's drive are:

— Commonwealth Electric Co. and members of IBEW 265 with an 81% increase and gift of $2,949.

— Security Mutual Life Insurance which reported an 11% increase and total gift of $8,701.

— Citizens State Bank with a 130% increase over last year.

— Commercial Federal Savings and Loan with a 30% increase for a total gift of $1,744.

— Misle Chevrolet with a 25% increase and total gift of $1,769.

— Wells and Frost, where 23 employes gave $1,054 for a per capita gift of $45.83.

"These employes generously responded to the needs of our community's social agencies despite all of the demands on our dollars," said John F. Wells, general campaign chairman, "and we hope the rest of the community can keep the pace that these firms have set."

The first official United Way report will be made Sept. 25.

Meat Packers Submit Bonds Needed In State

Roughly 46 packing houses already have submitted or are close to submitting bonds required by new state regulations intended to protect livestock producers.

The remaining four packing houses are making "good progress in securing bonds," according to State Agriculture Director Glenn Kreuscher.

Kreuscher said he has no plans to call any administrative hearings asking packers why they have not secured bonds. Packers are required to secure bonds to cover two days' kill.

The requirement was prompted by American Beef Packers' financial troubles last winter.

"We're very pleased with the progress being made," Kreuscher said.

Music news is covered thoroughly in the "Sunday Journal and Star."

Tapestry For Saint

The official tapestry of Mother Elizabeth Ann Bayley Seton will hang from the main balcony of St. Peter's Basilica Sunday when Pope Paul VI proclaims her the first native-born American Roman Catholic saint. The ceremony will be in St. Peter's Square. The tapestry shows Mother Seton, founder of the Sisters of Charity, in her religious habit above a globe displaying North America.

More Study Ordered On School Use

Assuring a Lincoln Swim Club parent the public schools don't intend "to run any good youth programs out of business," Supt. John Prasch Tuesday ordered further study of rate changes in the school board's building use policy.

The board the last two months has been discussing the first major rate increases in a decade.

Allen Graves, parent of three swimmers, said the Swim Club figuratively has "been a guest in your home for 20 years." But there's "no way we'd be able to conduct swim meets in Lincoln (school) pools" under the proposed higher rates.

A meet last year that cost about $467 would cost more than $1,030 this year, he said, explaining the 135 competitors cannot generate enough revenue to cover the increase.

Prasch said his staff is only just beginning to assess the impact of the new rates on building users. For example, he said the City Parks and Recreation Department $21,000 bill last year would increase to $53,000, and the $25,000 rent Southeast Nebraska Technical Community College paid would go up an additional $50,000 to $75,000.

In a report to the board, Associate Superintendent for Instruction Ron Brandt said the district expects to broaden its standardized test program to include more comprehensive assessment.

Students will take tests designed to measure how much of what they've been taught they actually learned.

Brandt said students will also take standardized tests at the end of the school year instead of in the fall. End-of-year scores are more useful to evaluate programs and for teachers' use at the start of the next school year.

Contrary to a recent national report that students scores are declining significantly on the Scholastic Aptitude Test (or College Board exam), Brandt said Lincoln students' "scores have tended to rise a little."

The number of high school seniors taking the SAT has declined from 1,043 in 1972-73 to 306 last year, Brandt said, probably because it's not required for admission to the University of Nebraska.

Lincoln students three years ago scored 444 in the verbal SAT test category and 501 in math. Last year, the average scores rose to 453 and 505, respectively.

In the American College Testing (ACT) program, which most Lincoln students take, Brandt said last year 1,007 students had a mean composite score of 21.2, above the 18.6 national average. ACT measures knowledge of English, math, social studies and natural science.

Brandt cautioned the board not to take test results too seriously, as the only measure of students' learning or for the outmoded purpose of discovering "who ranks higher than whom."

Long-range test planning based on trends can help staff determine how to change the curriculum, he said.

After pilot testing last year, a districtwide assessment of student writing ability will be made this year.

Prasch, in a school-opening report, said enrollment increased compared to last year at Arnold, Calvert, Dawes, Goodrich, Lakeview, Morley, Rousseau, West Lincoln and Zeman Elementary Schools. The "most dramatic" upsurge above projections was at Calvert and Zeman.

West Lincoln Elementary is serverely overcrowded, he said, eyeing transfers to McPhee. Increases were also noted at East, Goodrich, Irving and Pound Junior Highs, and at East and Southeast High Schools.

First-week kindergarten enrollment of 2,139 already exceeds last year's fourth-week official total of 2,120, Prasch said, but predicted the 2,176 projection on Sept. 26 won't be reached.

By comparison, Prasch said 10th- and 11th-grade levels now register about 2,400 students, indicating a possible long-range enrollment decline.

A second survey last week showed 44 Vietnamese refugee students enrolled in Lincoln schools. Heaviest concentrations are at Northeast High, Mickle Junior High and McPhee Elementary.

Seward Airport Voted On

By TOM COOK
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Seward — Members of the Seward Chamber of Commerce issued a strong vote against the proposed airport at a Tuesday night meeting.

The stand reverses the group's earlier support for the project.

However, it is unclear what the consequences of Tuesday night's vote will be.

The question of an airport for Seward, planned for two miles south of town, has been hotly debated recently and has resulted in bitter differences of opinion. The major complaint has been that Seward citizens were not given a chance to vote on the issue.

Two questions asked in the special chamber ballot were: Are you in favor of the proposed plans for the Seward municipal airport? (31 yes, 144 no) Do you think the citizens of Seward should have the right to vote on the airport project? (160 yes, 24 no).

Out of the 275 ballots mailed out last week, 186 were returned.

All the arrangements for the airport have been completed by the Seward Airport Authority, and only await the majority vote of the authority before construction begins.

Jack Berger, president of the Seward Chamber of Commerce, said it is unclear what the chamber vote means.

"I don't know what they're going to do. To me the resolution is a little late," he said. "We've been working on this for nine years and it's ready to go."

Hitchhiker Takes Car At Gunpoint

North Platte (UPI) — The Nebraska State Patrol, as well as Colorado and Wyoming authorities, were searching Tuesday for a hitchhiker who forced three persons from an automobile on Interstate 80 at gunpoint and got away with the veihcle and some cash.

The patrol's North Platte office said the incident took place about 8 a.m. Tuesday on the interstate between Brady and Gothenburg

The man was described as black, 6-foot-2, 230 pounds, wearing a black and white striped shirt, brown jacket and brown tweed trousers. The patrol warned that the man is armed and urged caution should he be spotted.

The car taken was described as a 1965 brown two-door Ford with Illinois in-transit plates.

The patrol said the three occupants of the car, a man, his wife and a friend, apparently picked the man up on the interstate near Lincoln. He was carrying only a green duffle bag. He later produced a handgun.

Three Men Sentenced

Three men believed involved in passing a total of $15,000 to $20,000 in bad checks in six Nebraska cities this summer were each sentenced to 1⅓ to 3 years at the Nebraska Penal and' Corrections Complex.

Terry A. Wade, 22, Duane Wade, 23, and Gary Wade, 24, all of Columbus, Ohio, had early pleaded guilty to a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses.

An original charge of possession of a forged instrument was amended for all three men.

The sentences handed down by Lancaster County District Court Judge Samuel Van Pelt, included a 47-day credit for the time spent in the county jail.

A fourth member of the alleged check passing group, Cheryl Irvine, of Columbus, Ohio, was earlier sentenced to 18 months to 3 years at the Women's Reformatory in York after pleading guilty to possession of a forged instrument.

IBM Unveils Desk-Top Computer

New York (AP) — A new portable, desk-top computer only slightly larger than a typewriter was introduced by International Business Meachines Corp.

Called the IBM 5100, the 12 models unveiled will cost from $8,975 to $19,975, and will be available only by purchase and not be leased as many other computer lines now are.

Customer deliveries are scheduled for this month, the computer giant said.

C. B. Rogers, Jr., IBM vice president and president of the general systems division, said the IBM 5100 uses the latest computer technology. In the late 1960s, he said, a computer with the 5100's performance characteristics would have been nearly as large as two desks and would weigh about half a ton, instead of its present 50-pound weight.

Paging System Breaks Down

A malfunctioning transmitter has interrupted the radio-telephone paging system operated by Lincoln Telephone & Telegraph, a spokesman said Tuesday.

The spokesman said the transmitter, located in the LT&T building at 15th and M, will be repaired by Wednesday afternoon if not sooner.

The paging system enables a person carrying a pocket-sized receiver to be contacted when a special telephone number is dialed. It is used primarily by doctors, the spokesman said.

Ed Board Denies Speech Therapy For Parochial Schools

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

The Lincoln Board of Education denied Tuesday a request by The Rev. James Dawson to provide speech therapy services in parochial schools.

The vote was 5-0-1, with Lu Pansing abstaining.

In offering the motion, Pearl Goldenstein cited her "respect" for Father Dawson, superintendent of the Lincoln Catholic Schools, and for their attorney, former Gov. Robert Crosby.

But Mrs. Goldenstein said, "I feel strongly about the separation of church and state." While the public schools "are making as many provisions as we can" for non-public school students, it's "with regret I move the request be denied."

Under the Catholic Schools proposal, the public district would lease parochial classroom space and provide a public school teacher to rove among the buildings, serving 75 children.

Supt. John Prasch said speech therapy programs are available on the same basis for parochial and public school students, who have equal access to the services in public school buildings.

Father Dawson said he believes it's "disruptive" for parochial students to be required to walk any distance to public schools for speech therapy. Crosby said it's disruptive for them emotionally and psychologically, as well.

Crosby cited what he said is precedent for public schools to lease parochial classroom space, which in effect then comes under public control. The Nebraska Supreme Court in the Hartington decision upheld the concept.

The Nebraska attorney general's office has declared the concept permissible but not required, which Crosby acknowledged.

In recommending against the request, Prasch said, "The larger issue is protection of the principle of church and state" while complying with the law.

The Hartington case was based on lack of available space in that Nebraska public school district. For Lincoln, with "no such shortage," Prasch said leasing classrooms in parochial schools "is simply a way of 'getting around' the restrictions of the law."

Prasch said temporarily selling part of a parochial school to run a public program represents a sacrifice, in this case, by parents of Catholic school children, "who have the most at stake in this issue."

But accepting "public money to support the program by any guise is the first step toward destruction of the independence that private and parochial schools enjoy and rightfully deserve."

Crosby said denying the request would represent a change in Lincoln board policy.

Prasch explained that two years ago, space in parochial schools was leased under Title I programs paid by federal funds for disadvantaged students. That was discontinued last year, as state law (LB403) disallowed the federal support.

Prasch said LB403 places no requirement on the board to provide speech therapy at parochial schools, as long as services for all handicapped children are being offered.

Public school children in other special education programs must be transported to limited attendance centers, he said.

Prasch discounted the argument that LB403 intends the state to pay $9 of $10 in special education costs that exceed regular program expenses. He reasoned that the public district must first pay the bill with public money before getting state reimbursement.

Board President Louis Roper said that the 90-10% state-local mix of excess cost payments is misleading anyway. He said the Legislature has not yet provided sufficient LB403 reimbursement funds, forcing public school taxpayers to pay the missing dollars for the required programs.

Mrs. Pansing asked Crosby, "Can the Catholic schools help" to pay for speech therapy programs in their own schools? He replied that Catholic parents already "pay 100% of the public school taxes" and an additional burden would be "discriminatory."

Mrs. Pansing said it "worries me that we can't help these children, too."

Lincoln board attorney Edwin C. Perry said it might possibly be unconstitutional to lease such space, if the action were based on the state attorney's opinion, which hasn't the effect of a constitutional interpretation by the Supreme Court.

United Way Drive 15% Toward Goal

The 1976 Lincoln-Lancaster United Way campaign, launched Tuesday morning, is already 15% of the way toward its nearly $1.5 million goal.

Donations during the pilot campaign plus corporate gifts have brought in approximately $229,000.

The hoped-for $1,498,100 will support some 25 United Way-affiliated social service agencies.

Pastor Jerry Dunn of the People's City Mission told the campaign volunteers and agency executives attending the kickoff in the Lincoln Foundation Garden that United Way dollars come "from the heart of this community."

He said the one general fund drive conducted by Lincoln Community Services "sets us (agencies) free" to look after people-serving functions rather than having to worry about generating funds.

Mayor Helen Boosalis told the crowd that Lincoln's support of the United Way is the best example that Lincoln cares, Lincoln responds.

Pilot campaign firms reported a 21% increase in giving. The firms already having completed this year's drive are:

— Commonwealth Electric Co. and members of IBEW 265 with an 81% increase, and gift of $2,949.

— Security Mutual Life Insurance which reported an 11% increase and total gift of $8,701.

— Citizens State Bank with a 130% increase over last year.

— Commercial Federal Savings and Loan with a 30% increase for a total gift of $1,744.

— Misle Chevrolet with a 25% increase and total gift of $1,769.

— Wells and Frost, where 23 employes gave $1,054 for a per capita gift of $45.83.

"These employes generously responded to the needs of our community's social agencies despite all of the demands on our dollars," said John F. Wells, general campaign chairman, "and we hope the rest of the community can keep the pace that these firms have set."

The first official United Way report will be made Sept. 25.

Meat Packers Submit Bonds Needed In State

Roughly 46 packing houses already have submitted or are close to submitting bonds required by new state regulations intended to protect livestock producers.

The remaining four packing houses are making "good progress in securing bonds," according to State Agriculture Director Glenn Kreuscher.

Kreuscher said he has no plans to call any administrative hearings asking packers why they have not secured bonds. Packers are required to secure bonds to cover two days' kill.

The requirement was prompted by American Beef Packers' financial troubles last winter

"We're very pleased with the progress being made," Kreuscher said.

Music news is covered thoroughly in the "Sunday Journal and Star."

Tapestry For Saint

The official tapestry of Mother Elizabeth Ann Bayley Seton will hang from the main balcony of St. Peter's Basilica Sunday when Pope Paul VI proclaims her the first native-born American Roman Catholic saint. The ceremony will be in St. Peter's Square. The tapestry shows Mother Seton, founder of the Sisters of Charity, in her religious habit above a globe displaying North America.

More Study Ordered On School Use

Assuring a Lincoln Swim Club parent the public schools don't intend "to run any good youth programs out of business," Supt. John Prasch Tuesday ordered further study of rate changes in the school board's building use policy.

The board the last two months has been discussing the first major rate increases in a decade.

Allen Graves, parent of three swimmers, said the Swim Club figuratively has "been a guest in your home for 20 years." But there's "no way we'd be able to conduct swim meets in Lincoln (school) pools" under the proposed higher rates.

A meet last year that cost about $467 would cost more than $1,030 this year, he said, explaining the 135 competitors cannot generate enough revenue to cover the increase.

Prasch said his staff is only just beginning to assess the impact of the new rates on building users. For example, he said the City Parks and Recreation Department $21,000 bill last year would increase to $53,000, and the $25,000 rent Southeast Nebraska Technical Community College paid would go up an additional $50,000 to $75,000.

In a report to the board, Associate Superintendent for Instruction Ron Brandt said the district expects to broaden its standardized test program to include more comprehensive assessment.

Students will take tests designed to measure how much of what they've been taught they actually learned.

Brandt said students will also take standardized tests at the end of the school year instead of in the fall. End-of-year scores are more useful to evaluate programs and for teachers' use at the start of the next school year.

Contrary to a recent national report that students scores are declining significantly on the Scholastic Aptitude Test (or College Board exam), Brandt said Lincoln students' "scores have tended to rise a little"

The number of high school seniors taking the SAT has declined from 1,043 in 1972-73 to 306 last year, Brandt said, probably because it's not required for admission to the University of Nebraska.

Lincoln students three years ago scored 444 in the verbal SAT test category and 501 in math. Last year, the average scores rose to 453 and 505, respectively.

In the American College Testing (ACT) program, which most Lincoln students take, Brandt said last year 1,007 students had a mean composite score of 21.2, above the 18.6 national average. ACT measures knowledge of English, math, social studies and natural science.

Brandt cautioned the board not to take test results too seriously, as the only measure of students' learning or for the outmoded purpose of discovering "who ranks higher than whom."

Long-range test planning based on trends can help staff determine how to change the curriculum, he said.

After pilot testing last year, a districtwide assessment of student writing ability will be made this year.

Prasch, in a school-opening report, said enrollment increased compared to last year at Arnold, Calvert, Dawes, Goodrich, Lakeview, Morley, Rousseau, West Lincoln and Zeman Elementary Schools. The "most dramatic" upsurge above projections was at Calvert and Zeman.

West Lincoln Elementary is serverely overcrowded, he said, eyeing transfers to McPhee. Increases were also noted at East, Goodrich, Irving and Pound Junior Highs, and at East and Southeast High Schools.

First-week kindergarten enrollment of 2,139 already exceeds last year's fourth-week official total of 2,120, Prasch said, but predicted the 2,176 projection on Sept. 26 won't be reached.

By comparison, Prasch said 10th- and 11th-grade levels now register about 2,400 students, indicating a possible long-range enrollment decline.

A second survey last week showed 44 Vietnamese refugee students enrolled in Lincoln schools. Heaviest concentrations are at Northeast High, Mickle Junior High and McPhee Elementary.

—Staying Ahead—

Unclaimed Deposits Can Be Confiscated

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

Jane Bryant Quinn

New York — What's yours won't stay yours, if you forget it for too long. Deposits of money left with a store, a credit union, a bank or a savings and loan association are eventually confiscated, unless you show up to collect.

It happens fastest with department stores. They don't like to carry credit balances in charge accounts. Although some will mail you a check if you haven't used up your credit within five or six months, others will simply grab your money.

The Federal Trade Commission sued a number of major stores over this practice a couple of years ago. All but one of them settled — agreeing to refund money seized from customers for five years back. But, Genesco, Inc. (owners of some two dozen major retail stores) took the issue to court.

Until this case is resolved, stores (except the handful that settled with the FTC) generally have the right to seize your cash balances after whatever period they see fit.

On The Safe Side

Small, neighborhood stores may carry your credit longer than big ones that bill by computer. But to be on the safe side, never leave a credit in a charge account for longer than three or four months. Either make a purchase to use it up, or ask for a cash refund.

If the store has already helped itself to your money, write a letter to its president, reminding him that the FTC is interested in this matter. Send a carbon copy to the Bureau of Consumer Protection, Federal Trade Commission, Washington, D.C. 20580.

The banking industry also confiscates unclaimed amounts. But they give you more time to show up than do department stores.

Say you have a savings account that you haven't touched for a long time. The bank, S&L, or credit union will dutifully credit it with interest for two or three years. But then they'll stop. If there continues to be no activity in the account, they'll start assessing an annual service charge of around $1. (This quickly eliminates something small like a $5 share account left with a credit union.)

Your savings account could conceivably stop earning interest even if you have an active checking account with the same bank. But it usually happens when you are not otherwise a customer.

Do Some Business

To keep your savings secure, you should do some business in the account every year — if only to add or subtract $5. And if you move, make sure you give the bank your new address. You can always return to claim an old account, but you won't be paid any interest for the years it lay dormant.

After a minimum of seven years (but as many as 25 in some states) the government steps in. Under the laws of escheat, unowned property belongs to the state. And it's not only savings accounts that can be escheated. So can cash balances in checking accounts (assuming they haven't been eliminated by service charges), property in safe deposit boxes, savings certificates, even property held by the bank in trust.

Before this happens, every attempt is made to reach you — using registered letters and public notices in the newspapers. But if you don't show up, the money is claimed for the state treasury.

Nevertheless, all is not entirely lost. If you show up, many years later, with proof of ownership in hand, the state will give you the money back (although not with interest).

Will Raid Accounts

There's one more way you can lose savings. If you owe the bank money and haven't paid, it can, under the right of "set-off," dip into your funds to satisfy the debt. They will raid any account — individual, joint or trust — to satisfy either your own loan or any loan you may have co-signed.

(Savings and loans have the same right, but rarely use it. Credit unions will seize funds to satisfy late debt payments, but not as readily or rapidly as banks.)

This becomes an especially sore point if the money owed is for something you bought on a bank credit card, and you're having a dispute about it with the store. To make matters worse, the money may be taken from your checking account without warning — meaning that some of your checks might bounce. (The bank then slaps you with a bounced-check charge.) These points and others are in litigation in some states.

Some states put minor limits on which accounts can be dipped into for what. But the general right of set-off applies everywhere. So if you have a bank debt that's in dispute, or because of hardship you know you're going to have trouble paying, you'd be smart to move your checking and savings to another bank.

Ford Foundation Finances NU Education-Law Project

A $100,000 grant has been received by the University of Nebraska-Lincoln from the Ford Foundation to plan and implement a joint degree program in education administration and law.

Co-directors of the program, which will enroll its first students in 1976, will be Dale K. Hayes, professor of education administration and John Gradwohl, professor of law.

Students in the law and education amdinistration program will be expected to complete roughly four years of study, leading to both a law degree and a Ph.D. degree in education administration.

Prof. Hayes said the program "will provide a combination of expertise which is very much needed both in higher education and in the administration of schools at all levels."

Although the Ford Foundation currently supports centers for research in law and education at three other major universities in the United States, the joint-degree program at NU is unique.

The Ford Foundation grant will be extended over five years with a large part of each year's appropriation earmarked for student aid.

"We want to encourage mature persons, especially with some prior relevant experience, to study in residence while pursuing the joint degree program," Hayes said. He pointed out that certification in school administration, a pre-requisite for a Ph.D. in education administration, requires three years' teaching experience. Candidates for the Ph.D. must also hold a masters degree in education administration.

Admission to the joint degree program will require separate admission to both the department of education administration in Teacher's College and to the College of Law. A project assistant for the program will assist persons in processing their dual applications.

Each college will demand its usual number of hours and other requirements for graduates in the interdisciplinary program, but six hours of study will be shared and count toward each degree. One of the courses will be law and education administration, taught by Gradwohl and Hayes, who hold dual faculty appointments in the College of Law and the department of education administration.

In addition, Law College will accept up to nine hours of education administration courses dealing with such topics as teacher personnel and public school finance. Education administration, by the same token, will allow up to 12 hours' credit for law courses in evidence, clinical or trial practice, and administrative or labor law.

Rural Shelton Home Has Solar Heat Unit

Shelton (UPI) — There was a public display Tuesday of a solar home heating unit, the first of its kind in Nebraska, located on a rural Shelton farm.

The owner of the energy saving device is Glenn Heuring. It was manufactured by Solarthermics Corp., of Nederland, Colo. Heuring said so far he's "100% satisfied" with the unit.

Heuring said if the word of the manufacturer proves right, "I shouldn't have to spend more than 10 cents this winter for using my backup electric heating system."

Officially, the manufacturer says the home unit located at Shelton, based on weather tables, should be able to provide heat about 71% of the time.

Assuming the A-shaped structure will work all winter long, Heuring said, "I will probably only have to spend $1.50 a month for heating.

"This is the approximate cost of operating two small electric fans which drive the air from the storage battery into the house," he said.

Heuring said the furnace, the smallest unit offered by the Colorado firm, sells for $3,800. He said that's relatively inexpensive for units using new solar energy tehcnology even though more expensive than conventional heating systems.

The solar furnace has only 96 square feet of surface, but is large enough to warm Heuring's 1,250-square-foot home. It has some 2,000 aluminum black cups under glass which transform the heat waves from short to long waves so that the energy can be stored.

Raymond FFA Chapter Plans Safety Exhibit

The Raymond Central Chapter of the Future Farmers of America is doing its best to provide something different for tourists this Saturday.

The chapter is planning to present a special exhibit of a children's barnyard and safety day at the Milford rest stop just wast of the Milford exchange on Interstate 80 Sunday.

The exhibit will include a small barn with a peacock, rabbits, lambs and other small animals, a seat belt convincer supplied by the State Department of Roads and other safety exhibits.

The chapter will also have a lunch and refreshments for motorists at the rest stop.

The exhibit will operate from noon until 6 p.m.

Senior Citizens Center To Open

A center where senior citizens can share their handicraft skills, read a book or simply converse over a cup of coffee will open Friday at St. Paul United Methodist Church, 12th and M Sts.

Thereafter, the center will be open every Friday from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. to persons more than 60 years of age.

Sponsors of the center, the St. Paul Church and the Lincoln-Lancaster Commission on Aging, said a variety of cultural, recreational and educational programs are planned for the future.

Lunch can be ordered in advance by calling 475-7648 before 1:30 p.m. on Wednesdays.

Des Moines, Omaha Air Route OKd

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — The Civil Aeronautics Board Tuesday gave American Airlines permission for a route through Des Moines and Omaha beginning Nov. 8.

The route makes American the first air carrier to compete with United Airlines for transcontinental business out of the Iowa capital.

But city officials here said it is unclear when American can start scheduling flights through Des Moines, how many flights would be scheduled or which cities on the east and west coasts would be served on the Des Moines routes.

Although the ruling says American can begin operations Nov. 8, officials say that the federal agency's usual rule makes an airline wait 90 days before starting such flights — making the target date Dec. 9.

Des Moines city and Chamber of Commerce officials have long sought a competitor for United Airlines, contending that a competitor would increase the number of passengers using Des Moines Municipal Airport by at least 10 per cent a year.

Stocks Fall Into Sharp Decline

New York (AP) — Stocks fell into a sharp decline Tuesday amid disappointment over the market's inability to draw any lasting support from enactment of a financial aid plan for New York City. Trading was moderate.

Early Tuesday the New York State Legislature passed a measure setting up machinery for state controls on the city's budget and providing the city with the funds it needs to stay solvent through November.

The market rose briefly after the opening in response to the news, but the buying didn't last, and selling intensified later in the day as it became clear that the rally attempt was a failure.

On the subject of the new plan for the city, Manown "Buck" Kisor at Paine, Webber, Jackson & Curtis observed, "They've gotten over one more crisis, but they haven't solved the long-term problem."

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up nearly 6 points in the first half hour, had fallen 12.36 to 827.75 by the close.

Losers outnumbered gainers 884 to 478 among the 1,788 issues traded on the New York Stock Exchange.

Contributing to the slide in prices during the afternoon was news of a net deposit outflow at savings banks in New York State last month — the first this year.

The outflow, though relatively small, and limited to a single state, seemed to evoke some unhappy memories of last year's rush of funds out of many traditional investments into short term money market vehicles such as Treasury bills, with interest rates high and inflation prospects uncertain.

Sony far outdistanced all other issues in trading volume for the second straight day, falling a point to 8¾ after a ⅝ drop Monday. The stock jumped into the market spotlight after two brokerage houses cut their earnings estimates for the company.

In the glamor sector, Texas Instruments lost 5⅛ to 89⅛; Black & Decker was off 14 at 24⅝; National Semiconductor dropped 2 to 33½, and Polaroid was down 1¾ to 33⅝.

USM climbed 3¾ to 21⅞ on an offer by Emhart Corp. to buy 1 million USM shares beyond those it already owns for $23 apiece. Emhart was up ¾ at 2⅛.

On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index slipped .49 to 85.09.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market was down .86 at 76.6.

Farm Futures Decline Again

Chicago (AP) — Farm commodity futures fell again on the Chicago Board of Trade with corn futures posting near limit declines.

Corn closed with a loss of 9 cents a bushel after the expiring September option had touched the limit of 10 cents. Soybeans were down 5 cents, and oats and wheat 3½. Soybean meal lost nearly $3 a ton and soybean oil prices, were irregular. Iced broilers, up about ½ cent early, closed steady to a shade lower under late profit-taking.

Domestic gold futures lost about $4 an ounce after spot gold in Europe had declined. There was very little support at any level. Some options set new life of contract lows.

Judge Will Hold Hearing On Legality Of Big Green

Omaha (AP) — District Judge John Murphy will hold a hearing Sept. 22 to determine if the Omaha lottery still is illegal.

Omaha attorney Martin Cannon obtained the hearing date Tuesday on a motion to hold the lottery backers in contempt of court. Cannon contends the lottery is in violation of Murphy's earlier order which declared the previous procedure to be illegal.

The hearing will be held the day before the announced start of the lottery.

Omaha City Council members were ordered to appear at the hearing, along with officials of the City Betterment Corp., operator of the lottery.

Cannon had said the lottery is illegal because ticket sellers and banks would make money on the game, in violation of the court order. Sellers are to receive 5% of sales and banks 1% for holding the proceeds.

In his earlier ruling, Murphy said promoters of the lottery cannot make a profit. City Betterment's contract with a consulting firm then was changed so that only specific services are paid for. The firm earlier was to have received 3% of net revenues.

After Murphy's ruling, the City Council repealed the city's agreement to accept half the proceeds. The court said that was illegal because the voters did not approve the city's involvement in a lottery.

Council members said Tuesday they felt they had complied with the order.

Cannon said the present setup amounts to a municipal lottery because the lottery corporation would do things "that are appropriate for the city to do."

Arson Charge Against Son Of Judge Dropped

Omaha (UPI) — Douglas County has decided to drop charges against the son of a Des Moines judge because the son has been returned to Des Moines for additional psychiatric treatment.

Deputy County Attorney Francis Pane said he thought it "would be best" to have Luther Thomas Glanton III treated in Iowa.

Glanton, 19, was charged with first-degree arson and escape. He is the son of Associate Polk County District Judge and Mrs. Luther T. Glanton of Des Moines. Mrs. Glanton is an attorney in Des Moines.

Pane said young Glanton has been hospitalized several times for psychological problems, and those problems were the reasons he moved to have the charges dismissed.

The arson charge resulted from two small fires set last January at the Omaha Hilton Hotel. He escaped for a few hours from the Douglas County Youth Center last February where he was awaiting trial.

The Farm outlook is important. Complete coverage of the latest of importance to agriculture appears on the "Sunday Journal and Star" farm page.

Attendance Rises 10% At G.I. Stuhr Museum

Grand Island (UPI) — The summer tourist season at Stuhr Museum has ended and Museum Director Jack Learned said attendance improved by about 10% over last year.

Learned said attendance for the summer was pegged at 35,069.

"I don't think that it quite balanced our record year of 1973, but it's such an improvement over last year that we were elated," he said.

The summer season attendance record of 38,216 was set in 1973. The all-time year-round attendance record of 69,347 was also set in that year.

Learned said this summer's visitors came from "all over the world, not just the United States." He said information indicated there were a number of Nebraskans who made their initial visit to the museum.

The director said he's hoping to reach an attendance of 100,000 soon. He said the prospects of that kind of an attendance continue to improve as exhibits are added. He noted construction of Gus Fonner Memorial Hall is well underway and it is hoped work will be either completed or nearly so by next summer on a working steam railroad.

The director reported that as of Aug. 26 some $16,000 in revenue bonds were retired, dropping the total of outstanding bonds to $265,500.

Lye Thrown In Omahan's Face

Omaha (UPI) — University of Nebraska Medical Center doctors said Tuesday it would be several days before they could tell whether an Omaha man who had lye thrown in his face would lose his sight.

Robert Bevins, 44, was taken to Douglas County Hospital Monday and then transferred to the Medical Center where he was listed in good condition.

Authorities said Bevins was lying on a living room couch in the home of his ex-wife, Shirley, 49, when she came into the room with a bucket, called his name and threw the lye at him when he looked up.

A Medical Center spokesman said Bevins hasn't lost vision in either eye "but one eye is worse than the other."

"As far as his eyes are concerned," the spokesman said, "it will be several days before the doctors will know anything."

Police said Mrs. Bevins was booked on suspicion of maiming. Four months ago, police said, Mrs. Bevins was arrested for allegedly stabbing Bevins in the chest. However, Bevins refused to testify and the case was dismissed.

Bevins has been living at the Open Door Mission in downtown Omaha for the past several weeks. A spokesman there said Bevins had enrolled in the mission's alcoholic treatment program.

Police said Bevins told officers he went to his ex-wife's home Monday because she said she had a problem with one of their children. The couple was divorced about 13 years ago.

Bennett To Be Tried For Murder

Omaha (AP) — Municipal Court Judge Walter Cropper Tuesday ordered Dwayne D. Bennett, 17, to be tried in District Court for the first-degree murder of Mrs. Maria Gibilisco.

Mrs. Gibilisco, 76, was found dead in bed at her Omaha home July 20.

She had been stabbed once across the neck and twice in the chest, police said.

Bennett was arrested in the State of Washington in late August in connection with the case. He was on leave from the Kearney Boys Training Center at the time of the slaying.

At a preliminary hearing before Cropper, Detective Patrolman Gregory Thompson testified that police believe Bennett did not want to return to Kearney. Police beliece Bennett was looking for money to take a trip away from Omaha, Thompson said.

Bennett allegedly saw Mrs. Gibilisco lying in bed and decided to rape the woman, Thompson said. He then stabbed her three times with a knife he found in her kitchen, police have said.

Bennett will be held without bond until his trial begins.

It May Be $800 Million

—Staying Ahead—

Unclaimed Deposits Can Be Confiscated

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

Jane Bryant Quinn

New York — What's yours won't stay yours, if you forget it for too long. Deposits of money left with a store, a credit union, a bank or a savings and loan association are eventually confiscated, unless you show up to collect.

It happens fastest with department stores. They don't like to carry credit balances in charge accounts. Although some will mail you a check if you haven't used up your credit within five or six months, others will simply grab your money.

The Federal Trade Commission sued a number of major stores over this practice a couple of years ago. All but one of them settled — agreeing to refund money seized from customers for five years back. But, Genesco, Inc. (owners of some two dozen major retail stores) took the issue to court.

Until this case is resolved, stores (except the handful that settled with the FTC) generally have the right to seize your cash balances after whatever period they see fit.

On The Safe Side

Small, neighborhood stores may carry your credit longer than big ones that bill by computer. But to be on the safe side, never leave a credit in a charge account for longer than three or four months. Either make a purchase to use it up, or ask for a cash refund.

If the store has already helped itself to your money, write a letter to its president, reminding him that the FTC is interested in this matter. Send a carbon copy to the Bureau of Consumer Protection, Federal Trade Commission, Washington, D.C. 20580.

The banking industry also confiscates unclaimed amounts. But they give you more time to show up than do department stores.

Say you have a savings account that you haven't touched for a long time. The bank, S&L, or credit union will dutifully credit it with interest for two or three years. But then they'll stop. If there continues to be no activity in the account, they'll start assessing an annual service charge of around $1. (This quickly eliminates something small like a $5 share account left with a credit union.)

Your savings account could conceivably stop earning interest even if you have an active checking account with the same bank. But it usually happens when you are not otherwise a customer.

Do Some Business

To keep your savings secure, you should do some business in the account every year — if only to add or subtract $5. And if you move, make sure you give the bank your new address. You can always return to claim an old account, but you won't be paid any interest for the years it lay dormant.

After a minimum of seven years (but as many as 25 in some states) the government steps in. Under the laws of escheat, unowned property belongs to the state. And it's not only savings accounts that can be escheated. So can cash balances in checking accounts (assuming they haven't been eliminated by service charges), property in safe deposit boxes, savings certificates, even property held by the bank in trust.

Before this happens, every attempt is made to reach you — using registered letters and public notices in the newspapers. But if you don't show up, the money is claimed for the state treasury.

Nevertheless, all is not entirely lost. If you show up, many years later, with proof of ownership in hand, the state will give you the money back (although not with interest).

Will Raid Accounts

There's one more way you can lose savings. If you owe the bank money and haven't paid, it can, under the right of "set-off," dip into your funds to satisfy the debt. They will raid any account — individual, joint or trust — to satisfy either your own loan or any loan you may have co-signed.

(Savings and loans have the same right, but rarely use it. Credit unions will seize funds to satisfy late debt payments, but not as readily or rapidly as banks.)

This becomes an especially sore point if the money owed is for something you bought on a bank credit card, and you're having a dispute about it with the store. To make matters worse, the money may be taken from your checking account without warning — meaning that some of your checks might bounce. (The bank then slaps you with a bounced-check charge.) These points and others are in litigation in some states.

Some states put minor limits on which accounts can be dipped into for what. But the general right of set-off applies everywhere. So if you have a bank debt that's in dispute, or because of hardship you know you're going to have trouble paying, you'd be smart to move your checking and savings to another bank.

Ford Foundation Finances NU Education-Law Project

A $100,000 grant has been received by the University of Nebraska-Lincoln from the Ford Foundation to plan and implement a joint degree program in education administration and law.

Co-directors of the program, which will enroll its first students in 1976, will be Dale K. Hayes, professor of education administration and John Gradwohl, professor of law.

Students in the law and education amdinistration program will be expected to complete roughly four years of study, leading to both a law degree and a Ph.D. degree in education administration.

Prof. Hayes said the program "will provide a combination of expertise which is very much needed both in higher education and in the administration of schools at all levels."

Although the Ford Foundation currently supports centers for research in law and education at three other major universities in the United States, the joint-degree program at NU is unique.

The Ford Foundation grant will be extended over five years with a large part of each year's appropriation earmarked for student aid.

"We want to encourage mature persons, especially with some prior relevant experience, to study in residence while pursuing the joint degree program," Hayes said. He pointed out that certification in school administration, a pre-requisite for a Ph.D. in education administration, requires three years' teaching experience. Candidates for the Ph.D. must also hold a masters degree in education administration.

Admission to the joint degree program will require separate admission to both the department of education administration in Teacher's College and to the College of Law. A project assistant for the program will assist persons in processing their dual applications.

Each college will demand its usual number of hours and other requirements for graduates in the interdisciplinary program, but six hours of study will be shared and count toward each degree. One of the courses will be law and education administration, taught by Gradwohl and Hayes, who hold dual faculty appointments in the College of Law and the department of education administration.

In addition, Law College will accept up to nine hours of education administration courses dealing with such topics as teacher personnel and public school finance. Education administration, by the same token, will allow up to 12 hours' credit for law courses in evidence, clinical or trial practice, and administrative or labor law.

Rural Shelton Home Has Solar Heat Unit

Shelton (UPI) — There was a public display Tuesday of a solar home heating unit, the first of its kind in Nebraska, located on a rural Shelton farm.

The owner of the energy saving device is Glenn Heuring. It was manufactured by Solarthermics Corp., of Nederland, Colo. Heuring said so far he's "100% satisfied" with the unit.

Heuring said if the word of the manufacturer proves right, "I shouldn't have to spend more than 10 cents this winter for using my backup electric heating system."

Officially, the manufacturer says the home unit located at Shelton, based on weather tables, should be able to provide heat about 71% of the time.

Assuming the A-shaped structure will work all winter long, Heuring said, "I will probably only have to spend $1.50 a month for heating.

"This is the approximate cost of operating two small electric fans which drive the air from the storage battery into the house," he said.

Heuring said the furnace, the smallest unit offered by the Colorado firm, sells for $3,800. He said that's relatively inexpensive for units using new solar energy tehcnology even though more expensive than conventional heating systems.

The solar furnace has only 96 square feet of surface, but is large enough to warm Heuring's 1,250-square-foot home. It has some 2,000 aluminum black cups under glass which transform the heat waves from short to long waves so that the energy can be stored.

Des Moines, Omaha Air Route OKd

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — The Civil Aeronautics Board Tuesday gave American Airlines permission for a route through Des Moines and Omaha beginning Nov. 8.

The route makés American the first air carrier to compete with United Airlines for transcontinental business out of the Iowa capital.

But city officials here said it is unclear when American can start scheduling flights through Des Moines, how many flights would be scheduled or which cities on the east and west coasts would be served on the Des Moines routes.

Although the ruling says American can begin operations Nov. 8, officials say that the federal agency's usual rule makes an airline wait 90 days before starting such flights — making the target date Dec. 9.

Des Moines city and Chamber of Commerce officials have long sought a competitor for United Airlines, contending that a competitor would increase the number of passengers using Des Moines Municipal Airport by at least 10 per cent a year.

Stocks Fall Into Sharp Decline

New York (AP) — Stocks fell into a sharp decline Tuesday amid disappointment over the market's inability to draw any lasting support from enactment of a financial aid plan for New York City. Trading was moderate.

Early Tuesday the New York State Legislature passed a measure setting up machinery for state controls on the city's budget and providing the city with the funds it needs to stay solvent through November.

The market rose briefly after the opening in response to the news, but the buying didn't last, and selling intensified later in the day as it became clear that the rally attempt was a failure.

On the subject of the new plan for the city, Manown "Buck" Kisor at Paine, Webber, Jackson & Curtis observed, "They've gotten over one more crisis, but they haven't solved the long-term problem."

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up nearly 6 points in the first half hour, had fallen 12.36 to 827.75 by the close.

Losers outnumbered gainers 884 to 478 among the 1,788 issues traded on the New York Stock Exchange.

Contributing to the slide in prices during the afternoon was news of a net deposit outflow at savings banks in New York State last month — the first this year.

The outflow, though relatively small, and limited to a single state, seemed to evoke some unhappy memories of last year's rush of funds out of many traditional investments into short term money market vehicles such as Treasury bills, with interest rates high and inflation prospects uncertain.

Sony far outdistanced all other issues in trading volume for the second straight day, falling a point to 8¾ after a ⅝ drop Monday. The stock jumped into the market spotlight after two brokerage houses cut their earnings estimates for the company.

In the glamor sector, Texas Instruments lost 5⅛ to 89⅛; Black & Decker was off 14 at 24⅝; National Semiconductor dropped 2 to 33½, and Polaroid was down 1¾ to 33⅝.

USM climbed 3¾ to 21⅞ on an offer by Emhart Corp. to buy 1 million USM shares beyond those it already owns for $23 apiece. Emhart was up ¾ at 21⅛.

On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index slipped .49 to 85.09.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market was down .86 at 76.6.

Farm Futures Decline Again

Chicago (AP) — Farm commodity futures fell again on the Chicago Board of Trade with corn futures posting near limit declines.

Corn closed with a loss of 9 cents a bushel after the expiring September option had touched the limit of 10 cents. Soybeans were down 5 cents, and oats and wheat 3½. Soybean meal lost nearly $3 a ton and soybean oil prices, were irregular. Iced broilers, up about ⅛ cent early, closed steady to a shade lower under late profit-taking.

Domestic gold futures lost about $4 an ounce after spot gold in Europe had declined. There was very little support at any level. Some options set new life of contract lows.

Sports Signals

Equality In All Sports

The recent decision of a judge in Alabama to permit the visiting teams in football to have an equal number of eligible players as home teams also included all other sports.

That fact has been virtually overlooked by most sports writers, including myself, but Nebraska basketball coach Joe Cipriano has made me aware of the ruling.

Originally, the NCAA voted to limit travel squads in basketball to 10 players while permitting the home team to dress 13. Since the Big Eight limit in the past has been 12 travelers, it is assumed that same number will be in effect when the roundballers begin play late in November.

By the same token, the limit of 18 on the road in baseball has been erased and it is likely teams will travel with 23 players, the limit established for home teams.

The limit of scholarships that can be in effect at any one time in tennis has been set at five. This seems like a stupid rule since college tennis plays six singles matches (plus three doubles) in dual meets.

Wrestling is limited to 11 scholarships. Since there are 10 weight classes, it looks like competition for starting spots has been eliminated and there is no margin for replacing injured athletes even though that sport almost always has athletes who suffer injuries.

Track and field can have 14 scholarships even though there are 19 events in an NCAA championship meet, ranging from sprints to distance running and the various field events which require certain skills.

SEC Start Not Good

Southeastern Conference teams over the past 42 seasons have compiled a record of winning 70 per cent of their games against major non-league opponents, but the 1975 score at the moment is one victory and three defeats. The most prominent loss, of course, is the 20-7 setback Missouri handed Alabama Monday night.

The SEC is 26-15-3 against Big Eight teams, a 61.4 per cent winning average. Nebraska will get a chance to reduce that mark when the Cornhuskers entertain Louisiana State in the season opener here on Saturday.

LSU's record against all non-conference opponents is a sizzling 75.1 per cent on 126 victories, 39 losses and eight ties. Strange as it may seem, Saturday's game is the first regularly scheduled contest by the Huskers against an SEC member.

Nebraska is 5-2 against teams from the league, but all the games have been bowl tests. The two losses were to Alabama in the Orange (1966) and Sugar (1967). Victories came over 'Bama (1972 Orange), Auburn (1964 Orange), Georgia (1969 Sun), Louisiana State (1971 Orange) and Florida (1974 Sugar).

Over the next few seasons, the Huskers are scheduled to go to Baton Rouge to face LSU in 1976, and to Alabama in 1978 ('Bama comes here in 1977).

The ten schools currently comprising the SEC carry an all-time winning record with ten of the eleven conferences classified as major prior to this season. They've won 54.3 per cent of the games with Big Ten teams (12-10-1), 60 per cent with the Southwest Conference (125-81-14), 62 per cent with the Pacific-8 (15-9-1), 72.8 per cent with the Southern (163-58-9) and 77.9 per cent with the Atlantic Coast (112-30-5).

Skywriters Rank LSU 7th

The Southeastern Conference Skywriters seldom pick the right team to win the title, so it should be taken with a grain of salt that they've named LSU to finish seventh this season. They tabbed the Tigers second a year ago and they finished ninth.

They picked Alabama to take its fifth consecutive league title recently, and after Monday night that choice has to be questioned. The rest of the first division included Auburn, Florida, Tennessee and Mississippi State.

The Big Ten Skywriters have had some success recently because it has been 50-50 that either Michigan or Ohio State would be the champion. This year they've selected Michigan, despite the fact Coach Bo Schembechler has said he would open with a freshman quarterback against Wisconsin Saturday.

Ohio State and Michigan State, who'll battle Saturday in East Lansing, were just a few votes behind the Wolverines with Wisconsin a solid fourth. Purdue, Illinois, Iowa and Minnesota rank next in order.

Indiana, which will be in Lincoln a week from Saturday to play the Huskers, was relegated to a probable ninth-place finish even though Coach Lee Corso has been talking about a bowl game. Northwestern was an overwhelming pick to be last.

Texas Christian, Nebraska's third opponent here Sept. 27, was voted to be last in the Southwest Conference in a poll conducted by TCU. The Texas Aggies were tabbed favorites with Texas, Arkansas, Baylor, Texas Tech, Southern Methodist and Rice rated above the Horned Frogs.

Osborne Searches For Punting Team Speed

By BOB OWENS
Star Sports Editor

Nebraska football fans won't necessarily be able to tell all the Husker players with the aid of their official program Saturday in the season opener against Louisiana State in Memorial Stadium.

The confusion, however, will only be when Nebraska is punting. That's when tight ends Larry Mushinskie and Brad Jenkins will slip on new numbers so they'll be okay to line up at guard.

As ends, they're required to wear 80 or 90 numbers — Mushinskie is 88 and Jenkins is 92. When they're on the interior of the line they must wear jerseys with numbers between 50 and 79. The numbers haven't yet been selected for them.

"Putting Mushinskie and Jenkins at guard is primarily a matter of speed," Coach Tom Osborne said. "We feel like we need to get downfield fast on punts and we also feel the people at guard have to weigh between 210 and 220 to protect until they release and go downfield."

The Huskers have worked on all phases of the kicking game and the specialty teams are set.

Mike Coyle, who kicked 41 of 45 extra points and 7 of 13 field goals last season, again will handle those chores as well as kickoff.

Randy Lessman, who averaged 37.9 yards a punt on 44 attempts and had none blocked, again will be the punter.

In addition to Mushinskie and Jenkins, others on the punting team will be ends Curtis Craig and Tommy Heiser, tackles Dan Schmidt and Steve Lindquist, center Tom Thomas, up-backs Monte Anthony (or Dave Gillespie) and Dodie Donnell, and fullback Tony Davis.

The punt return team will consist of the regular defensive team with Dave Butterfield as the upman and Bobby Thomas as the deep man.

Either Thomas or freshman Kenny Brown will line up deep with Craig on the kickoff return team. Others on the field will be the regular offensive guards and tackles, the two tight ends and two fullbacks (Davis and Gary Higgs).

Quarterback Terry Luck will hold for Coyle on both points after touchdown and field goals.

Osborne said the thinking right now is to dress Al Eveland as "insurance" on PAT's and FG's just in case something happened to Coyle. Eveland booted two of three extra point tries and one of three field goals last seasons.

The Huskers went through another grueling two-hour workout Tuesday, featuring work against LSU's offenses and defenses and a lot of running to put the finishing touches on conditioning.

Osborne said Wednesday's practice will again be in pads, but that there wouldn't be quite as much running.

Defensive starters John Lee at middle guard and Dave Redding at end returned to practice after recovering from injuries, but center Rik Bonness still is sidelined with a strained knee.

St. Louis Cardinal shortstop Mike Tyson rolls over the shoulder of Mike Schmidt of the Phillies as Schmidt slides into second. Tyson argued the safe call, but the Phillies got the 6-2 win, anyway.

Carlton Paces Phillies' Win

The Associated Press — It may be too late for the Philadelphia Phillies but Steve Carlton finally is pain free and throwing like the left-hander most people believe is one of the best in baseball.

"I'm throwing as good as ever," said Carlton after beating the St. Louis Cardinals 6-2 Monday night with a six-hit, seven-strikeout performance.

The 30-year-old Carlton has been bothered by pain from a bone spur in his left shoulder. It causes inflamation which pains at the point of releasing the ball.

"I've been pain free for the last three or four games," said Carlton. "I've been raring back and throwing the ball. Don't have to finese, and it makes a difference."

Carlton hasn't had to soak the elbow in ice for about three weeks, and also has stopped the electric impulse treatments administered by Phillies' trainer Don Seger. The machine treatment contracts and relaxes the muscles in the inflamed area.

Carlton not only used his arm, but his bat to help the Phillies beat the Cardinals. He socked a two-run double to aid the 10-hit Philadelphia attack.

The victory moved the Phillies into second place in the National League East, one-half game ahead of the Cardinals.

The Phillies, trailing 1-0 going into the fifth, erupted for four runs on four hits in that inning.

Mike Schmidt led off with a walk, Johnny Oates singled and Carlton then caught left fielder Lou Brock playing shallow, as his long drive reached the left-field wall for a two-run double.

Dave Cash then bounced out, but Larry Bowa ripped a single off losing pitcher John Denny, 9-5, scoring Carlton. Bowa sped home from first on a double by Garry Maddox.

Schmidt and Ollie Brown slammed consecutive solo home runs in the eighth inning. Schmidt's blast was his 33rd of the season.

Carlton earned his 12th victory against 13 losses, striking out seven. He gave up a run in the fifth on a double by Ken Reitz and Mike Tyson's RBI single and surrendered Ted Sizemore's third homer of the year, in the ninth.

Carlton struck out the side in the first inning and held the Cards hitless until Denny singled through the middle in the third.

St. Louis made three errors in the first two innings but Denny survived without giving up a run as he pitched hitless ball through three innings.

Cash opened the Phillies first by reaching first on a wild thrown by third baseman Reitz. He took second on a pickoff throwing error by Denny, but was stranded as the next three hitters went out.

In the second, Tommy Hutton opened with a walk and was forced by Schmidt on a fielder's choice. Schmidt wound up at second when second baseman Sizemore threw wild trying for the double play. Schmidt, however, was picked off second and Brown struck out.

The Phillies, still hitless, got a base runner in the fourth on a walk to Maddox. But Denny retired Greg Luzinski and Tommy Hutton went out on a fine play by Sizemore.

The Cardinals got a base runner in the seventh when Luzinski dropped Ted Simmons liner for an error. Then Carlton retired the next three hitters.

The Phillies picked up a one-out single from Bowa in the seventh, and with two out, Luzinski singled him to third, but Hutton grounded out to end the inning.

The triumph moved the Phillies into second place in the NL East, one-half game ahead of the Cardinals, and first-place Pittsburgh's 6-5 loss to Chicago enabled the Phillies to move within six games of the Pirates.

At Pittsburgh, Andy Thornton rapped his 15th homer, then smacked a tie-breaking single in the seventh to help the Cubs edge the Pirates.

Elsewhere in the NL, it was Atlanta 4, Houston 1; Montreal 2, the New York Mets 1 in 10 innings, and San Diego 11, Cincinnati 2.

In a late game, San Francisco was at Los Angeles.

In the American League, it was Cleveland 3, Boston 2 in 10 innings; Baltimore 9, Milwaukee 1; New York Yankees 9, Detroit 6; California 5, Chicago White Sox 4, and Texas took a pair from Minnesota 3-0 and 4-2.

On the West Coast, Kansas City was at Oakland.

Home runs from Marty Perez, Mike Lum and Dave May of Atlanta powered rookie right-hander Adrian Devine to his first victory of the season.

Jim Dwyer led off the 10th inning with a single and raced home on Mike Jorgensen's double to push Montreal past the Mets, sending them to their fifth straight loss.

Alan Ashby's run-scoring single in the 10th powered the Cleveland to its victory over Boston. George Hendrick led off with a double and after a one-out intentional walk to Buddy Bell, scored on Ashby's hit to left.

Lee May and Dave Duncan keyed a pair of four-run Baltimore innings and Doyle Alexander pitched a four-hitter, leading the surging Orioles over the Brewers.

The Orioles' 10th victory in 15 games pulled them to within five games of AL East-leading Boston Red Sox, the closest the defending division champions have been to first place since July 8.

Chris Chambliss ripped five hits and drove in three runs, leading the Yankees past Detroit. The big New York first baseman became the first Yankee to wallop five hits in a game this season. He singled home a run in a three-run first, doubled home one in a three-run third and capped a two-run rally in the eighth win an RBI single.

Mike Miley drove in two runs with a single and sacrifice fly and Bruce Bochte doubled home the eventual winning run in California's victory over the White Sox.

Dave Nelson's two-run single in the ninth inning capped a three-run rally, giving Texas a doubleheader sweep over Minnesota. Rookie Jim Umbarger stopped Minnesota on four hits to win the opener.

Willie McCovey drove in four runs and Rich Folkers fired a three-hitter in San Diego's victory.

Cipriano Faces Depth 'Problem'

By MARK GORDON
Star Sports Writer

Joe Cipriano has a problem — a little problem that most college basketball coaches wish they had.

It all involves recruiting. The Nebraska coaching staff last spring signed perhaps its five finest players ever in one swoop. Now the problem is, can they all play and where will they play this season?

"We have more depth than we've had before," noted Cipriano, entering his 13th year at the NU helm. "If the newcomers can come in and play right at the start, that's got to be a plus for us.

"We have a better crop of freshmen than in the past. They're a talented group of newcomers. The only problem is their knowing the system."

Carl McPipe, a 6-8 center from Hammond, Ind.; Val Martin, a 6-7 forward from South Bend, Ind., and Brian Banks, a 6-1 guard from Hammond are being counted on to contribute as freshman. Alan Holder, a 6-3 guard from Seminole Junior College (Okla.) and Fernando Chevannes, a 6-6 forward from Panama City, Panama, also will see action this season.

And therein is the major problem with this season's basketball team — keeping everyone happy when the freshman, at least from high school credentials, obviously possess enough talent to warrent starting consideration.

"Sure, it presents a tougher challenge to get your freshmen involved in the top seven or eight positions," Cipriano agreed. "If we can find a freshman that can rebound, he'll have that much of an advantage. We really lack a big strong man.

"All our players have more than adequate speed, quickness and jumping ability, but we need rebounding help," he said.

Cipriano's early analysis of each position:

CENTER — "We need someone to back up Larry Cox (a 6-6 center who was NU's regular pivotman last season). Rickey Harris could be a swingman from center to forward. McPipe is a big, strong player who has the things we need for our rebounding.

FORWARDS — In noting that junior Bob Siegel is a strong candidate to retain his starting berth, Cipriano said the competition for the other spot will be "interesting." "You've got to consider some of our returning lettermen (Terry Novak, Curt Hedberg and Harris). "A couple of newcomers also are in the running (Martin, McPipe and Chevannes)."

GUARDS—Easily the spot with the least question marks. All-Big Eight standout Jerry Fort, who has already earned three letters is a virtual certainty for one spot. Steve Willis, who transfered to NU last season from North Idaho Junior College, is also a definite threat to keep the guard spot he started at in 23 of NU's 26 games last season. Other contenders include sophomore Eric Coard, who started four games last spring, Holder and Banks.

While practice does not officially open until Oct. 15, the Huskers are using an informal cross country program to help them achieve better conditioning.

While the Huskers will be ready for their Nov. 28 opener at home against the University of Illinois (the first of three straight games against Big Ten competition), it's obvious the new fieldhouse will be dark then.

"A month ago, no one had any idea when the new place would be done," Cipriano explained. "Now there are rumors that it'll be in January or February. I don't really like the idea of splitting the seasons (the first half in the NU Coliseum, the second in the new fieldhouse).

"Sure, we're going to lose some of the advantage we've had in playing in the NU Coliseum. I think the players that have played in the Coliseum before know this ais a great place for basketball enthusiasm, but the poor seating area for spectators is a problem."

Another indefinite area is the annual red-white intrasquad game. A new Big Eight Conference ruling permits teams to play their intrasquad game off-campus.

Cipriano is investigating playing perhaps two intra-squad tests, one here at the Coliseum and the other outstate — say at Grand Island, for instance.

No official announcement has been made.

That, nevertheless, is just one of many question marks concerning the Huskers. Cipriano will have a much better idea of his team after practices begin. Now it's all guesswork.

Exhibitions Injure 30 Pro Gridders

By Associated Press

Despite the lengthening list, this year's wave of National Football League exhibition injuries doesn't seem to be much different than those of past preseasons.

As of Tuesday, with one more weekend of exhibitions remaining, the 26 teams listed 30 players—not all of them starters—with injuries more serious than the usual bumps and bruises that each preseason brings.

In comparison, the clubs listed 28 players hurt on the eve of the 1971 season and 27 just before the 1972 campaign began. In 1973, when the elimination of the so-called "move" list permitted increased shuttling of players on and off rosters, the number dropped to 15.

Last year, with the preseason strike keeping so many veterans out of the first few exhibitions, no comparative figures were available.

In some cases, this year's injuries are handing a number of clubs some severe setbacks.

Quarterback Archie Manning of New Orleans will miss about a month with a chipped elbow. The same goes for New England quarterback Jim Plunkett, out with a shoulder separation.

Tony Greene's broken collarbone, which will keep him out for a few weeks, and Robert James' ripped up right knee, an injury that has kayoed him for the season, will hurt Buffalo's defensive secondary.

Reserve quarterback Al Woodall, running back Emerson Boozer, wide receiver David Knight and safety Steve Tannen are among the hobbling New York Jets. Torn knee ligaments have sidelined Atlanta defensive end Claude Humphrey for the year. And Miami's defense will have to play this season without linebacker Nick Buoniconti, who shattered his right thumb, and safety Dick Anderson, who has undergone left knee surgery to repair torn cartilege.

But the fact that this year's list includes a plethora of stars is also no different than in recent years.

In the past few preseaons, quarterbacks like the Jets' Joe Namath, Dallas' Roger Staubach, Green Bay's Bart Starr, Washington's Sonny Jurgensen and Houston's Lynn Dickey have been knocked out of action, along with other stars like Jets' running back Matt Snell, Detroit tight end Charlie Sanders, Minnesota cornerback Bobby Bryant and St. Louis wide receiver Mel Gray.

In the not-too-distant past, the primary purposes of a preseason game were to enable veterans to work themselves back into shape after the summer's idleness and to enable coaches to look over their rookies and other candidates for the rosters.

The fact that the fans paid their way in—and paid only a small fraction of a regular-season ticket—to watch what were little more than scrimmages between clubs was incidental.

Former Olympians Criticize 'Amateur' Definition

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Four past American Olympic athletes criticized the U.S. definition of amateurism in sports Tuesday and said greater subsidies should be provided the country's Olympic competitors to improve their standing.

The four testified before the President's Commission on Olympic Sports, which began two days of hearings Tuesday after meeting briefly with President Ford at the White House.

The commission, headed by Gerald B. Zornow, opened the hearings with testimony from swimmer Ellie Daniel, rower Larry Hough, handball player Rick Abrahamson and marathon runner Frank Shorter.

All four athletes, appearing as a panel, recommended that more facilities be provided along with better coaching, better finances and a rethinking of the definition for an amateur.

"The ideal of amateurism stands in the modern world as an anachronism borne of a day when international competition on any advanced level was a luxury of a limited, aristorcratic class of independent economic means," said Miss Daniel.

"The rule of amateurism has increasingly been discarded by athletes of other countries. Continued enforcement by the United States of the amateur principle by which few of its competitors abide, can only serve increasingly to place American athletes at a competitive disadvantage.

"We have long ceased to observe the amateur ideal on any logical or consistent basis within the United States," she said, adding that uneven enforcement of rules on amateurism only penalizes those unsophisticated in evading them.

The athletes were also critical of the organizations which administer amateur sports in the United States.

"The absence of athletes' rights results in the athlete being subjected to the mercy of political disputes between the three major sports governing bodies in the U.S. — namely the U.S. Olympic Committee, the NCAA and the AAU," said Abrahamson.

Shorter told the commission that the "collective egos" of athletic organizations "should not be your prime concern. Fielding the best possible Olympic team should be.

"It's no longer feasible for an Olympic calibre athlete to work a 40 hour week, he said. "The U.S. can no longer impose its own standard of what amateurism is.

"We're the only pristine nation left," he said, conceding that under the table money is also a part of amateur sports in the U.S.

"It's done and everybody knows about it," he said.

"The national committee determines what an amateur athlete is and the IOC rubber stamps it."

Huff said the U.S. administers its Olympic program like "the battle-weary maintenance crews who patched, glued or otherwise held together badly damaged DC-3's in World War II."

He also charged that in some cases an individual national organization responsible for a sport "spends its resources, assuring its own future, providing for opportunities for a few favored athletes or officials and otherwise planning for its good times."

"We are now too close to Montreal to do much to improve the situation," he said. "AnffI am not one who places the responsibility with the USOC. I have concluded that on balance the Olympic Committee has done a good job in preparing for the Montreal games.

Huff said that needed changes in amateur rules would require time and that the USOC "does not have control over the sports governing bodies in whose hands are placed the major responsibility for developing successful Olympians."

Shorter, in urging subsidies and grants for amateur athletes, said that in other countries competitors are frequently given substantial discounts on air fares, travel allowances, tax breaks and "jobs they never work at, they get paid for anyway.

Huff said that many of sports that are important in Olympic competition are overlooked in the United States, "because their importance was not established years ago.

"In discussing minor sports with high school or college atheltic directors the reasons for the low or non-existent level of support is usually given in terms of dollars and cents."

But Huff said at MIT, "a program of over 23 intercollegiate varisty sports is administered on a budget of $850,000. It can be done and without football revenues."

Curry, Green Retire

By The Associated Press

Tight end Marv Fleming—the only player to appear in five Super Bowls—was cut by the Washington Redskins Tuesday night, climaxing a day of frantic activity as the National Football League's 26 teams trimmed their rosters to 46 players.

Center Bill Curry of the Green Bay Packers and defensive back Cornell Green of the Dallas Cowboys retired, and veteran linebacker Bobby Bell was placed on waivers by the Kansas City Chiefs in the other major moves made by coaches slicing their player personnel for the Tuesday deadline.

Fleming played pro football for 13 years, appearing in three NFL title games and two Super Bowls with the Green Bay Packers and three more Super Bowls with Miami after joining the Dolphins in 1970.

In seven years with Green Bay and five with Miami, Fleming made 157 catches, 1,823 yards and 16 touchdowns.

Curry, an 11-year star, was the only holdover from the first Super Bowl, in which the Packers defeated Kansas City in 1967. He was gone from the Packers for eight years and was reacquired this year in a trade with the Los Angeles Rams.

The Packers also cut five players, including lineman Bob Martin, their 11th-round draft choice from the University of Washington.

Bell, a two-time All-Pro with 26 career interceptions, asked to be placed on waivers to pursue other interests, a Chiefs spokesman said. "He's not sure what he wants to do. He may retire or may try to get with another team," the spokesman said.

The Chiefs also obtained offensive lineman Randy Beisler and an undisclosed draft choice from San Francisco, sending defensive back Nate Allen to the 49ers. San Francisco also sent cornerback Frank Oliver, their fourth-round draft choice from Kentucky State, to the Buffalo Bills for an undisclosed draft choice.

Green, a former Utah State basketball player who became one of the few players in the history of the NFL to make All-Pro at both strong safety and cornerback, retired to take a full time scouting job with the Cowboys.

The 13-year veteran has been an offseason scout for Dallas for five years. He had played in 182 consecutive games, not missing one since signing as a free agent in 1962. The fivetime All-Pro—four at left cornerback—had 34 career interceptions, two for touchdowns.

In another deal, the New York Jets acquired running back Carl Garrett from the Chicago Bears for running back Mike Adamle, an undisclosed 1976 draft choice and the rights to defensive lineman Ron Rydalch of the World Football League's Birmingham Vulcans. The Jets also cut five players, including wide receiver Leland Glass.

The Cincinnati Bengals traded guard Pat Matson to the Green Bay Packers for an undisclosed future draft choice. Matson was the last man remaining of the original 40 Bengals acquired in the expansion draft when they came into existence in 1968.

Detroit fullback Steve Owens, still recovering from knee surgery, was placed on the "unable to perform" list, which means he can't practice with the team until Oct. 15, then the Lions have 15 days to decide what to do with him.

Wagon Train Open To Public

Wagon Train State Recreation Area east of Hickman will open again to public use on Thursday, September 11, according to the Game and Parks Commission.

The area should be attractive to campers and picnickers, but boaters, fishermen, and swimmers should look to the other Salt Valley lakes. Wagon Train's boat ramps are still above the water line, and no fish are presdent in the lake for anglers as a result of the recent renovation.

Siebert, Henderson Get Moral Win

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

The worst possible result of failure is defeatism.

Fortunately, Henderson and Chuck Siebert haven't allowed failure to evolve into defeatism.

Last season, Henderson was one of 27 Nebraska prep football teams which failed to win a game.

The Huskies still haven't broken into the win column, but last Friday night must have qualified as a moral victory.

Henderson tied Geneva, Class C's No. 1-rated pre-season team, 6-6, as Siebert rushed for 158 yards on 28 carries. For his performance, the 6-0, 196-pound senior fullback and I-back receives the Sunday Journal and Star's first Player of the Week honor.

Scored Only Touchdown

Siebert scored his team's only touchdown on an eight-yard run and also was credited with five unassisted tackles and five assists at middle linebacker.

Siebert must have been especially determined to change Henderson football fortunes. Henderson coach Tom Nelson points out Siebert accomplished his impressive statistics despite playing the entire game on a sprained ankle.

Most of last year's other winless teams continued to suffer. Only four of the 23 — Crofton, Elba, Sargent and Verdigre — started the new season with a victory. Ten were shut out.

Others who'll receiver Player of the Week cards include:

Dave Stear, Lincoln East — Senior halfback caught eight passes for 133 yards and one touchdown in Spartans' 40-7 cruise past Omaha Gross.

Collin Braynard, Crete — In the last minute, quarterback scrambled for 20-yard gain after fading back to pass, then threw a nine-yard touchdown pass with seven seconds remaining to give Cardinals 6-0 win at Grand Island Northwest.

Brad Shanahan, Blair — Senior 200-pound tailback rushed 24 times for 121 yards, one touchdown and an extra point in team's 20-0 win over Plattsmouth.

Ron Newton, Lexington — Junior fullback bulled for 170 yards rushing on 22 carries (all on inside runs from tackle to tackle) and a 34-yard touchdown sprint on a fourth down situation as Minutemen defeated Superior, 32-18.

Joe Krajicek, Gretna — In a 24-0 win over Raymond Central, this 5-11, 185-pound senior intercepted two passes, ran for a 28-yard touchdown and led his team in tackles.

Tim White, Oshkosh — The 6-2, 185-pound senior middle linebacker and three-year starter, who runs the 40 in :04.8, was credited with 23 tackles in Oshkosh's 24-8 upset win over Bayard. His seven tackles behind the line of scrimmage helped check Bayard to only 32 yards rushing.

Kerry Weinmaster, North Platte — All-state defensive tackle and middle guard was credited with 16 solo tackles in Bulldogs' impressive 6-6 tie against Lincoln East.

Roger Biltoft, Nelson — Senior end caught three touchdown passes in team's 28-6 win over Red Cloud. Nelson coach Gary DeBoer described his last two scoring grabs as "circus catches."

Ron Hager, York — Junior left cornerback's major responsibility was covering Central City's 6-6 standout end, Jeff Scholl. Hager knocked down three passes, including one which looked like a certain touchdown, and finished with three solo tackles and two assists. Scholl was held to one reception as York defeated Central City, 22-7.

Dennis Ehman, Fairmont — Senior kicked a 37-yard field goal as Class D's No. 1 pre-season rated team survived scare from Deshler, 3-0. He was Class D all-state kicker as a junior.

Kirk Greenstreet, Clay Center — Senior linebacker's 13 tackles were instrumental in team's 17-0 win over Meridian.

Alan Temme, Petersburg — In team's loss to Chambers, he had 16 unassisted tackles and five assists at linebacker. He also intercepted a pass and returned it 50 yards for a touchdown.

John Jurgensen, Brule — Junior halfback scored all of his team's points in a 14-12 upset win over Maxwell. He rushed for 129 yards on 20 carries, had touchdown runs of four and 39 yards and was credited with nine tackles at linebacker.

Brian Hamik, Stuart — Junior split end caught an 80-yard touchdown pass in a 6-0 win over Spencer.

Onofrio's Halftime Silence Maintains Tigers' Emotions

Columbia, Mo. (UPI) — Missouri football coach Al Onofrio said Tuesday he couldn't really believe what had happened when he took his team to the dressing room at halftime Monday night with a 20-0 lead over Bear Bryant's supposed powerhouse, Alabama.

"I just sat there and thought 'That's about the best half of football I've ever seen a Missouri team play.' The team was still so high in the dressing room that it was difficult to talk to them," Onofrio recalled, "so I didn't say a word. I just let 'em holler and keep their emotion."

Keep it they did, and went on to the college season's first major upset, 20-7, over the Crimson Tide, and earn Onofrio selection as UPI's coach of the week.

Though it might have looked like it, Onofrio said Missouri had no intention of sitting on the lead in the second half.

"Not at all," he said. "We knew we'd have to be aggressive all the way. It's just that Alabama started throwing all sorts of defensive combinations at us. They gambled some and got away with it."

On Tuesday, he received a most unusual telegram.

"Congratulations — KU students," it read.

"Isn't that something?" said Onofrio. "That's the kind- of thing that really makes you feel good. I'm glad they took the time to do it."

The Kansas University students were reflecting the unusual feelings of pride in Missouri's victory, a pride felt throughout the Big Eight Conference.

Missouri and Kansas are heated rivals throughout the season. But there was little doubt where other Big Eight schools' sympathies were after Onofrio's Tigers stunned Bear Bryant's second-ranked club.

"We felt very strongly about representing our conference," said Onofrio. "Especially since it was on national television. I hope everyone enjoyed it as much as I did. Our players were just so ready to play that football game. They've been mentally set on it from the start of spring practice."

Perhaps that was another reason Onofrio decided against making any half-time speech to his psyched-up troops. There was never any doubt about the outcome throughout the second half, with Missouri controlling the ball almost all the way, and finishing inside the Alabama 10 as time ran out.

Sevigne: Harriers 'Young'

Nebraska cross country coach Frank Sevigne announced a six-meet schedule for his 1975 squad, opening Sept. 27 when Wisconsin invades Lincoln.

The Huskers list four returning lettermen, including North Platte junior Chris Grieb, Keith Whitaker, a junior from Morwell, Mass., Matt Reckmeyer, junior, Mt. Morris, Ill., and sophomore Harold Stelzer, Situate, Mass.

"Although we will have four lettermen on hand, we will again field a young team. We have some tough early meets against Wisconsin and Kansas State, but hopefully that experience will help us in the Big 8 meet come November," Sevigne said.

Other returning runners are junior Gale Wheeler, Albion, and sophomores Dave Johnston, Omaha, Vance Kramer, Lincoln, and Paul McClain, Bellevue.

1975 Schedule

Sept. 27 — Wisconsin
Oct. 4 — at Kansas State
Oct. 11 — Missouri
Oct. 18 — Drake
Oct. 25 — South Dakota State
Nov. 1 — Big 8 meet at Colorado

Hunter Shot; Listed Stable

Louis A. Klein, 26, of 3831 S. 57th, was listed in fair but stable condition at Veterans Hospital Tuesday after being accidentally shot while hunting at Pawnee Lake Sunday morning, the Lancaster County sheriff's office reported.

According to sheriff's reports, a member of the Klein hunting party tripped and his .22 caliber rifle accidentally discharged, hitting Klein in the upper right chest and breaking his right arm.

Fresh Troops Needed In Heat

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (UPI) — University of Miami Coach Carl Selmer said Tuesday he intends to use two platoons on both offense and defense in the Hurricanes' first few games to combat the effects of early season heat and humidity.

Selmer, whose team opens its 1975 season in Atlanta Sept. 20 against Georgia Tech, said the Hurricanes have the necessary depth this year to keep sending in fresh troops.

"With the heat we have down here at this time of the year, I believe substitution is the name of the game," Selmer said at the Hurricanes' kickoff luncheon.

"We are definitely able to substitute with this year's ball club," he said. "We have 10 offensive linemen I'm not afraid to send in at any time. We're not afraid of any of our three quarterbacks, fullbacks or I-backs. I'm also proud of the depth we have on defense."

Following Georgia Tech, the Hurricanes host top-ranked Oklahoma Sept. 26, visit Nebraska Oct. 4 and are at home against Colorado Oct. 10 and Houston Oct. 17.

Judge Will Hold Hearing On Legality Of Big Green

Omaha (AP) — District Judge John Murphy will hold a hearing Sept. 22 to determine if the Omaha lottery still is illegal.

Omaha attorney Martin Cannon obtained the hearing date Tuesday on a motion to hold the lottery backers in contempt of court. Cannon contends the lottery is in violation of Murphy's earlier order which declared the previous procedure to be illegal.

The hearing will be held the day before the announced start of the lottery.

Omaha City Council members were ordered to appear at the hearing, along with officials of the City Betterment Corp., operator of the lottery.

Cannon had said the lottery is illegal because ticket sellers and banks would make money on the game, in violation of the court order. Sellers are to receive 5% of sales and banks 1% for holding the proceeds.

In his earlier ruling, Murphy said promoters of the lottery cannot make a profit. City Betterment's contract with a consulting firm then was changed so that only specific services are paid for. The firm earlier was to have received 3% of net revenues.

After Murphy's ruling, the City Council repealed the city's agreement to accept half the proceeds. The court said that was illegal because the voters did not approve the city's involvement in a lottery.

Council members said Tuesday they felt they had complied with the order.

Cannon said the present setup amounts to a municipal lottery because the lottery corporation would do things "that are appropriate for the city to do."

Arson Charge Against Son Of Judge Dropped

Omaha (UPI) — Douglas County has decided to drop charges against the son of a Des Moines judge because the son has been returned to Des Moines for additional psychiatric treatment.

Deputy County Attorney Francis Pane said he thought it "would be best" to have Luther Thomas Glanton III treated in Iowa.

Glanton, 19, was charged with first-degree arson and escape. He is the son of Associate Polk County District Judge and Mrs. Luther T. Glanton of Des Moines. Mrs. Glanton is an attorney in Des Moines.

Pane said young Glanton has been hospitalized several times for psychological problems, and those problems were the reasons he moved to have the charges dismissed.

The arson charge resulted from two small fires set last January at the Omaha Hilton Hotel. He escaped for a few hours from the Douglas County Youth Center last February where he was awaiting trial.

The Farm outlook is important. Complete coverage of the latest of importance to agriculture appears on the "Sunday Journal and Star" farm page.

Attendance Rises 10% At G.I. Stuhr Museum

Grand Island (UPI) — The summer tourist season at Stuhr Museum has ended and Museum Director Jack Learned said attendance improved by about 10% over last year.

Learned said attendance for the summer was pegged at 35,069.

"I don't think that it quite balanced our record year of 1973, but it's such an improvement over last year that we were elated," he said.

The summer season attendance record of 38,216 was set in 1973. The all-time year-round attendance record of 69,347 was also set in that year.

Learned said this summer's visitors came from "all over the world, not just the United States." He said information indicated there were a number of Nebraskans who made their initial visit to the museum.

The director said he's hoping to reach an attendance of 100,000 soon. He said the prospects of that kind of an attendance continue to improve as exhibits are added. He noted construction of Gus Fonner Memorial Hall is well underway and it is hoped work will be either completed or nearly so by next summer on a working steam railroad.

The director reported that as of Aug. 26 some $16,000 in revenue bonds were retired, dropping the total of outstanding bonds to $265,500.

Lye Thrown In Omahan's Face

Omaha (UPI) — University of Nebraska Medical Center doctors said Tuesday it would be several days before they could tell whether an Omaha man who had lye thrown in his face would lose his sight.

Robert Bevins, 44, was taken to Douglas County Hospital Monday and then transferred to the Medical Center where he was listed in good condition.

Authorities said Bevins was lying on a living room couch in the home of his ex-wife, Shirley, 49, when she came into the room with a bucket, called his name and threw the lye at him when he looked up.

A Medical Center spokesman said Bevins hasn't lost vision in either eye "but one eye is worse than the other."

"As far as his eyes are concerned," the spokesman said, "it will be several days before the doctors will know anything."

Police said Mrs. Bevins was booked on suspicion of maiming. Four months ago, police said, Mrs. Bevins was arrested for allegedly stabbing Bevins in the chest. However, Bevins refused to testify and the case was dismissed.

Bevins has been living at the Open Door Mission in downtown Omaha for the past several weeks. A spokesman there said Bevins had enrolled in the mission's alcoholic treatment program.

Police said Bevins told officers he went to his ex-wife's home Monday because she said she had a problem with one of their children. The couple was divorced about 13 years ago.

Bennett To Be Tried For Murder

Omaha (AP) — Municipal Court Judge Walter Cropper Tuesday ordered Dwayne D. Bennett, 17, to be tried in District Court for the first-degree murder of Mrs. Maria Gibilisco.

Mrs. Gibilisco, 76, was found dead in bed at her Omaha home July 20.

She had been stabbed once across the neck and twice in the chest, police said.

Bennett was arrested in the State of Washington in late August in connection with the case. He was on leave from the Kearney Boys Training Center at the time of the slaying.

At a preliminary hearing before Cropper, Detective Patrolman Gregory Thompson testified that police believe Bennett did not want to return to Kearney. Police beliece Bennett was looking for money to take a trip away from Omaha, Thompson said.

Bennett allegedly saw Mrs. Gibilisco lying in bed and decided to rape the woman, Thompson said. He then stabbed her three times with a knife he found in her kitchen, police have said.

Bennett will be held without bond until his trial begins.

It May Be $800 Million

Washington (AP) — Gross overpayments in the first 18 months of the Supplemental Security Income federalized welfare program are figured so far at $461 million and could run up to $800 million, Social Security Commissioner James B. Cardwell told Congress.

Celebrations Mark Return

From News Wires

Celebration was the order of the day in Columbia as the Missouri Tigers returned after their 20-7 upset victory over Alabama Monday night.

Several thousand fans greeted the team at the airport and Dr. Mel Sheenhan, director of athletics, said, "I was still numb from the game."

But MU ticket manager Mike Ward wasn't numb. He'd had a busy day, trying to track down the goalposts, numbers from the scoreboard, team benches and other mementos fans took from the Missouri stadium.

"The fans reacted like we had played the game here," Ward said. "We sold 2,000 Illinois tickets today alone," he said referring to Missouri's next opponent which it plays at Champaign, Ill., Saturday.

Elsewhere in the Big Eight, teams were preparing for opening games this weekend.

No. 1 ranked Oklahoma began to wind things down for the home opener with the Oregon Ducks. Coach Barry Switzer said the team worked better Tuesday, but is still not completely ready for the Ducks.

"We've still got a lot of teaching to do," he said. "We'll work on some of the things Missouri used against Alabama . . . in addition to some of our basic running plays.

Three other Big Eight schools open the season with a home game. Colorado greets California, Oklahoma State hosts Wichita State and Kansas will entertain Washington State.

Colorado coach Bill Mallory said junior college transfer Tony Reed would start at tailback. Reed beat returning starter Billy Waddy, who led the Buffs in rushing last season.

Mallory said both will see a lot of playing time, as both backs were nearly equal throughout practice sessions.

Oklahoma state also had some personnel changes Tuesday. Kenny Walker, a senior back, was moved to the right halfback slot, replacing sophomore Skip Taylor.

The Cowboys also studied the expected offensive and defensive alignments of Wichita State, although there was no hitting. Coach Jim Stanley said he expected more of the same type of practice this week.

Injuries are the worry of Kansas coach Bud Moore. Junior starting linebacker Terry Beeson suffered a knee injury and missed practice, while freshman Dennis Balhena was ill and may not play against Washington State.

"If we had to play today," Moore said, "we probably would not be ready. We still need a couple of days of preparation."

Kansas State and Iowa State both hit the road for their openers. K State goes to Tulsa, while Iowa State travels to Los Angeles to meet UCLA.

Kansas State coach Ellis Rainsberger said he would start tapering practice Wednesday. "We need to polish things up and mentally get ready to have a supreme effort," Rainsberger said.

"We know how good Tulsa is and what kind of effort we need," the new K State coach said.

Iowa State ran through a two-hour workout in preparation for the UCLA game.

"UCLA is an outstanding offensive team," said coach Earle Bruce. "John Sciarra is a great quarterback and is an expert at running the veer offense."

East Garners Volleyball Win

Papillion — Returning starter Debbie Gade scored 13 points in lifting Lincoln East to a 15-6, 15-4 win over Papillion here Tuesday night.

Gade also served nine straight points in the second game. Another returner to the team this year, Ann Heermann, served a string of six points in the first game and garnered eight points in the match.

All 12 members of the East High team played in the opener for the Lincoln team.

Kiewit Center Building Started

Omaha (AP) — Ground was broken Tuesday at Creighton University for a $4 million physical fitness center for students, faculty, and staff.

Construction is expected to be completed in about a year on the Kiewit Physical Fitness Center, named for Peter Kiewit, chairman of the board of Peter Kiewit Sons' Co., and his wife, Evelyn, in recognition of their donation for the center.

The facility, which will be located between Creighton's two major groups of dormitories, will include a swimming pool, courts for handball, tennis and basketball, and exercise rooms.

Hole-In-One

Don Palmer aced the third hole at Holmes Park Golf Course Tuesday to record his first hole-in-one. Palmer knocked a five-iron into the cup on the 153-yard hole.

Palmer, who manages the Jim Ager Memorial Junior Golf Course, was playing with Wendell Milligan.

Soccer Meeting Rescheduled

A meeting to determine interest in a youth soccer program scheduled for Saturday morning at the southeast Lincoln Y has been rescheduled to Sept. 20.

The gathering will help decide whether plans for a youth soccer league of 7-9-year-olds have enough support to be implemented. Parents should call the south family branch for further information.

Oklahoma's Joe Washington eyeing best year ever.

Washington Setting New Goals For '75

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Elusive Joe Washington has set two major goals for himself this football season.

The No. 1 runner in the backfield of the top-ranked Oklahoma Sooners wants to rush for 1500 yards and score at least two touchdowns a game.

"I like to think this is going to be my best year," said Washington, who collected 1321 yards and made 14 touchdowns during Oklahoma's unbeaten 1974 campaign. "If I can run for 1500 yards and get two TDs a game, I think that would satisfy me."

Sooner Coach Barry Switzer, who has run out of superlatives in describing Washington, said his big star is "going to have to have a fast start" to have a shot at the coveted Heisman Trophy.

"And the team must have a fast start," Switzer said. "Remember, because of our probation the last two years, there has been no television exposure for Washington."

Switzer, who drolls every time somebody mentions Houdini Joe, will help Washington's cause by allowing him to play as much as he wants to play and carry the ball as much as he wants to carry it.

"Joe knows how to take the ball and run," Switzer said. "He did that as a freshman. He had us whooping and hollering then. A lot of backs gain 100 yards a game but there aren't many who gain six yards every time they touch the ball. Joe does."

Still, Washington, modest and quiet-mannered, isn't certain he wants to try to hog the Sooners' offensive spotlight.

"I'd like to leave how much I play and how much I run up to Coach Switzer," Washington said. "I like playing. Any chance I get to play I'm going to play."

Washington, probably the nation's finest running back and a tremendous blocker, was third in last year's Heisman Trophy voting and said he "didn't deserve to win the trophy. My year could have been better last season."

So far during practice, nobody has laid a hand on Joe. He has been held out of scrimmage. Washington doesn't like it but said, "I've learned to accept things like that. No, nobody says anything about me not scrimmaging. We're a close team. They understand."

Washington admitted he tries to sneak into scrimmage on occasions but has been unsuccessful.

"I'd like to get in a few plays," he explained.

Equality In All Sports

The recent decision of a judge in Alabama to permit the visiting teams in football to have an equal number of eligible players as home teams also included all other sports.

That fact has been virtually overlooked by most sports writers, including myself, but Nebraska basketball coach Joe Cipriano has made me aware of the ruling.

Originally, the NCAA voted to limit travel squads in basketball to 10 players while permitting the home team to dress 13. Since the Big Eight limit in the past has been 12 travelers, it is assumed that same number will be in effect when the roundballers begin play late in November.

By the same token, the limit of 18 on the road in baseball has been erased and it is likely teams will travel with 23 players, the limit established for home teams.

The limit of scholarships that can be in effect at any one time in tennis has been set at five. This seems like a stupid rule since college tennis plays six singles matches (plus three doubles) in dual meets.

Wrestling is limited to 11 scholarships. Since there are 10 weight classes, it looks like competition for starting spots has been eliminated and there is no margin for replacing injured athletes even though that sport almost always has athletes who suffer injuries.

Track and field can have 14 scholarships even though there are 19 events in an NCAA championship meet, ranging from sprints to distance running and the various field events which require certain skills.

SEC Start Not Good

Southeastern Conference teams over the past 42 seasons have compiled a record of winning 70 per cent of their games against major non-league opponents, but the 1975 score at the moment is one victory and three defeats. The most prominent loss, of course, is the 20-7 setback Missouri handed Alabama Monday night.

The SEC is 26-15-3 against Big Eight teams, a 61.4 per cent winning average. Nebraska will get a chance to reduce that mark when the Cornhuskers entertain Louisiana State in the season opener here on Saturday.

LSU's record against all non-conference opponents is a sizzling 75.1 per cent on 126 victories, 39 losses and eight ties. Strange as it may seem, Saturday's game is the first regularly scheduled contest by the Huskers against an SEC member.

Nebraska is 5-2 against teams from the league, but all the games have been bowl tests. The two losses were to Alabama in the Orange (1966) and Sugar (1967). Victories came over 'Bama (1972 Orange), Auburn (1964 Orange), Georgia (1969 Sun), Louisiana State (1971 Orange) and Florida (1974 Sugar).

Over the next few seasons, the Huskers are scheduled to go to Baton Rouge to face LSU in 1976, and to Alabama in 1978 ('Bama comes here in 1977).

The ten schools currently comprising the SEC carry an all-time winning record with ten of the eleven conferences classified as major prior to this season. They've won 54.3 per cent of the games with Big Ten teams (12-10-1), 60 per cent with the Southwest Conference (125-81-14), 62 per cent with the Pacific-8 (15-9-1), 72.8 per cent with the Southern (163-58-9) and 77.9 per cent with the Atlantic Coast (112-30-5).

Skywriters Rank LSU 7th

The Southeastern Conference Skywriters seldom pick the right team to win the title, so it should be taken with a grain of salt that they've named LSU to finish seventh this season. They tabbed the Tigers second a year ago and they finished ninth.

They picked Alabama to take its fifth consecutive league title recently, and after Monday night that choice has to be questioned. The rest of the first division included Auburn, Florida, Tennessee and Mississippi State.

The Big Ten Skywriters have had some success recently because it has been 50-50 that either Michigan or Ohio State would be the champion. This year they've selected Michigan, despite the fact Coach Bo Schembechler has said he would open with a freshman quarterback against Wisconsin Saturday.

Ohio State and Michigan State, who'll battle Saturday in East Lansing, were just a few votes behind the Wolverines with Wisconsin a solid fourth. Purdue, Illinois, Iowa and Minnesota rank next in order.

Indiana, which will be in Lincoln a week from Saturday to play the Huskers, was relegated to a probable ninth-place finish even though Coach Lee Corso has been talking about a bowl game. Northwestern was an overwhelming pick to be last.

Texas Christian, Nebraska's third opponent here Sept. 27, was voted to be last in the Southwest Conference in a poll conducted by TCU. The Texas Aggies were tabbed favorites with Texas, Arkansas, Baylor, Texas Tech, Southern Methodist and Rice rated above the Horned Frogs.

Osborne Searches For Punting Team Speed

By BOB OWENS
Star Sports Editor

Nebraska football fans won't necessarily be able to tell all the Husker players with the aid of their official program Saturday in the season opener against Louisiana State in Memorial Stadium.

The confusion, however, will only be when Nebraska is punting. That's when tight ends Larry Mushinskie and Brad Jenkins will slip on new numbers so they'll be okay to line up at guard.

As ends, they're required to wear 80 or 90 numbers — Mushinskie is 88 and Jenkins is 92. When they're on the interior of the line they must wear jerseys with numbers between 50 and 79. The numbers haven't yet been selected for them.

"Putting Mushinskie and Jenkins at guard is primarily a matter of speed," Coach Tom Osborne said. "We feel like we need to get downfield fast on punts and we also feel the people at guard have to weigh between 210 and 220 to protect until they release and go downfield."

The Huskers have worked on all phases of the kicking game and the specialty teams are set.

Mike Coyle, who kicked 41 of 45 extra points and 7 of 13 field goals last season, again will handle those chores as well as kickoff.

Randy Lessman, who averaged 37.9 yards a punt on 44 attempts and had none blocked, again will be the punter.

In addition to Mushinskie and Jenkins, others on the punting team will be ends Curtis Craig and Tommy Heiser, tackles Dan Schmidt and Steve Lindquist, center Tom Thomas, up-backs Monte Anthony (or Dave Gillespie) and Dodie Donnell, and fullback Tony Davis.

The punt return team will consist of the regular defensive team with Dave Butterfield as the upman and Bobby Thomas as the deep man.

Either Thomas or freshman Kenny Brown will line up deep with Craig on the kickoff return team. Others on the field will be the regular offensive guards and tackles, the two tight ends and two fullbacks (Davis and Gary Higgs).

Quarterback Terry Luck will hold for Coyle on both points after touchdown and field goals.

Osborne said the thinking right now is to dress Al Eveland as "insurance" on PAT's and FG's just in case something happened to Coyle. Eveland booted two of three extra point tries and one of three field goals last seasons.

The Huskers went through another grueling two-hour workout Tuesday, featuring work against LSU's offenses and defenses and a lot of running to put the finishing touches on conditioning.

Osborne said Wednesday's practice will again be in pads, but that there wouldn't be quite as much running.

Defensive starters John Lee at middle guard and Dave Redding at end returned to practice after recovering from injuries, but center Rik Bonness still is sidelined with a strained knee.

St. Louis Cardinal shortstop Mike Tyson rolls over the shoulder of Mike Schmidt of the Phillies as Schmidt slides into second. Tyson argued the safe call, but the Phillies got the 6-2 win, anyway.

Carlton Paces Phillies' Win

The Associated Press — It may be too late for the Philadelphia Phillies but Steve Carlton finally is pain free and throwing like the left-hander most people believe is one of the best in baseball.

"I'm throwing as good as ever," said Carlton after beating the St. Louis Cardinals 6-2 Monday night with a six-hit, seven-strikeout performance.

The 30-year-old Carlton has been bothered by pain from a bone spur in his left shoulder. It causes inflamation which pains at the point of releasing the ball.

"I've been pain free for the last three or four games," said Carlton. "I've been raring back and throwing the ball. Don't have to finese, and it makes a difference."

Carlton hasn't had to soak the elbow in ice for about three weeks, and also has stopped the electric impulse treatments administered by Phillies' trainer Don Seger. The machine treatment contracts and relaxes the muscles in the inflamed area.

Carlton not only used his arm, but his bat to help the Phillies beat the Cardinals. He socked a two-run double to aid the 10-hit Philadelphia attack.

The victory moved the Phillies into second place in the National League East, one-half game ahead of the Cardinals.

The Phillies, trailing 1-0 going into the fifth, erupted for four runs on four hits in that inning.

Dave Cash then bounced out, but Larry Bowa ripped a single off losing pitcher John Denny. 9-5. scoring Carlton. Bowa sped home from first on a double by Garry Maddox.

Schmidt and Ollie Brown slammed consecutive solo home runs in the eighth inning. Schmidt's blast was his 33rd of the season.

Carlton earned his 12th victory against 13 losses, striking out seven. He gave up a run in the fifth on a double by Ken Reitz and Mike Tyson's RBI single and surrendered Ted Sizemore's third homer of the year, in the ninth.

Carlton struck out the side in the first inning and held the Cards hitless until Denny singled through the middle in the third.

St Louis made three errors in the first two innings but Denny survived without giving up a run as he pitched hitless ball through three innings.

Cash opened the Phillies first by reaching first on a wild thrown by third baseman Reitz. He took second on a pickoff throwing error by Denny. but was stranded as the next three hitters went out.

In the second, Tommy Hutton opened with a walk and was forced by Schmidt on a fielder's choice. Schmidt wound up at second when second baseman Sizemore threw wild trying for the double play. Schmidt, however. was picked off second and Brown struck out.

The Phillies, still hitless, got a base runner in the fourth on a walk to Maddox. But Denny retired Greg Luzinski and Tommy Hutton went out on a fine play by Sizemore.

The Cardinals got a base runner in the seventh when Luzinski dropped Ted Simmons liner for an error. Then Carlton retired the next three hitters.

The Phillies picked up a one-out single from Bowa in the seventh, and with two out, Luzinski singled him to third, but Hutton grounded out to end the inning.

The triumph moved the Phillies into second place in the NL East, one-half game ahead of the Cardinals, and first-place Pittsburgh's 6-5 loss to Chicago enabled the Phillies to move within six games of the Pirates.

At Pittsburgh, Andy Thornton rapped his 15th homer. then smacked a tie-breaking single in the seventh to help the Cubs edge the Pirates.

Elsewhere in the NL, it was Atlanta 4, Houston 1; Montreal 2, the New York Mets 1 in 10 innings, and San Diego 11, Cincinnati 2.

In a late game. San Francisco was at Los Angeles.

In the American League. it was Cleveland 3. Boston 2 in 10 innings; Baltimore 9. Milwaukee 1; New York Yankees 9. Detroit 6; California 5, Chicago White Sox 4. and Texas took a pair from Minnesota 3-0 and 4-2.

On the West Coast, Kansas City was at Oakland.

Home runs from Marty Perez, Mike Lum and Dave May of Atlanta powered rookie right-hander Adrian Devine to his first victory of the season.

Jim Dwyer led off the 10th inning with a single and raced home on Mike Jorgensen's double to push Montreal past the Mets, sending them to their fifth straight loss.

Alan Ashby's run-scoring single in the 10th powered the Cleveland to its victory over Boston George Hendrick led off with a double and after a one-out intentional walk to Buddy Bell, scored on Ashby's hit to left.

Lee May and Dave Duncan keyed a pair of four-run Baltimore innings and Doyle Alexander pitched a four-hitter, leading the surging Orioles over the Brewers.

The Orioles' 10th victory in 15 games pulled them to within five games of AL East-leading Boston Red Sox, the closest the defending division champions have been to first place since July 8.

Chris Chambliss ripped five hits and drove in three runs, leading the Yankees past Detroit. The big New York first baseman became the first Yankee to wallop five hits in a game this season. He singled home a run in a three-run first, doubled home one in a three-run third and capped a two-run rally in the eighth win an RBI single.

Mike Miley drove in two runs with a single and sacrifice fly and Bruce Bochte doubled home the eventual winning run in California's victory over the White Sox.

Dave Nelson's two-run single in the ninth inning capped a three-run rally, giving Texas a doubleheader sweep over Minnesota. Rookie Jim Umbarger stopped Minnesota on four hits to win the opener.

Willie McCovey drove in four runs and Rich Folkers fired a three-hitter in San Diego's victory.

Cipriano Faces Depth 'Problem'

By MARK GORDON
Star Sports Writer

Joe Cipriano has a problem — a little problem that most college basketball coaches wish they had.

It all involves recruiting. The Nebraska coaching staff last spring signed perhaps its five finest players ever in one swoop. Now the problem is, can they all play and where will they play this season?

"We have more depth than we've had before," noted Cipriano, entering his 13th year at the NU helm. "If the newcomers can come in and play right at the start, that's got to be a plus for us.

"We have a better crop of freshmen than in the past. They're a talented group of newcomers. The only problem is their knowing the system."

Carl McPipe, a 6-8 center from Hammond, Ind.; Val Martin, a 6-7 forward from South Bend, Ind., and Brian Banks, a 6-1 guard from Hammond are being counted on to contribute as freshman. Alan Holder, a 6-3 guard from Seminole Junior College (Okla.) and Fernando Chevannes, a 6-6 forward from Panama City, Panama, also will see action this season.

And therein is the major problem with this season's basketball team — keeping everyone happy when the freshman, at least from high school credentials, obviously possess enough talent to warrent starting consideration.

"Sure, it presents a tougher challenge to get your freshmen involved in the top seven or eight positions," Cipriano agreed. "If we can find a freshman that can rebound, he'll have that much of an advantage. We really lack a big strong man.

"All our players have more than adequate speed, quickness and jumping ability, but we need rebounding help," he said.

Cipriano's early analysis of each position:

CENTER — "We need someone to back up Larry Cox (a 6-6 center who was NU's regular pivotman last season). Rickey Harris could be a swingman from center to forward. McPipe is a big, strong player who has the things we need for our rebounding.

FORWARDS — In noting that junior Bob Siegel is a strong candidate to retain his starting berth, Cipriano said the competition for the other spot will be "interesting." "You've got to consider some of our returning lettermen (Terry Novak, Curt Hedberg and Harris). "A couple of newcomers also are in the running (Martin, McPipe and Chevannes)."

GUARDS—Easily the spot with the least question marks. All-Big Eight standout Jerry Fort, who has already earned three letters is a virtual certainty for one spot. Steve Willis, who transfered to NU last season from North Idaho Junior College, is also a definite threat to keep the guard spot he started at in 23 of NU's 26 games last season. Other contenders include sophomore Eric Coard, who started four games last spring, Holder and Banks.

While practice does not officially open until Oct. 15, the Huskers are using an informal cross country program to help them achieve better conditioning.

While the Huskers will be ready for their Nov. 28 opener at home against the University of Illinois (the first of three straight games against Big Ten competition), it's obvious the new fieldhouse will be dark then.

"A month ago, no one had any idea when the new place would be done," Cipriano explained. "Now there are rumors that it'll be in January or February. I don't really like the idea of splitting the seasons (the first half in the NU Coliseum, the second in the new fieldhouse).

"Sure, we're going to lose some of the advantage we've had in playing in the NU Coliseum. I think the players that have played in the Coliseum before know this ais a great place for basketball enthusiasm. but the poor seating area for spectators is a problem."

Another indefinite area is the annual red-white intrasquad game. A new Big Eight Conference ruling permits teams to play their intrasquad game off-campus.

Cipriano is investigating playing perhaps two intra-squad tests, one here at the Coliseum and the other outstate — say at Grand Island, for instance.

No official announcement has been made.

That, nevertheless, is just one of many question marks concerning the Huskers. Cipriano will have a much better idea of his team after practices begin. Now it's all guesswork.

Exhibitions Injure 30 Pro Gridders

By Associated Press

Despite the lengthening list, this year's wave of National Football League exhibition injuries doesn't seem to be much different than those of past preseasons.

As of Tuesday, with one more weekend of exhibitions remaining, the 26 teams listed 30 players—not all of them starters—with injuries more serious than the usual bumps and bruises that each preseason brings.

In comparison, the clubs listed 28 players hurt on the eve of the 1971 season and 27 just before the 1972 campaign began. In 1973, when the elimination of the so-called "move" list permitted increased shuttling of players on and off rosters, the number dropped to 15.

Last year, with the preseason strike keeping so many veterans out of the first few exhibitions, no comparative figures were available.

In some cases, this year's injuries are handing a number of clubs some severe setbacks.

Quarterback Archie Manning of New Orleans will miss about a month with a chipped elbow. The same goes for New England quarterback Jim Plunkett, out with a shoulder separation.

Tony Greene's broken collarbone, which will keep him out for a few weeks, and Robert James' ripped up right knee, an injury that has kayoed him for the season, will hurt Buffalo's defensive secondary.

Reserve quarterback Al Woodall, running back Emerson Booser, wide receiver David Knight and safety Steve Tannen are among the hobbling New York Jets. Torn knee ligaments have sidelined Atlanta defensive end Claude Humphrey for the year. And Miami's defense will have to play this season without linebacker Nick Buoniconti, who shattered his right thumb, and safety Dick Anderson, who has undergone left knee surgery to repair torn cartilege.

But the fact that this year's list includes a plethora of stars is also no different than in recent years.

In the past few preseaons, quarterbacks like the Jets' Joe Namath, Dallas' Roger Staubach, Green Bay's Bart Starr, Washington's Sonny Jurgensen and Houston's Lynn Dickey have been knocked out of action, along with other stars like Jets' running back Matt Snell, Detroit tight end Charlie Sanders, Minnesota cornerback Bobby Bryant and St. Louis wide receiver Mel Gray.

In the not-too-distant past, the primary purposes of a preseason game were to enable veterans to work themselves back into shape after the summer's idleness and to enable coaches to look over their rookies and other candidates for the rosters.

The fact that the fans paid their way in—and paid only a small fraction of a regular-season ticket—to watch what were little more than scrimmages between clubs was incidental.

Former Olympians Criticize 'Amateur' Definition

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Four past American Olympic athletes criticized the U.S. definition of amateurism in sports Tuesday and said greater subsidies should be provided the country's Olympic competitors to improve their standing.

The four testified before the President's Commission on Olympic Sports, which began two days of hearings Tuesday after meeting briefly with President Ford at the White House.

The commission, headed by Gerald B. Zornow, opened the hearings with testimony from swimmer Ellie Daniel, rower Larry Hough, handball player Rick Abrahamson and marathon runner Frank Shorter.

All four athletes, appearing as a panel, recommended that more facilities be provided along with better coaching, better finances and a rethinking of the definition for an amateur.

"The ideal of amateurism stands in the modern world as an anachronism borne of a day when international competition on any advanced level was a luxury of a limited, aristorcratic class of independent economic means," said Miss Daniel.

"The rule of amateurism has increasingly been discarded by athletes of other countries. Continued enforcement by the United States of the amateur principle by which few of its competitors abide, can only serve increasingly to place American athletes at a competitive disadvantage.

"We have long ceased to observe the amateur ideal on any logical or consistent basis within the United States," she said, adding that uneven enforcement of rules on amateurism only penalizes those unsophisticated in evading them.

The athletes were also critical of the organizations which administer amateur sports in the United States.

"The absence of athletes' rights results in the athlete being subjected to the mercy of political disputes between the three major sports governing bodies in the U.S. — namely the U.S. Olympic Committee, the NCAA and the AAU," said Abrahamson.

Shorter told the commission that the "collective egos" of athletic organizations "should not be your prime concern. Fielding the best possible Olympic team should be.

"It's no longer feasible for an Olympic calibre athlete to work a 40 hour week, he said. "The U.S. can no longer impose its own standard of what amateurism is.

"We're the only pristine nation left," he said, conceding that under the table money is also a part of amateur sports in the U.S.

"It's done and everybody knows about it," he said.

"The national committee determines what an amateur athlete is and the IOC rubber stamps it."

Huff said the U.S. administers its Olympic program like "the battle-weary maintenance crews who patched, glued or otherwise held together badly damaged DC-3's in World War II."

He also charged that in some cases an individual national organization responsible for a sport "spends its resources, assuring its own future, providing for opportunities for a few favored athletes or officials and otherwise planning for its good times."

"We are now too close to Montreal to do much to improve the situation," he said. "Anffl am not one who places the responsibility with the USOC. I have concluded that on balance the Olympic Committee has done a good job in preparing for the Montreal games.

Huff said that needed changes in amateur rules would require time and that the USOC "does not have control over the sports governing bodies in whose hands are placed the major responsibility for developing successful Olympians."

Shorter, in urging subsidies and grants for amateur athletes, said that in other countries competitors are frequently given substantial discounts on air fares, travel allowances, tax breaks and "jobs they never work at, they get paid for anyway.

Huff said that many of sports that are important in Olympic competition are overlooked in the United States, "because their importance was not established years ago.

"In discussing minor sports with high school or college atheltic directors the reasons for the low or non-existent level of support is usually given in terms of dollars and cents."

But Huff said at MIT, "a program of over 23 intercollegiate varisty sports is administered on a budget of $850,000. It can be done and without football revenues."

Vlasin Captures Pistol Matches

Spec. 6 Milo Vlasin of Lincoln captured the .45 caliber pistol matches Tuesday at the National Guard Pistol Championships in Little Rock, Ark.

Vlasin scored 884 of a possible 900 points in winning the competition.

Anderson Warns Reds

SAN DIEGO (AP) — It seemed strange that the newly crowned champions of the National League's West Division should be closeted behind closed doors by their manager.

But that's what Cincinnati Reds Manager Sparky Anderson did Monday night, and his message was quick an simple—keep winning.

The early clinching of the divisional crown leaves the Reds with almost a month until the start of the National League playoffs.

"We've got to keep trying to win," Anderson said. "I'd like to see us win 108 games."

Franchise Group Denies Switches

NEW YORK (AP) — Members of major league baseball's franchise committee denied a report Tuesday that the group would recommend later this month the shift of the San Francisco Giants to Toronto and the Minnesota Twins to Seattle.

"That is an erroneous story," said M. Donald Grant of the New York Mets, chairman of the committee. "I haven't heard anything like that."

Bud Selig, president of the Milwaukee Brewers and a member of the six-man committee, termed the report "ridiculous" and "absolutely wrong."

The Toronto Star reported in its Tuesday editions that the committee would submit its solution to the continuing franchise problem at its next meeting in October.

Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn also denied the report and said the club owners would meet in Kansas City Sept. 24 to hear reports from the expansion and player relations committees.

"I flatly deny this story," Kuhn said. "The franchise committee has not made any recommendations and there's no guarantee it will happen in Kansas City."

The committee, which includes Grant, Selig, Ewing Kauffman of the Kansas City Royals and John McHale of the Montreal Expos as well as Presidents Lee MacPhail of the American League and Chub Feeney of the National League, was established at baseball's winter meetings to deal with the problems of expansion and possible transfers of clubs.

"We have been thinking of dozens of approaches," said Grant. "But that Toronto story cannot be confirmed."

Primary on the franchise committee's agenda is a solution to the overcrowded baseball situation in the San Francisco-Oakland area where the Giants and A's both have had attendance problems. It seems certain that one of the teams will move. Horace Stoneham, owner of the Giants, says it won't be his.

"We're not ready to sell," said Stoneham, "and if and when we are, the Giants will be sold in place. They are not going to leave San Francisco."

However, the San Francisco Examiner quoted Stoneham as saying: "The Giants will be sold and—that's right—there will be no stipulation that they can't be moved.

"If the new owners want to move, that's not my concern. It won't have to go to a vote of the stockholders."

Oakland owner Charles O. Finley has expressed interest in leaving the Bay Area with one report having the A's moving to Chicago, replacing the White Sox, who would be sold to Seattle interests.

Calvin Griffith, president of the Twins, said the franchise committee has not been in touch with the Minnesota club.

"There's no question they'll be meeting on this," said Griffith, "but I don't know where they get anything on Minnesota going to Seattle."

A continuing problem complicating the issue is the existence of long-term stadium leases in the cities involved. But the Twins moved to Bloomington, Minn. from Washington in 1960 and their 15-year stadium contract expires after this season, freeing the club for a move.

Seattle has threatened a lawsuit because of the American League's move out of that city in 1970. The franchise committee also has been seeking teams for Washington, and New Orleans as well as Toronto.

The Star report that two Toronto groups, one headed by Lorne W. Duguid and the other by R. Howard Webster, would be merged to purchase the Giants and move the team. According to the newspaper, the Toronto group also has talked with five other major league teams—the Atlanta Braves of the NL, and Minnesota, Baltimore, the White Sox and Cleveland Indians in the AL.

BASEBALL

Denny McLain, former American League Cy Young award winner, was named general manager of the Class AAA International League Memphis Blues.

The Cincinnati Reds, admitting they have been overwhelmed by ticket requests, said they are returning 15,000 checks from fans seeking $5 reserved seats to the National League playoffs. About 5,000 of the $5 tickets were available.

The state of Washington, King County and city of Seattle are reinitiating their twice postponed multi-million dollar lawsuit against the American League and its owners. The three parties are seeking damages over the way the one-year Seattle Pilots of 1969 suddenly became the Milwaukee Brewers in 1970.

FOOTBALL

The Minnesota Vikings traded veteran running back Oscar Reed to Atlanta for a 1976 draft choice.

Waymon Clark, who played football for the Oklahoma Sooners two years ago, has been declared incompetent to stand trial on charges he raped two women in the University of Texas area. District Court Judge Tom Blackwell ordered Clark sent to the Rusk State Hospital for the criminally insane after a state psychiatrist testified that Clark was a paranoid schizophrenic.

Veteran tight end Marv Fleming was placed on waivers by the Washington Redskins. Fleming was acquired from the Miami Dolphins during the off-season for future draft choices and negotiating rights to now-retired running back Charlie Harraway.

"Marv is a winner in every sense of the word," said Redskins coach George Allen in making the announcement.

Running back Duane Thomas has signed a "long-term" contract with the WFL Hawaiians, the team announced.

Ned Garvey, the executive director of the NFL Players' Association, said a telephone survey indicated most coaches and staff members favor a return to the 47-man squad instead of the present 43-player limit.

Former University of Florida receiver Lee McGriff has been signed by the WFL Jacksonville Express, coach Charlie Tate said.

The NCAA's Television Committee has approved a new two-year plan which would allow each team to appear one additional time, the Associated Press learned. The current TV pact, which expires this season, permits three official appearances over a two-year period, plus two additional free appearances on certain specified dates. If approved by the NCAA membership, the new plan would allow two official appearances each year beside the free dates.

Mike Boryla, a second-year pro from Stanford, bumped veteran Roman Gabriel out of the starting quarterback's job for the Philadelphia Eagles' game Saturday against Atlanta, coach Mike McCormack announced.

Wichita State kicker Kent Van Vleet suffered a knee injury in the Shockers' win over West Texas State Saturday and will require surgery. The Shockers also lost tight end Bob Cicero to an ankle injury which may need surgery.

The Atlanta Falcons have named top draft pick Steve Bartkowski to start at quarterback Saturday in Atlanta's final preseason game against Philadelphia.

HOCKEY

The Atlanta Flames of the NHL traded center Jerry Byers of the Omaha farm club to the New York Rangers in exchange for goalie Curt Ridley of the Rangers' Providence minor league team.

The Hamilton Spectator says Canadians playing for American-based teams in the WHA are being refused entry into the United States because the league has not filed full salary information with the U.S. Department of Labor.

Gordie Howe, hockey's all-time leading scorer, will become the first playing president in hockey history when he skates for the Houston Aeros of the WHA in their season opener. Howe is scheduled to play in just one game before retiring to the Aeros' front office.

Miami developer Owen Goldman says he expects the NHL to award Miami a franchise "by January, or maybe before," now that a 17,000-seat coliseum has been authorized.

OTHER SPORTS

Two veteran truck drivers roared across the Bonneville Salt Flats at 132 miles per hour in the nine-foot tall cab of a long-haul rig, setting 14 national speed records.

University of Oklahoma senior golfer Mark Witt said he is quitting the Sooner golf team to turn professional next spring.

Wajima, who enjoyed a 10-pound advantage in beating Foolish Pleasure by a head in the Governor on Labor Day, will suffer the penalty of success Saturday when he carries only two pounds less than the Kentucky Derby winner in the $250,000 Marlboro Cup.

Rookie Jim Bostic of New Mexico State has been signed by the Kansas City Kings of the NBA. Bostic, 6-8 and 225 pounds, was the Kings' eighth-round draft pick.

The New York Knicks announced the acquistion of 7-foot, 260-pound center Bob Christian. Christian played in the European Basketball League last season.

Mike Mosley, who has survived two serious crashes at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, announced his retirement, saying "I want to save my family and my happiness."

Curry, Green Retire

By The Associated Press

Tight end Marv Fleming—the only player to appear in five Super Bowls—was cut by the Washington Redskins Tuesday night, climaxing a day of frantic activity as the National Football League's 26 teams trimmed their rosters to 46 players.

Center Bill Curry of the Green Bay Packers and defensive back Cornell Green of the Dallas Cowboys retired, and veteran linebacker Bobby Bell was placed on waivers by the Kansas City Chiefs in the other major moves made by coaches slicing their player personnel for the Tuesday deadline.

Fleming played pro football for 13 years, appearing in three NFL title games and two Super Bowls with the Green Bay Packers and three more Super Bowls with Miami after joining the Dolphins in 1970.

In seven years with Green Bay and five with Miami, Fleming made 157 catches, 1,823 yards and 16 touchdowns.

Curry, an 11-year star, was the only holdover from the first Super Bowl, in which the Packers defeated Kansas City in 1967. He was gone from the Packers for eight years and was reacquired this year in a trade with the Los Angeles Rams.

The Packers also cut five players, including lineman Bob Martin, their 11th-round draft choice from the University of Washington.

Bell, a two-time All-Pro with 26 career interceptions, asked to be placed on waivers to pursue other interests, a Chiefs spokesman said. "He's not sure what he wants to do. He may retire or may try to get with another team," the spokesman said.

The Chiefs also obtained offensive lineman Randy Beisler and an undisclosed draft choice from San Francisco, sending defensive back Nate Allen to the 49ers. San Francisco also sent cornerback Frank Oliver, their fourth-round draft choice from Kentucky State, to the Buffalo Bills for an undisclosed draft choice

Green, a former Utah State basketball player who became one of the few players in the history of the NFL to make All-Pro at both strong safety and cornerback, retired to take a full time scouting job with the Cowboys.

The 13-year veteran has been an offseason scout for Dallas for five years. He had played in 182 consecutive games, not missing one since signing as a free agent in 1962. The fivetime All-Pro—four at left cornerback—had 34 career interceptions, two for touchdowns.

In another deal, the New York Jets acqured running back Carl Garrett from the Chicago Bears for running back Mike Adamle, an undisclosed 1976 draft choice and the rights to defensive lineman Ron Rydalch of the World Football League's Birmingham Vulcans. The Jets also cut five players, including wide receiver Leland Glass.

The Cincinnati Bengals traded guard Pat Matson to the Green Bay Packers for an undisclosed future draft choice. Matson was the last man remaining of the original 40 Bengals acqured in the expansion draft when they came into existence in 1968.

Detroit fullback Steve Owens, still recovering from knee surgery, was placed on the "unable to perform" list, which means he can't practice with the team until Oct. 15, then the Lions have 15 days to decide what to do with him.

Wagon Train Open To Public

Wagon Train State Recreation Area east of Hickman will open again to public use on Thursday, September 11, according to the Game and Parks Commission.

The area should be attractive to campers and picnickers, but boaters, fishermen, and swimmers should look to the other Salt Valley lakes. Wagon Train's boat ramps are still above the water line, and no fish are presdent in the lake for anglers as a result of the recent renovation.

Siebert, Henderson Get Moral Win

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

The worst possible result of failure is defeatism.

Fortunately, Henderson and Chuck Siebert haven't allowed failure to evolve into defeatism.

Last season, Henderson was one of 27 Nebraska prep football teams which failed to win a game.

The Huskies still haven't broken into the win column, but last Friday night must have qualified as a moral victory.

Henderson tied Geneva, Class C's No. 1-rated pre-season team, 6-6, as Siebert rushed for 158 yards on 28 carries. For his performance, the 6-0, 196-pound senior fullback and I-back receives the Sunday Journal and Star's first Player of the Week honor.

Scored Only Touchdown

Siebert scored his team's only touchdown on an eight-yard run and also was credited with five unassisted tackles and five assists at middle linebacker.

Siebert must have been especially determined to change Henderson football fortunes. Henderson coach Tom Nelson points out Siebert accomplished his impressive statistics despite playing the entire game on a sprained ankle.

Most of last year's other winless teams continued to suffer. Only four of the 23 — Crofton, Elba, Sargent and Verdigre — started the new season with a victory. Ten were shut out.

Others who'll receiver Player of the Week cards include:

Dave Stear, Lincoln East — Senior halfback caught eight passes for 133 yards and one touchdown in Spartans' 40-7 cruise past Omaha Gross.

Collin Braynard, Crete — In the last minute, quarterback scrambled for 20-yard gain after fading back to pass, then threw a nine-yard touchdown pass with seven seconds remaining to give Cardinals 6-0 win at Grand Island Northwest.

Brad Shanahan, Blair — Senior 200-pound tailback rushed 24 times for 121 yards, one touchdown and an extra point in team's 20-0 win over Plattsmouth.

Ron Newton, Lexington — Junior fullback bulled for 170 yards rushing on 22 carries (all on inside runs from tackle to tackle) and a 34-yard touchdown sprint on a fourth down situation as Minutemen defeated Superior, 32-18.

Joe Krajicek, Gretna — In a 24-0 win over Raymond Central, this 5-11, 185-pound senior intercepted two passes, ran for a 28-yard touchdown and led his team in tackles.

Tim White, Oshkosh — The 6-2, 185-pound senior middle linebacker and three-year starter, who runs the 40 in :04.8, was credited with 23 tackles in Oshkosh's 24-8 upset win over Bayard. His seven tackles behind the line of scrimmage helped check Bayard to only 32 yards rushing.

Kerry Weinmaster, North Platte — All-state defensive tackle and middle guard was credited with 16 solo tackles in Bulldogs' impressive 6-6 tie against Lincoln East.

Roger Bilteft, Nelson — Senior end caught three touchdown passes in team's 28-6 win over Red Cloud. Nelson coach Gary DeBoer described his last two scoring grabs as "circus catches."

Ron Hager, York — Junior left cornerback's major responsibility was covering Central City's 6-6 standout end, Jeff Scholl Hager knocked down three passes, including one which looked like a certain touchdown, and finished with three solo tackles and two assists. Scholl was held to one reception as York defeated Central City, 22-7.

Dennis Ehman, Fairmont — Senior kicked a 37-yard field goal as Class D's No. 1 pre-season rated team survived scare from Deshler, 3-0. He was Class D all-state kicker as a junior.

Kirk Greenstreet, Clay Center — Senior linebacker's 13 tackles were instrumental in team's 17-0 win over Meridian.

Alan Temme, Petersburg — In team's loss to Chambers, he had 16 unassisted tackles and five assists at linebacker. He also intercepted a pass and returned it 50 yards for a touchdown.

John Jurgensen, Brule — Junior halfback scored all of his team's points in a 14-12 upset win over Maxwell. He rushed for 129 yards on 20 carries, had touchdown runs of four and 39 yards and was credited with nine tackles at linebacker.

Brian Hamik, Stuart — Junior split end caught an 80-yard touchdown pass in a 6-0 win over Spencer.

Onofrio's Halftime Silence Maintains Tigers' Emotions

Columbia, Mo. (UPI) — Missouri football coach Al Onofrio said Tuesday he couldn't really believe what had happened when he took his team to the dressing room at halftime Monday night with a 20-0 lead over Bear Bryant's supposed powerhouse, Alabama.

"I just sat there and thought 'That's about the best half of football I've ever seen a Missouri team play.' The team was still so high in the dressing room that it was difficult to talk to them," Onofrio recalled, "so I didn't say a word. I just let 'em holler and keep their emotion."

Keep it they did, and went on to the college season's first major upset, 20-7, over the Crimson Tide, and earn Onofrio selection as UPI's coach of the week.

Though it might have looked like it, Onofrio said Missouri had no intention of sitting on the lead in the second half.

"Not at all," he said. "We knew we'd have to be aggressive all the way. It's just that Alabama started throwing all sorts of defensive combinations at us. They gambled some and got away with it."

On Tuesday, he received a most unusual telegram.

"Congratulations — KU students," it read.

"Isn't that something?" said Onofrio. "That's the kind- of thing that really makes you feel good. I'm glad they took the time to do it."

The Kansas University students were reflecting the unusual feelings of pride in Missouri's victory, a pride felt throughout the Big Eight Conference.

Missouri and Kansas are heated rivals throughout the season. But there was little doubt where other Big Eight schools' sympathies were after Onofrio's Tigers stunned Bear Bryant's second-ranked club.

"We felt very strongly about representing our conference," said Onofrio. "Especially since it was on national television. I hope everyone enjoyed it as much as I did. Our players were just so ready to play that football game. They've been mentally set on it from the start of spring practice."

Perhaps that was another reason Onofrio decided against making any half-time speech to his psyched-up troops. There was never any doubt about the outcome throughout the second half, with Missouri controlling the ball almost all the way, and finishing inside the Alabama 10 as time ran out.

Sevigne: Harriers 'Young'

Nebraska cross country coach Frank Sevigne announced a six-meet schedule for his 1975 squad, opening Sept. 27 when Wisconsin invades Lincoln.

The Huskers list four returning lettermen, including North Platte junior Chris Grieb, Keith Whitaker, a junior from Morwell, Mass., Matt Reckmeyer, junior, Mt. Morris, Ill., and sophomore Harold Stelzer, Situate, Mass.

"Although we will have four lettermen on hand, we will again field a young team. We have some tough early meets against Wisconsin and Kansas State, but hopefully that experience will help us in the Big 8 meet come November," Sevigne said.

Other returning runners are junior Gale Wheeler, Albion, and sophomores Dave Johnston, Omaha, Vance Kramer, Lincoln, and Paul McClain, Bellevue.

1975 Schedule

Oct 4 — at Kansas State
Oct. 11 — Missouri
Oct. 18 — Drake
Oct. 25 — South Dakota State
Nov. 1 — Big 8 meet at Colorado

According to sheriff's reports, a member of the Klein hunting party tripped and his .22 caliber rifle accidentally discharged, hitting Klein in the upper right chest and breaking his right arm.

Fresh Troops Needed In Heat

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (UPI) — University of Miami Coach Carl Selmer said Tuesday he intends to use two platoons on both offense and defense in the Hurricanes' first few games to combat the effects of early season heat and humidity.

Selmer, whose team opens its 1975 season in Atlanta Sept. 20 against Georgia Tech, said the Hurricanes have the necessary depth this year to keep sending in fresh troops.

"With the heat we have down here at this time of the year, I believe substitution is the name of the game," Selmer said at the Hurricanes' kickoff luncheon.

"We are definitely able to substitute with this year's ball club," he said. "We have 10 offensive linemen I'm not afraid to send in at any time. We're not afraid of any of our three quarterbacks, fullbacks or I-backs. I'm also proud of the depth we have on defense."

Following Georgia Tech, the Hurricanes host top-ranked Oklahoma Sept. 26, visit Nebraska Oct. 4 and are at home against Colorado Oct. 10 and Houston Oct. 17.

Celebrations Mark Return

From News Wires

Celebration was the order of the day in Columbia as the Missouri Tigers returned after their 20-7 upset victory over Alabama Monday night.

Several thousand fans greeted the team at the airport and Dr. Mel Sheenhan, director of athletics, said, "I was still numb from the game."

But MU ticket manager Mike Ward wasn't numb. He'd had a busy day, trying to track down the goalposts, numbers from the scoreboard, team benches and other mementos fans took from the Missouri stadium.

"The fans reacted like we had played the game here," Ward said. "We sold 2,000 Illinois tickets today alone," he said referring to Missouri's next opponent which it plays at Champaign, Ill., Saturday.

Elsewhere in the Big Eight, teams were preparing for opening games this weekend.

No. 1 ranked Oklahoma began to wind things down for the home opener with the Oregon Ducks. Coach Barry Switzer said the team worked better Tuesday, but is still not completely ready for the Ducks.

"We've still got a lot of teaching to do," he said. "We'll work on some of the things Missouri used against Alabama . . . in addition to some of our basic running plays.

Three other Big Eight schools open the season with a home game. Colorado greets California, Oklahoma State hosts Wichita State and Kansas will entertain Washington State.

Colorado coach Bill Mallory said junior college transfer Tony Reed would start at tailback. Reed beat returning starter Billy Waddy, who led the Buffs in rushing last season.

Mallory said both will see a lot of playing time, as both backs were nearly equal throughout practice sessions.

Oklahoma state also had some personnel changes Tuesday. Kenny Walker, a senior back, was moved to the right halfback slot, replacing sophomore Skip Taylor.

The Cowboys also studied the expected offensive and defensive alignments of Wichita State, although there was no hitting. Coach Jim Stanley said he expected more of the same type of practice this week.

Injuries are the worry of Kansas coach Bud Moore. Junior starting linebacker Terry Beeson suffered a knee injury and missed practice, while freshman Dennis Balhena was ill and may not play against Washington State.

"If we had to play today," Moore said, "we probably would not be ready. We still need a couple of days of preparation."

Kansas State and Iowa State both hit the road for their openers. K State goes to Tulsa, while Iowa State travels to Los Angeles to meet UCLA.

Kansas State coach Ellis Rainsberger said he would start tapering practice Wednesday. "We need to polish things up and mentally get ready to have a supreme effort," Rainsberger said.

"We know how good Tulsa is and what kind of effort we need," the new K State coach said.

Iowa State ran through a two-hour workout in preparation for the UCLA game.

"UCLA is an outstanding offensive team," said coach Earle Bruce. "John Sciarra is a great quarterback and is an expert at running the veer offense."

East Garners Volleyball Win

Papillion — Returning starter Debbie Gade scored 13 points in lifting Lincoln East to a 15-6, 15-4 win over Papillion here Tuesday night.

Gade also served nine straight points in the second game. Another returner to the team this year, Ann Heermann, served a string of six points in the first game and garnered eight points in the match.

All 12 members of the East High team played in the opener for the Lincoln team.

Kiewit Center Building Started

Omaha (AP) — Ground was broken Tuesday at Creighton University for a $4 million physical fitness center for students, faculty, and staff.

Construction is expected to be completed in about a year on the Kiewit Physical Fitness Center, named for Peter Kiewit, chairman of the board of Peter Kiewit Sons' Co., and his wife, Evelyn, in recognition of their donation for the center.

The facility, which will be located between Creighton's two major groups of dormitories, will include a swimming pool, courts for handball, tennis and basketball, and exercise rooms.

Hole-In-One

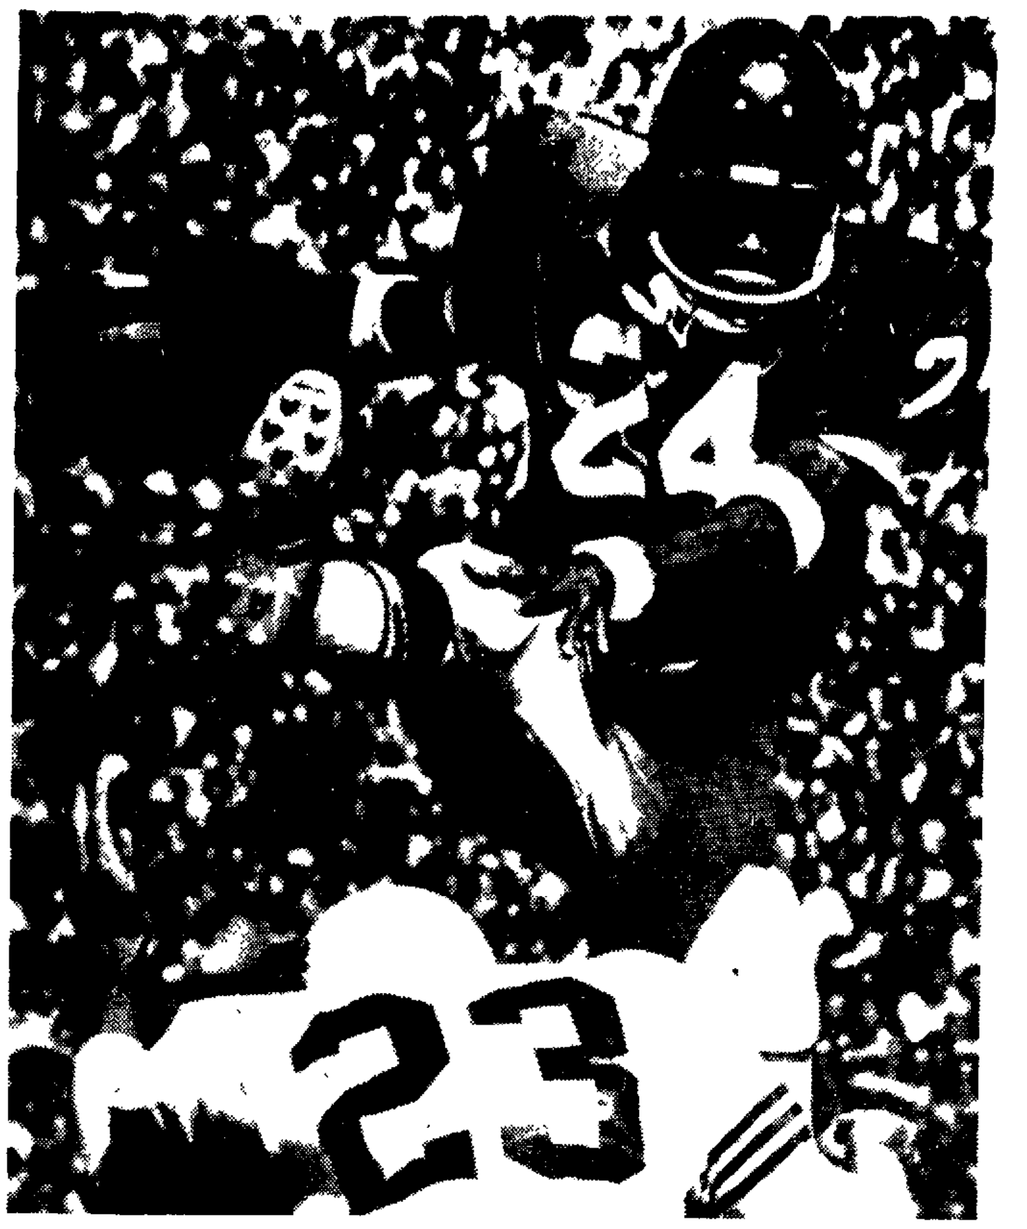
Don Palmer aced the third hole at Holmes Park Golf Course Tuesday to record his first hole-in-one. Palmer knocked a five-iron into the cup on the 153-yard hole.

Palmer, who manages the Jim Ager Memorial Junior Golf Course, was playing with Wendell Milligan.

Soccer Meeting Rescheduled

A meeting to determine interest in a youth soccer program scheduled for Saturday morning at the southeast Lincoln Y has been rescheduled to Sept. 20.

The gathering will help decide whether plans for a youth soccer league of 7-9-year-olds have enough support to be implemented. Parents should call the south family branch for further information.



Oklahoma's Joe Washington eyeing best year ever.

Washington Setting New Goals For '75

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Elusive Joe Washington has set two major goals for himself this football season.

The No. 1 runner in the backfield of the top-ranked Oklahoma Sooners wants to rush for 1500 yards and score at least two touchdowns a game.

"I like to think this is going to be my best year," said Washington, who collected 1321 yards and made 14 touchdowns during Oklahoma's unbeaten 1974 campaign. "If I can run for 1500 yards and get two TDs a game, I think that would satisfy me."

Sooner Coach Barry Switzer, who has run out of superlatives in describing Washington, said his big star is "going to have to have a fast start" to have a shot at the coveted Heisman Trophy.

"And the team must have a fast start," Switzer said. "Remember, because of our probation the last two years, there has been no television exposure for Washington."

Switzer, who drolls every time somebody mentions Houdini Joe, will help Washington's cause by allowing him to play as much as he wants to play and carry the ball as much as he wants to carry it.

"Joe knows how to take the ball and run," Switzer said. "He did that as a freshman. He had us whooping and hollering then. A lot of backs gain 100 yards a game but there aren't many who gain six yards every time they touch the ball. Joe does."

Still, Washington, modest and quiet-mannered, isn't certain he wants to try to hog the Sooners' offensive spotlight.

"I'd like to leave how much I play and how much I run up to Coach Switzer," Washington said. "I like playing. Any chance I get to play I'm going to play."

Washington, probably the nation's finest running back and a tremendous blocker, was third in last year's Heisman Trophy voting and said he "didn't deserve to win the trophy. My year could have been better last season."

So far during practice, nobody has laid a hand on Joe. He has been held out of scrimmage. Washington doesn't like it but said, "I've learned to accept things like that. No, nobody says anything about me not scrimmaging. We're a close team. They understand."

Washington admitted he tries to sneak into scrimmage on occasions but has been unsuccessful.

"I'd like to get in a few plays," he explained.

Anderson Warns Reds

SAN DIEGO (AP) — It seemed strange that the newly crowned champions of the National League's West Division should be closeted behind closed doors by their manager.

But that's what Cincinnati Reds Manager Sparky Anderson did Monday night, and his message was quick an simple—keep winning.

The early clinching of the divisional crown leaves the Reds with almost a month until the start of the National League playoffs.

"We've got to keep trying to win," Anderson said. "I'd like to see us win 108 games."

Franchise Group Denies Switches

NEW YORK (AP) — Members of major league baseball's franchise committee denied a report Tuesday that the group would recommend later this month the shift of the San Francisco Giants to Toronto and the Minnesota Twins to Seattle.

"That is an erroneous story," said M. Donald Grant of the New York Mets, chairman of the committee. "I haven't heard anything like that."

Bud Selig, president of the Milwaukee Brewers and a member of the six-man committee, termed the report "ridiculous" and "absolutely wrong."

The Toronto Star reported in its Tuesday editions that the committee would submit its solution to the continuing franchise problem at its next meeting in October.

Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn also denied the report and said the club owners would meet in Kansas City Sept. 24 to hear reports from the expansion and player relations committees.

"I flatly deny this story," Kuhn said. "The franchise committee has not made any recommendations and there's no guarantee it will happen in Kansas City."

The committee, which includes Grant, Selig, Ewing Kauffman of the Kansas City Royals and John McHale of the Montreal Expos as well as Presidents Lee MacPhail of the American League and Chub Feeney of the National League, was established at baseball's winter meetings to deal with the problems of expansion and possible transfers of clubs.

"We have been thinking of dozens of approaches," said Grant. "But that Toronto story cannot be confirmed."

Primary on the franchise committee's agenda is a solution to the overcrowded baseball situation in the San Francisco-Oakland area where the Giants and A's both have had attendance problems. It seems certain that one of the teams will move. Horace Stoneham, owner of the Giants, says it won't be his.

"We're not ready to sell," said Stoneham, "and if and when we are, the Giants will be sold in place. They are not going to leave San Francisco."

However, the San Francisco Examiner quoted Stoneham as saying: "The Giants will be sold and—that's right—there will be no stipulation that they can't be moved.

"If the new owners want to move, that's not my concern. It won't have to go to a vote of the stockholders."

Oakland owner Charles O. Finley has expressed interest in leaving the Bay Area with one report having the A's moving to Chicago, replacing the White Sox, who would be sold to Seattle interests.

Calvin Griffith, president of the Twins, said the franchise committee has not been in touch with the Minnesota club.

"There's no question they'll be meeting on this," said Griffith, "but I don't know where they get anything on Minnesota going to Seattle."

A continuing problem complicating the issue is the existence of long-term stadium leases in the cities involved. But the Twins moved to Bloomington, Minn. from Washington in 1960 and their 15-year stadium contract expires after this season, freeing the club for a move.

Seattle has threatened a lawsuit because of the American League's move out of that city in 1970. The franchise committee also has been seeking teams for Washington, and New Orleans as well as Toronto.

The Star report that two Toronto groups, one headed by Lorne W. Duguid and the other by R. Howard Webster, would be merged to purchase the Giants and move the team. According to the newspaper, the Toronto group also has talked with five other major league teams—the Atlanta Braves of the NL, and Minnesota, Baltimore, the White Sox and Cleveland Indians in the AL.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆ By SIDNEY OMARR ☆

Forecast for Wednesday

The Cancer native is "ruled" by the Moon. These people show concern for others, a quiet intelligence and reserved modesty of manner. The jewel of Cancer is moonstone, the color green and the active day Monday.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): High-frequency cycle ahead. You feel you are in a position of power. Many pressures removed. Basic judgment accurate. You know what to do and the right time to do it. You feel more secure at home. Bright contact with Capricorn.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Get an early start. Display energy, enthusiasm. One in a position to make life more comfortable is taking note. Personal appeal lures opposite sex. Offer ideas in a way which reflects individuality. Settle differences with Libra.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Get away, inasmuch as a feeling of restriction or confinement tends to dominate. Virgo could play an active role. One who care shies from expressing feelings. Be gregarious. Let others see you at your flirtatious best.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Accent is on how you attain basic goal, career and ambition. Broaden horizons. Current opportunity greater than might be readily discernible. A time to go forward. Let go of things which stand in the way of greater happiness. Contact a Leo.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your mind may be quite inspired and keen, if you let emotional warmth and initiative dynamize it. Beware of a glamorous scheme in terms of money and investments. Don't follow any social line which would control your ideals and endeavors.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Good fortune must be attracted, as a needle to the magnet. Don't sit back and wait for it to fall in your lap. Seize every chance, big or little, as it shows up. Pay a visit to an under-the-weather friend. Social life is lively.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Stubbornness may be regretted later. Do the best you can rather than yearn for the impossible. Say or do nothing which could be considered antagonistic. A calm attitude is essential to mental peace and physical well being. Talk things over with Scorpio.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Work on something of practical value. Gain an unexpected advantage by using a skill which has been neglected. Ask for help if you need it, rather than carry an extra burden alone. More gained through persuasive methods than aggressive action.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Give attention to financial security. Take steps required to make it more certain. Apply enthusiasm to greater accomplishments in your work. What you say or do now can have a vital effect in a meaningful relationship. Think of love.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Follow procedures which have proved effective. Diplomacy needed for harmony at home. Self-control essential to overcome desire to be extravagant. Devote time to business correspondence. Concentrate on a hobby which provides relaxation.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be content with status quo, socially or emotionally. Don't attempt to play prima donna or dictator. Tantrums or caprice would not be tolerated. Avoid changing jobs for something seemingly more profitable. A hurried decision brings regret.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You may not feel as free as a soaring eagle — but you will be admired for efforts. Don't expect free-and-easy access. There are restrictions. Yet, an older person is willing to provide you with necessary material. Gemini has useful answers.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY it's up to you whether your year ahead is to be a bed of roses or one containing more thorns. Put your shoulder to the wheel if this is what is necessary to propel you to a desireable goal — or be sufficiently sensible to relinquish an irksome responsibility.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
